(2) qualifications and maximum hours of service of employees of, and standards of equipment of, a motor private carrier, when needed to promote safety of operation.

(c) The Secretary may prescribe requirements for the comfort of passengers, qualifications and maximum hours of service of operators, and safety of operation and equipment of a motor carrier of migrant workers. The requirements only apply to a carrier transporting a migrant worker—

(1) at least 75 miles; and

(2) across the boundary of a State, territory, or possession of the United States.

(d) Before prescribing or revising any requirement under this section, the Secretary shall consider the costs and benefits of the requirement.

§ 31503. Research, investigation, and testing

(a) The Secretary of Transportation may investigate and report on the need for regulation by the United States Government of sizes, weight, and combinations of motor vehicles and qualifications and maximum hours of service of employees of a motor carrier subject to subchapter II of chapter 105 of this title and a motor private carrier. The Secretary shall use the services of each department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government and each organization of motor carriers having special knowledge of a matter being investigated.

(b) In carrying out this chapter, the Secretary may use the services of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government having special knowledge about safety, to conduct scientific and technical research, investigation, and testing when necessary to promote safety of operation and equipment of motor vehicles. The Secretary may reimburse the department, agency, or instrumentality for the services provided.

§ 31504. Identification of motor vehicles

(a) The Secretary of Transportation may—

(1) issue and require the display of an identification plate on a motor vehicle used in transportation provided by a motor private carrier and a motor carrier of migrant workers subject to section 31502(c) of this title, except a motor contract carrier; and

(2) require each of those motor private carriers and motor carriers of migrant workers to pay the reasonable cost of the plate.

(b) A motor private carrier or a motor carrier of migrant workers may use an identification plate only as authorized by the Secretary.

PART C—INFORMATION, STANDARDS, AND REQUIREMENTS

CHAPTER 321—GENERAL

Sec.
32101. Definitions.

In this part (except chapter 329)—

(1) "bumper standard" means a minimum performance standard that substantially reduces—

(A) the damage to the front or rear end of a passenger motor vehicle from a low-speed collision (including a collision with a fixed barrier) or from towing the vehicle; or

(B) the cost of repairing the damage.

(2) "insurer" means a person in the business of issuing, or reinsuring any part of, a passenger motor vehicle insurance policy.

(3) "interstate commerce" means commerce between a place in a State and—

(A) a place in another State; or

(B) another place in the same State through another State.

(4) "make", when describing a passenger motor vehicle, means the trade name of the manufacturer of the vehicle.

(5) "manufacturer" means a person—

(A) manufacturing or assembling passenger motor vehicles or passenger motor vehicle equipment; or

(B) importing motor vehicles or motor vehicle equipment for resale.

(6) "model", when describing a passenger motor vehicle, means a category of passenger motor vehicles based on the size, style, and type of a make of vehicle.

(7) "motor vehicle" means a vehicle driven or drawn by mechanical power and manufactured primarily for use on public streets, roads, and highways, but does not include a vehicle operated only on a rail line.

(8) "motor vehicle accident" means an accident resulting from the maintenance or operation of a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment.

(9) "multipurpose passenger vehicle" means a passenger motor vehicle constructed on a truck chassis or with special features for occasional off-road operation.

(10) "passenger motor vehicle" means a motor vehicle designed to carry not more than 12 individuals, but does not include—

(A) a motorcycle; or

(B) a truck not designed primarily to carry its operator or passengers.

(11) "passenger motor vehicle equipment" means—

(A) a system, part, or component of a passenger motor vehicle as originally made;

(B) a similar part or component made or sold for replacement or improvement of a system, part, or component, or as an accessory or addition to a passenger motor vehicle; or

(C) a device made or sold for use in towing a passenger motor vehicle.

(12) "State" means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Northern Mariana Islands, Guam, American Samoa, and the Virgin Islands.

(13) "United States district court" means a district court of the United States, a United States court for Guam, the Virgin Islands, and American Samoa, and the district court for the Northern Mariana Islands.

CHAPTER 323—CONSUMER INFORMATION

Sec.
32301. Definitions.
32302. Passenger motor vehicle information.
32303. Insurance information.
32304. Information and assistance from other agencies.
32305. Personnel.
32306. Investigative powers.
32307. Enforcement and penalties.

§ 32301. Definitions

In this chapter—

(1) "crashworthiness" means the protection a passenger motor vehicle gives its passengers against personal injury or death from a motor vehicle accident.

(2) "damage susceptibility" means the susceptibility of a passenger motor vehicle t damage in a motor vehicle accident.

§ 32302. Passenger motor vehicle information

(a) The Secretary of Transportation shal maintain a program for developing the following information on passenger motor vehicles:

(1) crashworthiness.

(2) damage susceptibility.

(3) the degree of difficulty of diagnost and repair of damage to, or failure of, mechanical and electrical systems.

(4) vehicle operating costs dependent o the characteristics referred to in clauses (1)

(3) of this subsection, including insurance information obtained under section 32303 of this title.

(b) To assist a consumer in buying a passenger motor vehicle, the Secretary shall distribute to the public information developed under subsection (a) of this section. The information shall be in a simple and understandable form that allows comparison of the characteristics referred to in subsection (a)(1)–(3) of this section among the makes and models of passenger motor vehicles. The Secretary may require passenger motor vehicle dealers to distribute the information to prospective buyers.

(c) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations that require dealers to distribute to prospective buyers information the Secretary develops and provides to the dealers that compares insurance costs for different makes and models of passenger motor vehicles based on crashworthiness and damage susceptibility.

§ 32303. Insurance information

(a)(1) In carrying out this chapter, the Secretary of Transportation may require an insurer, or a designated agent of the insurer, to make reports and provide the Secretary with information. The reports and information may include accident claim information by make, model, and model year of passenger motor vehicle about the kind and extent of—

(A) physical damage and repair costs; and

(B) personal injury.

(2) In deciding which reports and information are to be provided under this subsection, the Secretary shall—

(A) consider the cost of preparing and providing the reports and information;

(B) consider the extent to which the reports and information will contribute to carrying out this chapter; and

(C) consult with State authorities and public and private agencies the Secretary considers appropriate.

(3) To the extent possible, the Secretary shall obtain reports and information under this subsection on a voluntary basis.

(b) When requested by the Secretary, an insurer shall give the Secretary information—

(1) about the extent to which the insurance premiums charged by the insurer are affected by crashworthiness, damage susceptibility, and the cost of repair and personal injury, for each make and model of passenger motor vehicle; and

(2) available to the insurer about the effect of crashworthiness, damage susceptibility, and the cost of repair and personal injury for each make and model of passenger motor vehicle on the risk incurred by the insurer in insuring that make and model.

(c) In distributing information received under this section, the Secretary may disclose identifying information about a person that may be an insured, a claimant, a passenger, an owner, a witness, or an individual involved in a motor vehicle accident, only with the consent of the person.

§ 32304. Information and assistance from other agencies

(a) The Secretary of Transportation may request information necessary to carry out this chapter from a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government. The head of the department, agency, or instrumentality shall provide the information.

(b) The head of a department, agency, or instrumentality may detail, on a reimbursable basis, personnel to assist the Secretary in carrying out this chapter.

§ 32305. Personnel

(a) In carrying out this chapter, the Secretary of Transportation may—

(1) appoint and fix the pay of employees without regard to the provisions of title 5 governing appointment in the competitive service and chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of title 5; and

(2) make contracts with persons for research and preparation of reports.

(b) A member of an advisory committee appointed under section 325 of this title to carry out this chapter is a special United States Government employee under chapter 11 of title 18.

§ 32306. Investigative powers

(a) In carrying out this chapter, the Secretary of Transportation may—

(1) inspect and copy records of any person at reasonable times;

(2) order a person to file written reports or answers to specific questions, including reports or answers under oath; and

(3) conduct proceedings, administer oaths, take testimony, and require (by subpena or otherwise) the appearance and testimony of witnesses and the production of records the Secretary considers advisable.

(b) A witness summoned under subsection (a) of this section is entitled to the same fee and mileage the witness would have been paid in a court of the United States.

(c) A civil action to enforce a subpena or order of the Secretary under subsection (a) of this section may be brought in the United States district court for the judicial district in which the proceeding by the Secretary is conducted. The court may punish a refusal to obey an order of the court to comply with a subpena or order of the Secretary as a contempt of court.

(d) Information obtained by the Secretary under this section related to a confidential matter referred to in section 1905 of title 18 may be disclosed only to another officer or employee of the United States Government for use in carrying out this chapter. This subsection does not authorize information to be withheld from a committee of Congress authorized to have the information.

§ 32307. Enforcement and penalties

(a) A person may not—

(1) fail to provide the Secretary of Transportation with information requested by the Secretary in carrying out this chapter; or

(2) fail to comply with applicable regulations prescribed by the Secretary in carrying out this chapter.

(b)(1) A person that violates subsection (a) of this section is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $1,000 for each violation. Each failure to provide information or comply with a regulation in violation of subsection (a) is a separate violation. A person is liable for a penalty under this paragraph of not more than $400,000 for a related series of violations.

(2) The Secretary may compromise a civil penalty. In deciding on a penalty or compromise, the Secretary shall consider the size of the person's business and the gravity of the violation. A penalty or compromise may be deducted from amounts owed the person by the Government.

(c)(1) The Attorney General may bring a civil action to enjoin a violation of subsection (a) of this section.

(2) When practicable, the Secretary shall—

(A) notify a person against whom an action under this subsection is planned;

(B) give the person an opportunity to present that person's views; and

(C) give the person a reasonable opportunity to comply.

(3) The failure of the Secretary to comply with paragraph (2) of this subsection does not prevent a court from granting appropriate relief.

(d) A civil action under this section may be brought in the United States district court for the judicial district in which the violation occurred or the defendant is found, resides, or does business. Process in the action may be served in any other judicial district in which the defendant resides or is found. A subpena for a witness in the action may be served in any judicial district.

CHAPTER 325—BUMPER STANDARDS

32501. Purpose.
32502. Bumper standards.
32503. Judicial review of bumper standards.
32504. Certificate of compliance.
32505. Information and compliance requirements.
32506. Prohibited acts.
32507. Enforcement and penalties.
32508. Civil action by an owner of a passenger motor vehicle.
32509. Information and assistance from other agencies.
32510. Annual report.
32511. Relationship to other motor vehicle standards.

§ 32501. Purpose

The purpose of this chapter is to reduce economic loss resulting from damage to passenger motor vehicles involved in motor vehicle accidents by providing for the maintenance and enforcement of bumper standards.

§ 32502. Bumper standards

(a) The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe bumper standards for passenger motor vehicles and may prescribe bumper standards for passenger motor vehicle equipment manufactured in, or imported into, the United States. A standard does not apply to a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment—

(1) intended only for export;

(2) labeled for export on the vehicle or equipment and the outside of any container of the vehicle or equipment; and

(3) exported.

(b) A standard under this section—

(1) may not conflict with a motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under chapter 301 of this title;

(2) may not specify a dollar amount for the cost of repairing damage to a passenger motor vehicle; and

(3) to the greatest practicable extent, may not preclude the attachment of a detachable hitch.

(c) For good cause, the Secretary may exempt from any part of a standard—

(1) a multipurpose passenger vehicle; or

(2) a make, model, or class of a passenger motor vehicle manufactured for a special use, if the standard would interfere unreasonably with the special use of the vehicle.

(d) When prescribing a standard under this section, the Secretary shall design the standard to obtain the maximum feasible reduction of costs to the public, considering—

(1) the costs and benefits of carrying out the standard;

(2) the effect of the standard on insurance costs and legal fees and costs;

(3) savings in consumer time and inconvenience; and

(4) health and safety, including emission standards.

(e) Section 553 of title 5 applies to a standard prescribed under this section. However, the Secretary shall give an interested person an opportunity to make oral and written presentations of information, views, and arguments. A transcript of each oral presentation shall be kept. Under conditions prescribed by the Secretary, the Secretary may conduct a hearing to resolve an issue of fact material to a standard.

(f) The Secretary shall prescribe an effective date for a standard under this section. That date may not be earlier than the date the standard is prescribed nor later than 18 months after the date the standard is prescribed. However, the Secretary may prescribe a later date when the Secretary submits to Congress and publishes the reasons for the later date. A standard only applies to a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment manufactured on or after the effective date.

(g) The Secretary shall conduct research necessary to carry out this chapter.

§ 32503. Judicial review of bumper standards

(a) A person that may be adversely affected by a standard prescribed under section 32502 of this title may apply for review of the standard by filing a petition for review in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit or in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the person resides or has its principal place of business. The petition must be filed not later than 59 days after the standard is prescribed.

(b) The clerk of the court shall send immediately a copy of the petition to the Secretary of Transportation. The Secretary shall file with the court a record of the proceeding in which the standard was prescribed.

(c)(1) On request of the petitioner, the court may order the Secretary to receive additional evidence and evidence in rebuttal if the court is satisfied the additional evidence is material and there were reasonable grounds for not presenting the evidence in the proceeding before the Secretary.

(2) The Secretary may change findings of fact or make new findings because of the additional evidence presented. The Secretary shall file a changed or new finding, a recommendation to change or set aside a standard, and the additional evidence with the court.

(d) A judgment of a court under this section may be reviewed only by the Supreme Court under section 1254 of title 28. A remedy under this section is in addition to any other remedies provided by law.

§ 32504. Certificate of compliance

Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation, a manufacturer or distributor of a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment subject to a standard prescribed under section 32502 this title shall give the distributor or dealer at the time of delivery a certificate that the vehicle or equipment complies with the standard.

§ 32505. Information and compliance requirements

(a)(1) To enable the Secretary of Transportation to decide whether a manufacturer of passenger motor vehicles or passenger motor vehicle equipment is complying with this chapter and standards prescribed under this chapter, the Secretary may require the manufacturer to—

(A) keep records;

(B) make reports;

(C) provide items and information, including vehicles and equipment for testing at a negotiated price not more than the manufacturer's cost; and

(D) allow an officer or employee designated by the Secretary to inspect vehicles and relevant records of the manufacturer.

(2) To enforce this chapter, an officer or employee designated by the Secretary, on presenting appropriate credentials and a written notice to the owner, operator, or agent in charge, may inspect a facility in which passenger motor vehicles or passenger motor vehicle equipment is manufactured, held for introduction in interstate commerce, or held for sale after introduction in interstate commerce. An inspection shall be conducted at a reasonable time, in a reasonable way, and with reasonable promptness.

(b)(1) In carrying out this chapter, the Secretary may—

(A) inspect and copy records of any person at reasonable times;

(B) order a person to file written reports or answers to specific questions, including reports or answers under oath; and

(C) conduct proceedings, administer oaths, take testimony, and require (by subpena or otherwise) the appearance and testimony of witnesses and the production of records the Secretary considers advisable.

(2) A witness summoned under this subsection is entitled to the same fee and mileage the witness would have been paid in a court of the United States.

(3) A civil action to enforce a subpena or order of the Secretary under this subsection may be brought in the United States district court for the judicial district in which the proceeding by the Secretary was conducted. The court may punish a refusal to obey an order of the court to comply with a subpena or order of the Secretary as a contempt of court.

(c)(1) Information obtained by the Secretary under this chapter related to a confidential matter referred to in section 1905 of title 18 may be disclosed only—

(A) to another officer or employee of the United States Government for use in carrying out this chapter; or

(B) in a proceeding under this chapter.

(2) This subsection does not authorize information to be withheld from a committee of Congress authorized to have the information.

(3) Subject to paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Secretary, on request, shall make available to the public at cost information the Secretary submits or receives in carrying out this chapter.

§ 32506. Prohibited acts

(a) Except as provided in this section, a person may not—

(1) manufacture for sale, sell, offer for sale, introduce or deliver for introduction in interstate commerce, or import into the United States, a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment manufactured on or after the date an applicable standard under section 32502 of this title takes effect, unless it conforms to the standard;

(2) fail to comply with an applicable regulation prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation under this chapter;

(3) fail to keep records, refuse access to or copying of records, fail to make reports or provide items or information, or fail or refuse to allow entry or inspection, as required by this chapter or a regulation prescribed under this chapter; or

(4) fail to provide the certificate required by section 32504 of this title, or provide a certificate that the person knows, or in the exercise of reasonable care has reason to know, is false or misleading in a material respect.

(b) Subsection (a)(1) of this section does not apply to—

(1) the sale, offer for sale, or introduction or delivery for introduction in interstate commerce of a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment after the first purchase of the vehicle or equipment in good faith other than for resale (but this clause does not prohibit a standard from requiring that a vehicle or equipment be manufactured to comply with the standard over a specified period of operation or use); or

(2) a person—

(A) establishing that the person had no reason to know, by exercising reasonable care, that the vehicle or equipment does not comply with the standard; or

(B) holding, without knowing about a noncompliance and before that first purchase, a certificate issued under section 32504 of this title stating that the vehicle or equipment complies with the standard.

(c)(1) The Secretaries of Transportation and the Treasury may prescribe joint regulations authorizing a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment not complying with a standard prescribed under section 32502 of this title to be imported into the United States subject to conditions (including providing a bond) the Secretaries consider appropriate to ensure that the vehicle or equipment will—

(A) comply, after importation, with the standards prescribed under section 32502 of this title;

(B) be exported; or

(C) be abandoned to the United States Government.

(2) The Secretaries may prescribe joint regulations that allow a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment to be imported into the United States after the first purchase in good faith other than for resale.

(d) Compliance with a standard under this chapter does not exempt a person from liability provided by law.

§ 32507. Enforcement and penalties

(a)(1) A person that violates section 32506(a) of this title is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $1,000 for each violation. A separate violation occurs for each passenger motor vehicle or item of passenger motor vehicle equipment involved in a violation of section 32506(a)(1) or (4) of this title—

(A) that does not comply with a standard prescribed under section 32502 of this title; or

(B) for which a certificate is not provided, or for which a false or misleading certificate is provided, under section 32504 of this title.

(2) A person is liable for a civil penalty under this subsection of not more than $800,000 for a related series of violations.

(3) The Secretary of Transportation shall impose a civil penalty under this subsection. The Attorney General or the Secretary, with the concurrence of the Attorney General, shall bring a civil action to collect the penalty.

(b) A person knowingly and willfully violating section 32506(a)(1) of this title after receiving a notice of noncompliance from the Secretary shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than one year, or both. If the person is a corporation, the penalties of this subsection also apply to a director, officer, or individual agent of the corporation who, with knowledge of the Secretary's notice, knowingly and willfully authorizes, orders, or performs an act that is any part of the violation.

(c)(1) The Secretary or the Attorney General may bring a civil action to enjoin a violation of this chapter or the sale, offer for sale, introduction or delivery for introduction in interstate commerce, or importation into the United States, of a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment that is found, before the first purchase in good faith other than for resale, not to comply with a standard prescribed under section 32502 of this title.

(2) When practicable, the Secretary shall—

(A) notify a person against whom an action under this subsection is planned;

(B) give the person an opportunity to present that person's views; and

(C) except for a knowing and willful violation, give the person a reasonable opportunity to comply.

(3) The failure of the Secretary to comply with paragraph (2) of this subsection does not prevent a court from granting appropriate relief.

(d) In a trial for criminal contempt for violating an injunction or restraining order issued under subsection (c) of this section, the violation of which is also a violation of this chapter, the defendant may demand a jury trial. The defendant shall be tried as provided in rule 42(b) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (18 App. U.S.C.).

(e) A civil action under subsection (a) or (c) of this section may be brought in the United States district court for the judicial district in which the violation occurred or the defendant is found, resides, or does business. Process in the action may be served in any other judicial district in which the defendant resides or is found. A subpoena for a witness in the action may be served in any judicial district.

When an owner of a passenger motor vehicle sustains damages as a result of a motor vehicle accident because the vehicle did not comply with a standard prescribed under section 32502 of this title, the owner may bring a civil action against the manufacturer to recover the damages. The action may be brought in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia or in the district court for the judicial district in which the owner resides. The action must be brought not later than 3 years after the date of the accident. The court shall award costs and a reasonable attorney's fee to the owner when a judgment is entered for the owner.

§ 32509. Information and assistance from other agencies

(a) The Secretary of Transportation may request information necessary to carry out this chapter from a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government. The head of the department, agency, or instrumentality shall provide the information.

(b) The head of a department, agency, or instrumentality may detail, on a reimbursable basis, personnel to assist the Secretary in carrying out this chapter.

§ 32510. Annual report

Not later than March 31 of each year, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit to Congress and the President a report on the progress in carrying out section 32501 of this title. The report shall include—

(1) a statement of the cost savings resulting from carrying out this chapter; and

(2) recommendations for legislative or other action the Secretary decides may be appropriate.

§ 32511. Relationship to other motor vehicle standards

(a) Except as provided in this section, a State or a political subdivision of a State may prescribe or enforce a bumper standard for a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment only if the standard is identical to a standard prescribed under section 32502 of this title.

(b) This chapter and chapter 301 of this title do not affect the authority of a State to enforce a bumper standard about an aspect of performance of a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment not covered by a standard prescribed under section 32502 of this title if the State bumper standard—

(1) does not conflict with a standard prescribed under chapter 301 of this title; and

(2) was in effect or prescribed by the State on October 20, 1972.

(c) The United States Government, a State, or a political subdivision of a State may prescribe a bumper standard for a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment obtained for its own use that imposes additional or higher standards of performance than a standard prescribed under section 32502 of this title.

CHAPTER 327—ODOMETERS

32708. Confidentiality of information.
32709. Enforcement and penalties.
32710. Action by a private person.
32711. Relationship to State law.

§ 32701. Findings and purposes

(a) Congress finds that—

(1) buyers of motor vehicles rely heavily on the odometer reading as an index of the condition and value of a vehicle;

(2) buyers are entitled to rely on the odometer reading as an accurate indication of the mileage of the vehicle;

(3) an accurate indication of the mileage assists a buyer in deciding on the safety and reliability of the vehicle; and

(4) motor vehicles move in, or affect, interstate and foreign commerce.

(b) The purposes of this chapter are—

(1) to prohibit tampering with motor vehicle odometers; and

(2) to provide safeguards to protect purchasers in the sale of motor vehicles with altered or reset odometers.

In this chapter—

(1) "auction company" means a person taking possession of a motor vehicle owned by another to sell at an auction.

(2) "dealer" means a person that sold at least 5 motor vehicles during the prior 12 months to buyers that in good faith bought the vehicles other than for resale.

(3) "distributor" means a person that sold at least 5 motor vehicles during the prior 12 months for resale.

(4) "leased motor vehicle" means a motor vehicle leased to a person for at least 4 months by a lessor that leased at least 5 vehicles during the prior 12 months.

(5) "odometer" means an instrument for measuring and recording the distance a motor vehicle is driven, but does not include an auxiliary instrument designed to be reset by the operator of the vehicle to record mileage of a trip.

(6) "repair" and "replace" mean to restore to a sound working condition by replacing any part of an odometer or by correcting any inoperative part of an odometer.

(7) "title" means the certificate of title or other document issued by the State indicating ownership.

(8) "transfer" means to change ownership by sale, gift, or other means.

§ 32703. Preventing tampering

A person may not—

(1) advertise for sale, sell, use, install, or have installed, a device that makes an odometer of a motor vehicle register a mileage different from the mileage the vehicle was driven, as registered by the odometer within the designed tolerance of the manufacturer of the odometer;

(2) disconnect, reset, change, or have disconnected, reset, or changed, an odometer of a motor vehicle intending to change the mileage registered by the odometer;

(3) with intent to defraud, operate a motor vehicle on a public street, road, or highway if the person knows that the odometer of the vehicle is disconnected or not operating; or

(4) conspire to violate this section or section 32704 or 32705 of this title.

§ 32704. Repair or replacement

(a) A person may service, repair, or replace an odometer of a motor vehicle if the mileage registered by the odometer remains the same as before the service, repair, or replacement. If the mileage cannot remain the same—

(1) the person shall adjust the odometer to read zero; and

(2) the owner of the vehicle or agent of the owner shall attach a written notice to the left door frame of the vehicle specifying the mileage before the service, repair, or replacement and the date of the service, repair, or replacement.

(b) A person may not, with intent to defraud, remove or change a notice attached to a motor vehicle as required by this section.

§ 32705. Disclosure requirements on transfer of vehicle

(A) of the cumulative mileage registered by the odometer; or

(B) that the mileage is unknown if the transferor knows that the mileage registered by the odometer is incorrect.

(2) A person making a written disclosure required by a regulation prescribed under paragraph (1) of this subsection may not make a false statement in the disclosure.

(3) A person acquiring a motor vehicle for resale may accept a disclosure under this section only if it is complete.

(4) The regulations prescribed by the Secretary shall provide the way in which information is disclosed and retained under this section.

(b)(1) A motor vehicle the ownership of which is transferred may not be licensed for use in a State unless the transferee, in submitting an application to a State for the title on which the license will be issued, includes with the application the transferor's title and, if that title contains the space referred to in paragraph (3)(A)(iii) of this subsection, a statement, signed and dated by the transferor, of the mileage disclosure required under subsection (a) of this section. This paragraph does not apply to a transfer of ownership of a motor vehicle that has not been licensed before the transfer.

(2)(A) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, if the title to a motor vehicle issued to a transferor by a State is in the possession of a lienholder when the transferor transfers ownership of the vehicle, the transferor may use a written power of attorney (if allowed by State law) in making the mileage disclosure required under subsection (a) of this section. Regulations prescribed under this paragraph shall—

(i) prescribe the form of the power of attorney;

(ii) provide that the form be printed by means of a secure printing process (or other secure process);

(iii) provide that the State issue the form to the transferee;

(iv) provide that the person exercising the power of attorney retain a copy and submit the original to the State;

(v) ensure that the mileage at the time of transfer be disclosed on the power of attorney document;

(vi) ensure that the mileage be restated exactly by the person exercising the power of attorney in the space referred to in paragraph (3)(A)(iii) of this subsection; and

(vii) provide other conditions the Secretary considers appropriate.

(B) Section 32709(a) and (b) applies to a person granting or granted a power of attorney under this paragraph.

(3)(A) A motor vehicle the ownership of which is transferred may be licensed for use in a State only if the title issued by the State to the transferee—

(i) is produced by means of a secure printing process (or other secure process);

(ii) indicates the mileage disclosure required to be made under subsection (a) of this section; and

(iii) contains a space for the transferee to disclose the mileage at the time of a future transfer and to sign and date the disclosure.

(B) Subparagraph (A) of this paragraph does not require a State to verify, or preclude a State from verifying, the mileage information contained in the title.

(c)(1) For a leased vehicle, the regulations prescribed under subsection (a) of this section shall require written disclosure about mileage to be made by the lessee to the lessor when the lessor transfers ownership of the leased vehicle.

(2) Under those regulations, the lessor shall provide written notice to the lessee of—

(A) the mileage disclosure requirements of subsection (a) of this section; and

(B) the penalties for failure to comply with those requirements.

(3) The lessor shall retain the disclosures made by a lessee under paragraph (1) of this subsection for at least 4 years following the date the lessor transfers the vehicle.

(4) If the lessor transfers ownership of a leased vehicle without obtaining possession of the vehicle, the lessor, in making the disclosure required by subsection (a) of this section, may indicate on the title the mileage disclosed by the lessee under paragraph (1) of this subsection unless the lessor has reason to believe that the disclosure by the lessee does not reflect the actual mileage of the vehicle.

(d) The requirements of subsections (b) and (c)(1) of this section on the disclosure of motor vehicle mileage when motor vehicles are transferred or leased apply in a State unless the State has in effect alternate motor vehicle mileage disclosure requirements approved by the Secretary. The Secretary shall approve alternate motor vehicle mileage disclosure requirements submitted by a State unless the Secretary decides that the requirements are not consistent with the purpose of the disclosure required by subsection (b) or (c), as the case may be.

(e) If a motor vehicle is sold at an auction, the auction company conducting the auction shall maintain the following records for at least 4 years after the date of the sale:

(1) the name of the most recent owner of the motor vehicle (except the auction company) and the name of the buyer of the motor vehicle.

(2) the vehicle identification number required under chapter 301 or 331 of this title.

(3) the odometer reading on the date the auction company took possession of the motor vehicle.

(f)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, subsections (b)-(e) of this section apply to the transfer of a motor vehicle after April 28, 1989.

(2) If a State requests, the Secretary shall assist the State in revising its laws to comply with subsection (b) of this section. If a State requires time beyond April 28, 1989, to revise its laws to achieve compliance, the Secretary, on request of the State, may grant additional time that the Secretary considers reasonable by publishing a notice in the Federal Register. The notice shall include the reasons for granting the additional time. In granting additional time, the Secretary shall ensure that the State is making reasonable efforts to achieve compliance.

§ 32706. Inspections, investigations, and records

(a) Subject to section 32707 of this title, the Secretary of Transportation may conduct an inspection or investigation necessary to carry out this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter. The Secretary shall cooperate with State and local officials to the greatest extent possible in conducting an inspection or investigation. The Secretary may give the Attorney General information about a violation of this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter.

(b)(1) In carrying out subsection (a) of this section, an officer or employee designated by the Secretary, on display of proper credentials and written notice to the owner, operator, or agent in charge, may—

(A) enter and inspect commercial premises in which a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment is manufactured, held for shipment or sale, maintained, or repaired;

(B) enter and inspect noncommercial premises in which the Secretary reasonably believes there is a vehicle or equipment involved in a violation of this chapter;

(C) inspect that vehicle or equipment; and

(D) impound for not more than 72 hours for inspection a vehicle or equipment that the Secretary reasonably believes is involved in a violation of this chapter.

(2) An inspection or impoundment under this subsection shall be conducted at a reasonable time, in a reasonable way, and with reasonable promptness. The written notice may consist of a warrant issued under section 32707 of this title.

(c) When the Secretary impounds for inspection a motor vehicle (except a vehicle subject to subchapter II of chapter 105 of this title) or motor vehicle equipment under subsection (b)(1)(D) of this section, the Secretary shall pay reasonable compensation to the owner of the vehicle or equipment if the inspection or impoundment results in denial of use, or reduction in value, of the vehicle or equipment.

(d)(1) To enable the Secretary to decide whether a dealer or distributor is complying with this chapter and regulations prescribed and orders issued under this chapter, the Secretary may require the dealer or distributor—

(A) to keep records;

(B) to provide information from those records if the Secretary states the purpose for requiring the information and identifies the information to the fullest extent practicable; and

(C) to allow an officer or employee designated by the Secretary to inspect relevant records of the dealer or distributor.

(2) This subsection and subsection (e)(1)(B) of this section do not authorize the Secretary to require a dealer or distributor to provide information on a regular periodic basis.

(e)(1) In carrying out this chapter, the Secretary may—

(A) inspect and copy records of any person at reasonable times;

(B) order a person to file written reports or answers to specific questions, including reports or answers under oath; and

(C) conduct proceedings, administer oaths, take testimony, and require (by subpena or otherwise) the appearance and testimony of witnesses and the production of records the Secretary considers advisable.

(2) A witness summoned under this subsection is entitled to the same fee and mileage the witness would have been paid in a court of the United States.

(3) A civil action to enforce a subpena or order of the Secretary under this subsection may be brought in the United States district court for the judicial district in which the proceeding by the Secretary was conducted. The court may punish a refusal to obey an order of the court to comply with a subpena or order of the Secretary as a contempt of court.

(f) A person may not fail to keep records, refuse access to or copying of records, fail to make reports or provide information, fail to allow entry or inspection, or fail to permit impoundment, as required under this section.

§ 32707. Administrative warrants

(a) In this section, "probable cause" means a valid public interest in the effective enforcement of this chapter or a regulation prescribed under this chapter sufficient to justify the inspection or impoundment in the circumstances stated in an application for a warrant under this section.

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (4) of this subsection, an inspection or impoundment under section 32706 of this title may be carried out only after a warrant is obtained.

(2) A judge of a court of the United States or a State court of record or a United States magistrate may issue a warrant for an inspection or impoundment under section 32706 of this title within the territorial jurisdiction of the court or magistrate. The warrant must be based on an affidavit that—

(A) establishes probable cause to issue the warrant; and

(B) is sworn to before the judge or magistrate by an officer or employee who knows the facts alleged in the affidavit.

(3) The judge or magistrate shall issue the warrant when the judge or magistrate decides there is a reasonable basis for believing that probable cause exists to issue the warrant. The warrant must—

(A) identify the premises, property, or motor vehicle to be inspected and the items or type of property to be impounded;

(B) state the purpose of the inspection, the basis for issuing the warrant, and the name of the affiant;

(C) direct an individual authorized under section 32706 of this title to inspect the premises, property, or vehicle for the purpose stated in the warrant and, when appropriate, to impound the property specified in the warrant;

(D) direct that the warrant be served during the hours specified in the warrant; and

(E) name the judge or magistrate with whom proof of service is to be filed.

(4) A warrant under this section is not required when—

(A) the owner, operator, or agent in charge of the premises consents;

(B) it is reasonable to believe that the mobility of the motor vehicle to be inspected makes it impractical to obtain a warrant;

(C) an application for a warrant cannot be made because of an emergency;

(D) records are to be inspected and copied under section 32706(e)(1)(A) of this title; or

(E) a warrant is not constitutionally required.

(c)(1) A warrant issued under this section must be served and proof of service filed not later than 10 days after its issuance date. The judge or magistrate may allow additional time in the warrant if the Secretary of Transportation demonstrates a need for additional time. Proof of service must be filed promptly with a written inventory of the property impounded under the warrant. The inventory shall be made in the presence of the individual serving the warrant and the individual from whose possession or premises the property was impounded, or if that individual is not present, a credible individual except the individual making the inventory. The individual serving the warrant shall verify the inventory. On request, the judge or magistrate shall send a copy of the inventory to the individual from whose possession or premises the property was impounded and to the applicant for the warrant.

(2) When property is impounded under a warrant, the individual serving the warrant shall—

(A) give the person from whose possession or premises the property was impounded a copy of the warrant and a receipt for the property; or

(B) leave the copy and receipt at the place from which the property was impounded.

(3) The judge or magistrate shall file the warrant, proof of service, and all documents filed about the warrant with the clerk of the district court of the United States for the judicial district in which the inspection is made.

§ 32708. Confidentiality of information

(a) Information obtained by the Secretary of Transportation under this chapter related to a confidential matter referred to in section 1905 of title 18 may be disclosed only—

(1) to another officer or employee of the United States Government for use in carrying out this chapter; or

(2) in a proceeding under this chapter.

(b) This section does not authorize information to be withheld from a committee of Congress authorized to have the information.

§ 32709. Enforcement and penalties

(a)(1) A person that violates this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $2,000 for each violation. A separate violation occurs for each motor vehicle or device involved in the violation. A person is liable for a penalty under this paragraph of not more than $100,000 for a related series of violations.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall impose a civil penalty under this subsection. The Attorney General shall bring a civil action to collect the penalty. Before referring a penalty claim to the Attorney General, the Secretary may compromise the penalty. Before compromising a penalty, the Secretary shall give the person charged with a violation an opportunity to establish that the violation did not occur. In determining the amount of a penalty under this subsection, the Secretary shall consider—

(A) the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the violation;

(B) with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior violations, the ability to pay, and any effect on the ability to continue doing business; and

(C) other matters that justice requires.

(b) A person that knowingly and willfully violates this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 3 years, or both. If the person is a corporation, the penalties of this subsection also apply to a director, officer, or individual agent of a corporation who knowingly and willfully authorizes, orders, or performs an act in violation of this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter.

(c) The Attorney General may bring a civil action to enjoin a violation of this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter. The action may be brought in the United States district court for the judicial district in which the violation occurred or the defendant is found, resides, or does business. Process in the action may be served in any other judicial district in which the defendant resides or is found. A subpena for a witness in the action may be served in any judicial district.

(d)(1) When a person violates this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter, the chief law enforcement officer of the State in which the violation occurs may bring a civil action—

(A) to enjoin the violation; or

(B) to recover amounts for which the person is liable under section 32710 of this title for each person on whose behalf the action is brought.

(2) An action under this subsection may be brought in an appropriate district court of the United States or in a State court of competent jurisdiction. The action must be brought not later than 2 years after the claim accrues.

§ 32710. Action by a private person

(a) A person that violates this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter, with intent to defraud, is liable for 3 times the actual damages or $1,500, whichever is greater.

(b) A person may bring a civil action to enforce a claim under this section in an appropriate district court of the United States or in another court of competent jurisdiction. The action must be brought not later than 2 years after the claim accrues. The court shall award costs and a reasonable attorney's fee to the person when a judgment is entered for that person.

§ 32711. Relationship to State law

Except to the extent that State law is inconsistent with this chapter, this chapter does not—

(1) affect a State law on disconnecting, changing, or tampering with an odometer with intent to defraud; or

(2) exempt a person from complying with that law.

32917. Relationship to other automobile standards.

§ 32901. Definitions and application

(a) In this chapter—

(1) except as provided in section 32908 of this title, "automobile" means a 4-wheeled vehicle that is propelled by fuel, or by alcohol or natural gas, manufactured primarily for use on public streets, roads, and highways (except a vehicle operated only on a rail line), and rated at—

(A) not more than 6,000 pounds gross vehicle weight; or

(B) more than 6,000, but less than 10,000, pounds gross vehicle weight, if the Secretary of Transportation decides by regulation that—

(i) an average fuel economy standard under this chapter for the vehicle is feasible; and

(ii) an average fuel economy standard under this chapter for the vehicle will result in significant energy conservation or the vehicle is substantially used for the same purposes as a vehicle rated at not more than 6,000 pounds gross vehicle weight.

(2) "automobile manufactured by a manufacturer" includes an automobile manufactured by a person that controls, is controlled by, or is under common control with the manufacturer, but does not include an automobile manufactured by the person in a model year that is exported not later than 30 days after the end of that model year.

(3) "alcohol" means a mixture containing 85 percent or more methanol, ethanol, or other alcohols by volume, in any combination;

(4) "alcohol powered automobile" means an automobile designed to operate only on alcohol.

(5) "average fuel economy" means average fuel economy determined under section 32904 of this title.

(6) "average fuel economy standard" means a performance standard specifying a minimum level of average fuel economy applicable to a manufacturer in a model year.

(7) "dual energy automobile" means an automobile that—

(A) is capable of operating on alcohol and gasoline or diesel fuel;

(B) provides equal or superior energy efficiency, as calculated for the applicable model year during fuel economy testing for the United States Government, when operating on alcohol as when operating on gasoline or diesel fuel;

(C) for model years 1993-1995, and if the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency decides to extend the application of this clause (C), for an additional period ending not later than the end of the last model year to which section 32905(b) and (d) of this title applies, provides equal or superior energy efficiency, as calculated for the applicable model year during fuel economy testing for the Government, when operating on a mixture of alcohol and gasoline or diesel fuel containing exactly 50 percent gasoline or diesel fuel as when operating on gasoline or diesel fuel; and

(D) for a passenger automobile, meets the minimum driving range prescribed under subsection (b) of this section.

(8) "fuel" means—

(A) gasoline;

(B) diesel oil; or

(C) other liquid or gaseous fuel that the Secretary decides by regulation to include in this definition as consistent with the need of the United States to conserve energy.

(9) "fuel economy" means the average number of miles traveled by an automobile for each gallon of gasoline (or equivalent amount of other fuel) used, as determined by the Administrator under section 32904(c) of this title.

(10) "import" means to import into the customs territory of the United States.

(11) "manufacture" (except under section 32902(d) of this title) means to produce or assemble in the customs territory of the United States or to import.

(12) "manufacturer" means—

(A) a person engaged in the business of manufacturing automobiles, including a predecessor or successor of the person to the extent provided under regulations prescribed by the Secretary; and

(B) if more than one person is the manufacturer of an automobile, the person specified under regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

(13) "model" means a class of automobiles as decided by regulation by the Administrator after consulting and coordinating with the Secretary.

(14) "model year", when referring to a specific calendar year, means—

(A) the annual production period of a manufacturer as decided by the Administrator, including January 1 of that calendar year; or

(B) that calendar year if the manufacturer does not have an annual production period.

(15) "natural gas dual energy automobile" means an automobile that—

(A) is capable of operating on natural gas and on gasoline or diesel fuel;

(B) provides equal or superior energy efficiency, as calculated for the applicable model year during fuel economy testing for the Government, when operating on natural gas as when operating on gasoline or diesel fuel; and

(C) for a passenger automobile, meets the minimum driving range prescribed under subsection (b) of this section.

(16) "natural gas powered automobile" means an automobile designed to operate only on natural gas.

(17) "passenger automobile" means an automobile that the Secretary decides by regulation is manufactured primarily for transporting not more than 10 individuals, but does not include an automobile capable of off-highway operation that the Secretary decides by regulation—

(A) has a significant feature (except 4-wheel drive) designed for off-highway operation; and

(B) is a 4-wheel drive automobile or is rated at more than 6,000 pounds gross vehicle weight.

(b)(1) Not later than April 14, 1990, the Secretary shall prescribe the minimum driving range that dual energy automobiles that are passenger automobiles must meet when operating on alcohol, and that natural gas dual energy automobiles that are passenger automobiles must meet when operating on natural gas, to be dual energy automobiles or natural gas dual energy automobiles under sections 32905 and 32906 of this title. A determination whether a dual energy automobile or natural gas dual energy automobile meets the minimum driving range requirement under this paragraph shall be based on the combined Environmental Protection Agency city/highway fuel economy as determined for average fuel economy purposes for those automobiles.

(2)(A) The Secretary may prescribe a lower range for a specific model than that prescribed under paragraph (1) of this subsection. A manufacturer may petition for a lower range than that prescribed under paragraph (1) for a specific model.

(B) If the Secretary prescribes a minimum driving range of 200 miles for dual energy automobiles under paragraph (1) of this subsection, subparagraph (A) of this paragraph does not apply to dual energy automobiles.

(C) The minimum driving range prescribed for dual energy automobiles under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph or paragraph (1) of this subsection must be at least 200 miles.

(3) In prescribing a minimum driving range under paragraph (1) of this subsection and in taking an action under paragraph (2) of this subsection, the Secretary shall consider the purpose of section 3 of the Alternative Motor Fuels Act of 1988 (Public Law 100–494, 102 Stat. 2442), consumer acceptability, economic practicability, technology, environmental impact, safety, driveability, performance, and other factors the Secretary considers relevant.

§ 32902. Average fuel economy standards

(a) At least 18 months before the beginning of each model year, the Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe by regulation average fuel economy standards for automobiles (except passenger automobiles) manufactured by a manufacturer in that model year. Each standard shall be the maximum feasible average fuel economy level that the Secretary decides the manufacturers can achieve in that model year. The Secretary may prescribe separate standards for different classes of automobiles.

(b) Except as provided in this section, the average fuel economy standard for passenger automobiles manufactured by a manufacturer in a model year after model year 1984 shall be 27.5 miles a gallon.

(c)(1) Subject to paragraph (2) of this subsection, the Secretary of Transportation may prescribe regulations changing the standard under subsection (b) of this section for a model year to a level that the Secretary decides is the maximum feasible average fuel economy level for that model year. Section 553 of title 5 applies to a proceeding to change the standard. However, an interested person may make an oral presentation and a transcript shall be taken of that presentation.

(2) If the Secretary of Transportation increases the standard above 27.5 miles a gallon or decreases the standard below 26.0 miles a gallon, the Secretary shall submit the change to Congress. The procedures of section 551 of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act (42 U.S.C. 6421) apply to a change, except that the 15 calendar days referred to in section 551(c) and (d) of that Act (42 U.S.C. 6421(c), (d)) are deemed to be 60 calendar days, and the 5 calendar days referred to in section 551(f)(4)(A) of that Act (42 U.S.C. 6421(f)(4)(A)) are deemed to be 20 calendar days. If either House of Congress disapproves the change under those procedures, the change does not take effect.

(d)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, on application of a manufacturer that manufactured (whether in the United States or not) fewer than 10,000 passenger automobiles in the model year 2 years before the model year for which the application is made, the Secretary of Transportation may exempt by regulation the manufacturer from a standard under subsection (b) or (c) of this section. An exemption for a model year applies only if the manufacturer manufactures (whether in the United States or not) fewer than 10,000 passenger automobiles in the model year. The Secretary may exempt a manufacturer only if the Secretary—

(A) finds that the applicable standard under those subsections is more stringent than the maximum feasible average fuel economy level that the manufacturer can achieve; and

(B) prescribes by regulation an alternative average fuel economy standard for the passenger automobiles manufactured by the exempted manufacturer that the Secretary decides is the maximum feasible average fuel economy level for the manufacturers to which the standard applies.

(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (1) of this subsection, an importer registered under section 30141(c) of this title may not be exempted as a manufacturer under paragraph (1) for a motor vehicle that the importer—

(A) imports; or

(B) brings into compliance with applicable motor vehicle safety standards prescribed under chapter 301 of this title for an individual under section 30142 of this title.

(3) The Secretary of Transportation may prescribe an alternative average fuel economy standard applicable to an individually exempted manufacturer, to all automobiles to which this subsection applies, or to classes of passenger automobiles, as defined under regulations of the Secretary, manufactured by exempted manufacturers.

(4) The Secretary of Transportation may prescribe the contents of an application for an exemption.

(e)(1) In this subsection, "emergency vehicle" means an automobile manufactured primarily for use—

(A) as an ambulance or combination ambulance-hearse;

(B) by the United States Government or a State or local government for law enforcement; or

(C) for other emergency uses prescribed by regulation by the Secretary of Transportation.

(2) A manufacturer may elect to have the fuel economy of an emergency vehicle excluded in applying a fuel economy standard under subsection (a), (b), (c), or (d) of this section. The election is made by providing written notice to the Secretary of Transportation and to the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

(f) When deciding maximum feasible average fuel economy under this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall consider technological feasibility, economic practicability, the effect of other motor vehicle standards of the Government on fuel economy, and the need of the United States to conserve energy.

(g) When the Secretary of Transportation prescribes a change under this section that makes an average fuel economy standard more stringent, the Secretary shall prescribe the change (and submit the change to Congress when required under subsection (c)(2) of this section) at least 18 months before the beginning of the model year to which the change applies.

(h) In carrying out subsections (c), (f), and (g) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation—

(1) may not consider the fuel economy of alcohol powered automobiles or natural gas powered automobiles; and

(2) shall consider dual energy automobiles and natural gas dual energy automobiles to be operated only on gasoline or diesel fuel.

(i)(1) Before issuing a notice proposing to prescribe or change an average fuel economy standard under subsection (a) or (c) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall give the Secretary of Energy at least 10 days from the receipt of the notice during which the Secretary of Energy may, if the Secretary of Energy concludes that the proposed standard would adversely affect the conservation goals of the Secretary of Energy, provide written comments to the Secretary of Transportation about the impact of the standard on those goals. To the extent the Secretary of Transportation does not revise a proposed standard to take into account comments of the Secretary of Energy on any adverse impact of the standard, the Secretary of Transportation shall include those comments in the notice.

(2) Before taking final action on a standard or an exemption from a standard under this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall notify the Secretary of Energy and provide the Secretary of Energy a reasonable time to comment.

(j) The Secretary of Transportation shall consult with the Secretary of Energy in carrying out this section and section 32903 of this title.

§ 32903. Credits for exceeding average fuel economy standards

(a) When the average fuel economy of passenger automobiles manufactured by a manufacturer in a particular model year exceeds an applicable average fuel economy standard under section 32902(b)-(d) of this title (determined by the Secretary of Transportation without regard to credits under this section), the manufacturer earns credits. The credits may be applied to—

(1) any of the 3 consecutive model years immediately before the model year for which the credits are earned; and

(2) to the extent not used under clause (1) of this subsection, any of the 3 consecutive model years immediately after the model year for which the credits are earned.

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, credits under this section are available to a manufacturer at the end of the model year in which earned.

(2)(A) Before the end of a model year, if a manufacturer has reason to believe that its average fuel economy for passenger automobiles will be less than the applicable standard for that model year, the manufacturer may submit a plan to the Secretary of Transportation demonstrating that the manufacturer will earn sufficient credits under this section within the next 3 model years to allow the manufacturer to meet that standard for the model year involved. Unless the Secretary finds that the manufacturer is unlikely to earn sufficient credits under the plan, the Secretary shall approve the plan. Those credits are available for the model year involved if—

(i) the Secretary approves the plan; and

(ii) the manufacturer earns those credits as provided by the plan.

(B) If the average fuel economy of a manufacturer is less than the applicable standard under section 32902(b)-(d) of this title after applying credits under subsection (a)(1) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall notify the manufacturer and give the manufacturer a reasonable time (of at least 60 days) to submit a plan.

(c) The number of credits a manufacturer earns under this section equals the product of—

(1) the number of tenths of a mile a gallon by which the average fuel economy of the passenger automobiles manufactured by the manufacturer in the model year in which the credits are earned exceeds the applicable average fuel economy standard under section 32902(b)-(d) of this title; times

(2) the number of passenger automobiles manufactured by the manufacturer during that model year.

(d) The Secretary of Transportation shall apply credits to a model year on the basis of the number of tenths of a mile a gallon by which the manufacturer involved was below the applicable average fuel economy standard for that model year and the number of passenger automobiles manufactured that model year by the manufacturer. Credits applied to a model year are no longer available for another model year. Before applying credits, the Secretary shall give the manufacturer written notice and reasonable opportunity to comment.

(e) Credits for a manufacturer of automobiles that are not passenger automobiles are earned and applied to a model year in which the average fuel economy of that class of automobiles is below the applicable average fuel economy standard under section 32902(a) of this title, to the same extent and in the same way as provided in this section for passenger automobiles.

(f) When a civil penalty has been collected under this chapter from a manufacturer that has earned credits under this section, the Secretary of the Treasury shall refund to the manufacturer the amount of the penalty to the extent the penalty is attributable to credits available under this section.

§ 32904. Calculation of average fuel economy

(A) section 32902(a) of this title in a way prescribed by the Administrator; and

(B) section 32902(b)-(d) of this title by dividing—

(i) the number of passenger automobiles manufactured by the manufacturer in a model year; by

(ii) the sum of the fractions obtained by dividing the number of passenger automobiles of each model manufactured by the manufacturer in that model year by the fuel economy measured for that model.

(2)(A) In this paragraph, "electric vehicle" means a vehicle powered primarily by an electric motor drawing electrical current from a portable source.

(B) If a manufacturer manufactures an electric vehicle, the Administrator shall include in the calculation of average fuel economy under paragraph (1) of this subsection equivalent petroleum based fuel economy values determined by the Secretary of Energy for various classes of electric vehicles. The Secretary shall review those values each year and propose and determine necessary changes based on the following factors:

(i) the approximate electrical energy efficiency of the vehicle, considering the kind of vehicle and the mission and weight of the vehicle.

(ii) the national average electrical generation and transmission efficiencies.

(iii) the need of the United States to conserve all forms of energy and the relative scarcity and value to the United States of all fuel used to generate electricity.

(iv) the specific patterns of use of electric vehicles compared to petroleum-fueled vehicles.

(b)(1) In this subsection—

(A) a passenger automobile is deemed to be manufactured domestically in a model year if at least 75 percent of the cost to the manufacturer is attributable to value added in the United States or Canada, unless the assembly of the automobile is completed in Canada and the automobile is imported into the United States more than 30 days after the end of the model year; and

(B) the fuel economy of a passenger automobile that is not manufactured domestically is deemed to be equal to the average fuel economy of all passenger automobiles that are not manufactured domestically.

(2)(A) Except as provided in paragraphs (4) and (5) of this subsection, the Administrator shall make separate calculations under subsection (a)(1)(B) of this section for—

(i) passenger automobiles manufactured domestically by a manufacturer (or included in this category under paragraph (3) of this subsection); and

(ii) passenger automobiles not manufactured domestically by that manufacturer (or excluded from this category under paragraph (3) of this subsection).

(B) Passenger automobiles described in subparagraph (A)(i) and (ii) of this paragraph are deemed to be manufactured by separate manufacturers under this chapter.

(3)(A) A manufacturer may submit to the Secretary of Transportation for approval a plan, including supporting material, stating the actions and the dates when the actions will be taken, that will ensure that the automobile type or types referred to in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph will be manufactured domestically before the end of the 4th model year covered by the plan. The Secretary promptly shall consider and act on the plan. The Secretary shall approve the plan unless—

(i) the Secretary finds that the plan is inadequate to meet the requirements of this paragraph; or

(ii) the manufacturer previously has submitted a plan approved by the Secretary under this paragraph.

(B) If the plan is approved, the Administrator shall include under paragraph (2)(A)(i) and exclude under paragraph (2)(A)(ii) of this subsection, for each of the 4 model years covered by the plan, not more than 150,000 passenger automobiles manufactured by that manufacturer but not qualifying as domestically manufactured if—

(i) the model type or types involved previously have not been manufactured domestically;

(ii) at least 50 percent of the cost to the manufacturer of each of the automobiles is attributable to value added in the United States or Canada;

(iii) the automobiles, if their assembly was completed in Canada, are imported into the United States not later than 30 days after the end of the model year; and

(iv) the automobile model type or types are manufactured domestically before the end of the 4th model year covered by the plan.

(4)(A) A manufacturer may file with the Secretary of Transportation a petition for an exemption from the requirement of separate calculations under paragraph (2)(A) of this subsection if the manufacturer began automobile production or assembly in the United States—

(i) after December 22, 1975, and before May 1, 1980; or

(ii) after April 30, 1980, if the manufacturer has engaged in the production or assembly in the United States for at least one model year ending before January 1, 1986.

(B) The Secretary of Transportation shall grant the exemption unless the Secretary finds that the exemption would result in reduced employment in the United States related to motor vehicle manufacturing during the period of the exemption. An exemption under this paragraph is effective for 5 model years or, if requested by the manufacturer, a longer period provided by the Secretary in the order granting the exemption. The exemption applies to passenger automobiles manufactured by that manufacturer during the period of the exemption.

(C) Before granting an exemption, the Secretary of Transportation shall provide notice of, and reasonable opportunity for, written or oral comment about the petition. The period for comment shall end not later than 60 days after the petition is filed, except that the Secretary may extend the period for not more than another 30 days. The Secretary shall decide whether to grant or deny the exemption, and publish notice of the decision in the Federal Register, not later than 90 days after the petition is filed, except that the Secretary may extend the time for decision to a later date (not later than 150 days after the petition is filed) if the Secretary publishes notice of, and reasons for, the extension in the Federal Register. If the Secretary does not make a decision within the time provided in this subparagraph, the petition is deemed to have been granted. Not later than 30 days after the end of the decision period, the Secretary shall submit a written statement of the reasons for not making a decision to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives.

(5)(A) A person adversely affected by a decision of the Secretary of Transportation granting or denying an exemption may file, not later than 30 days after publication of the notice of the decision, a petition for review in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. That court has exclusive jurisdiction to review the decision and to affirm, remand, or set aside the decision under section 706(2)(A)-(D) of title 5.

(B) A judgment of the court under this subparagraph may be reviewed by the Supreme Court under section 1254 of title 28. Application for review by the Supreme Court must be made not later than 30 days after entry of the court's judgment.

(C) A decision of the Secretary of Transportation on a petition for an exemption under this paragraph may be reviewed administratively or judicially only as provided in this paragraph.

(6) Notwithstanding section 32903 of this title, during a model year when an exemption under this paragraph is effective for a manufacturer—

(A) credit may not be earned under section 32903(a) of this title by the manufacturer; and

(B) credit may not be made available under section 32903(b)(2) of this title for the manufacturer.

(c) The Administrator shall measure fuel economy for each model and calculate average fuel economy for a manufacturer under testing and calculation procedures prescribed by the Administrator. However, except under section 32908 of this title, the Administrator shall use the same procedures for passenger automobiles the Administrator used for model year 1975 (weighted 55 percent urban cycle and 45 percent highway cycle), or procedures that give comparable results. A measurement of fuel economy or a calculation of average fuel economy (except under section 32908) shall be rounded off to the nearest .1 of a mile a gallon. The Administrator shall decide on the quantity of other fuel that is equivalent to one gallon of gasoline. To the extent practicable, a fuel economy test shall be carried out with emissions tests under section 206 of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7525).

(d) The Administrator shall prescribe a procedure under this section, or a change (except a technical or clerical change) in a procedure, at least 12 months before the beginning of the model year to which the procedure or change applies.

(e) The Administrator shall report measurements and calculations under this section to the Secretary of Transportation and shall consult and coordinate with the Secretary in carrying out this section.

§ 32905. Manufacturing incentives for alternative fuel automobiles

(a) For any model of alcohol powered automobile manufactured by a manufacturer after model year 1992, the fuel economy measured for that model shall be based on the fuel content of the alcohol used to operate the automobile. A gallon of alcohol used to operate an alcohol powered automobile is deemed to contain .15 gallon of fuel.

(b) For any model of dual energy automobile manufactured by a manufacturer in model years 1993-2004, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall measure the fuel economy for that model by dividing 1.0 by the sum of—

(1) .5 divided by the fuel economy measured under section 32904(c) of this title when operating the model on gasoline or diesel fuel; and

(2) .5 divided by the fuel economy measured under subsection (a) of this section when operating the model on alcohol.

(c) For any model of natural gas powered automobile manufactured by a manufacturer after model year 1992, the Administrator shall measure the fuel economy for that model based on the fuel content of the natural gas used to operate the automobile. One hundred cubic feet of natural gas is deemed to contain .823 gallon equivalent of natural gas. A gallon equivalent of natural gas is deemed to have a fuel content of .15 gallon of fuel.

(d) For any model of natural gas dual energy automobile manufactured by a manufacturer in model years 1993-2004, the Administrator shall measure the fuel economy for that model by dividing 1.0 by the sum of—

(1) .5 divided by the fuel economy measured under section 32904(c) of this title when operating the model on gasoline or diesel fuel; and

(2) .5 divided by the fuel economy measured under subsection (c) of this section when operating the model on natural gas.

(e) The Administrator shall calculate the manufacturer's average fuel economy under section 32904(a)(1) of this title for each model described under subsections (a)-(d) of this section by using as the denominator the fuel economy measured for each model under subsections (a)-(d).

(f) Not later than December 31, 2001, the Secretary of Transportation shall—

(1) extend by regulation the application of subsections (b) and (d) of this section for not more than 4 consecutive model years immediately after model year 2004 and explain the basis on which the extension is granted; or

(2) publish a notice explaining the reasons for not extending the application of subsections (b) and (d) of this section.

(g) Not later than September 30, 2000, the Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Secretary of Energy and the Administrator, shall complete a study of the success of the policy of subsections (b) and (d) of this title, and submit to the Committees on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives a report on the results of the study, including preliminary conclusions on whether the application of subsections (b) and (d) should be extended for up to 4 more model years. The study and conclusions shall consider—

(1) the availability to the public of alcohol powered automobiles, natural gas powered automobiles, and alternative fuels;

(2) energy conservation and security;

(3) environmental considerations; and

(4) other relevant factors.

§ 32906. Maximum fuel economy increase for alternative fuel automobiles

(a)(1)(A) For each of the model years 1993-2004 for each category of automobile, the maximum increase in average fuel economy for a manufacturer attributable to dual energy automobiles and natural gas dual energy automobiles is 1.2 miles a gallon.

(B) If the application of section 32905(b) and (d) of this title is extended under section 32905(f) of this title, for each category of automobile the maximum increase in average fuel economy for a manufacturer for each of the model years 2005-2008 attributable to dual energy automobiles and natural gas dual energy automobiles is .9 mile a gallon.

(2) In applying paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall determine the increase in a manufacturer's average fuel economy attributable to dual energy automobiles and natural gas dual energy automobiles by subtracting from the manufacturer's average fuel economy calculated under section 32905(e) of this title the number equal to what the manufacturer's average fuel economy would be if it were calculated by the formula in section 32904(a)(1) of this title by including as the denominator for each model of dual energy automobile or natural gas dual energy automobile the fuel economy when the automobiles are operated on gasoline or diesel fuel. If the increase attributable to dual energy automobiles and natural gas dual energy automobiles for any model year described—

(A) in paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection is more than 1.2 miles a gallon, the limitation in paragraph (1)(A) applies; and

(B) in paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection is more than .9 mile a gallon, the limitation in paragraph (1)(B) applies.

(b) Nothwithstanding this section and sections 32901(b) and 32905 of this title, if the Secretary of Transportation reduces the average fuel economy standard for passenger automobiles for any model year below 27.5 miles a gallon, an increase in average fuel economy for passenger automobiles of more than .7 mile a gallon to which a manufacturer of dual energy automobiles or natural gas dual energy automobiles would otherwise be entitled is reduced by an amount equal to the amount of the reduction in the standard. However, the increase may not be reduced to less than .7 mile a gallon.

§ 32907. Reports and tests of manufacturers

(a)(1) A manufacturer shall report to the Secretary of Transportation on—

(A) whether the manufacturer will comply with an applicable average fuel economy standard under section 32902 of this title for the model year for which the report is made;

(B) the actions the manufacturer has taken or intends to take to comply with the standard; and

(C) other information the Secretary requires by regulation.

(2) A manufacturer shall submit a report under paragraph (1) of this subsection during the 30 days—

(A) before the beginning of each model year; and

(B) beginning on the 180th day of the model year.

(3) When a manufacturer decides that actions reported under paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection are not sufficient to ensure compliance with that standard, the manufacturer shall report to the Secretary additional actions the manufacturer intends to take to comply with the standard and include a statement that those actions are sufficient to ensure compliance.

(4) This subsection does not apply to a manufacturer for a model year for which the manufacturer is subject to an alternative average fuel economy standard under section 32902(d) of this title.

(b)(1) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary or the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency to carry out this chapter, a manufacturer shall maintain records, make reports, conduct tests, and provide items and information. On request and display of proper credentials, an officer or employee designated by the Secretary or Administrator may inspect automobiles and records of the manufacturer. An inspection shall be made at a reasonable time and in a reasonable way.

(2) The district courts of the United States may—

(A) issue an order enforcing a requirement or request under paragraph (1) of this subsection; and

(B) punish a failure to obey the order as a contempt of court.

§ 32908. Fuel economy information

(a) In this section—

(1) "automobile" includes an automobile rated at not more than 8,500 pounds gross vehicle weight regardless of whether the Secretary of Transportation has applied this chapter to the automobile under section 32901(a)(1)(B) of this title.

(2) "dealer" means a person residing or located in a State, the District of Columbia, or a territory or possession of the United States, and engaged in the sale or distribution of new automobiles to the first person (except a dealer buying as a dealer) that buys the automobile in good faith other than for resale.

(b)(1) Under regulations of the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, a manufacturer of automobiles shall attach a label to a prominent place on each automobile manufactured in a model year. The dealer shall maintain the label. The label shall contain the following information:

(A) the fuel economy of the automobile.

(B) the estimated annual fuel cost of operating the automobile.

(C) the range of fuel economy of comparable automobiles of all manufacturers.

(D) a statement that a booklet is available from the dealer to assist in making a comparison of fuel economy of other automobiles manufactured by all manufacturers in that model year.

(E) the amount of the automobile fuel efficiency tax imposed on the sale of the automobile under section 4064 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 4064).

(F) other information required or authorized by the Administrator that is related to the information required by clauses (A)-(D) of this paragraph.

(2) The Administrator may allow a manufacturer to comply with this subsection by—

(A) disclosing the information on the label required under section 3 of the Automobile Information Disclosure Act (15 U.S.C. 1232); and

(B) including the statement required by paragraph (1)(E) of this subsection at a time and in a way that takes into account special circumstances or characteristics.

(3) For alcohol powered automobiles and natural gas powered automobiles manufactured after model year 1992, the fuel economy of those automobiles under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection is the fuel economy for those automobiles when operated on alcohol or natural gas, as the case may be, measured under section 32905(a) or (c) of this title, multiplied by .15. Each label required under paragraph (1) of this subsection for those dual energy automobiles or natural gas dual energy automobiles shall—

(A) indicate the fuel economy of the automobile when operated on gasoline or diesel fuel;

(B) clearly identify the automobile as a dual energy automobile or natural gas dual energy automobile;

(C) cleary identify the fuels on which the automobile may be operated; and

(D) contain a statement informing the consumer that the additional information required by subsection (c)(2) of this section is published and distributed by the Secretary of Energy.

(c)(1) The Administrator shall prepare the booklet referred to in subsection (b)(1)(D) of this section. The booklet—

(A) shall be simple and readily understandable;

(B) shall contain information on fuel economy and estimated annual fuel costs of operating automobiles manufactured in each model year; and

(C) may contain information on geographical or other differences in estimated annual fuel costs.

(2)(A) For dual energy automobiles and natural gas dual energy automobiles manufactured after model year 1992, the booklet published under paragraph (1) shall contain additional information on—

(i) the energy efficiency and cost of operation of those automobiles when operated on gasoline or diesel fuel as compared to those automobiles when operated on alcohol or natural gas, as the case may be; and

(ii) the driving range of those automobiles when operated on gasoline or diesel fuel as compared to those automobiles when operaid on alcohol or natural gas, as the case may be.

(B) For dual energy automobiles, the booklet published under paragraph (1) also shall contain—

(i) information on the miles a gallon achieved by the automobiles when operated on alcohol; and

(ii) a statement explaining how the information made available under this paragraph can be expected to change when the automobile is operated on mixtures of alcohol and gasoline or diesel fuel.

(3) The Secretary of Energy shall publish and distribute the booklet. The Administrator shall prescribe regulations requiring dealers to make the booklet available to prospective buyers.

(d) A disclosure about fuel economy or estimated annual fuel costs under this section does not establish a warranty under a law of the United States or a State.

(e) A violation of subsection (b) of this section is—

(1) a violation of section 3 of the Automobile Information Disclosure Act (15 U.S.C. 1232); and

(2) an unfair or deceptive act or practice in or affecting commerce under the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 41 et seq.), except sections 5(m) and 18 (15 U.S.C. 45(m), 57a).

(f) The Administrator shall consult with the Federal Trade Commission and the Secretaries of Transportation and Energy in carrying out this section.

§ 32909. Judicial review of regulations

(a)(1) A person that may be adversely affected by a regulation prescribed in carrying out section 32901-32904 or 32908 of this title may apply for review of the regulation by filing a petition for review in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit or in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the person resides or has its principal place of business.

(2) A person adversely affected by a regulation prescribed under section 32912(c)(1) of this title may apply for review of the regulation by filing a petition for review in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the person resides or has its principal place of business.

(b) The petition must be filed not later than 59 days after the regulation is prescribed, except that a petition for review of a regulation prescribing a change of a standard submitted to Congress under section 32902(c)(2) of this title must be filed not later than 59 days after the end of the 60-day period referred to in section 32902(c)(2). The clerk of the court shall send immediately a copy of the petition to the Secretary of Transportation or the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, whoever prescribed the regulation. The Secretary or the Administrator shall file with the court a record of the proceeding in which the regulation was prescribed.

(c)(1) When reviewing a regulation under subsection (a)(1) of this section, the court, on request of the petitioner, may order the Secretary or the Administrator to receive additional evidence if the court is satisfied the additional evidence is material and there were reasonable grounds for not presenting the evidence in the proceeding before the Secretary or Administrator.

(2) The Secretary or the Administrator may change or set aside the regulation, or prescribe a new regulation because of the additional evidence presented. The Secretary or Administrator shall file a changed or new regulation and the additional evidence with the court. The court shall review a changed or new regulation.

(d) A judgment of a court under this section may be reviewed only by the Supreme Court under section 1254 of title 28. A remedy under subsections (a)(1) and (c) of this section is in addition to any other remedies provided by law.

§ 32910. Administrative

(a)(1) In carrying out this chapter, the Secretary of Transportation or the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency may—

(A) inspect and copy records of any person at reasonable times;

(B) order a person to file written reports or answers to specific questions, including reports or answers under oath; and

(C) conduct proceedings, administer oaths, take testimony, and subpena witnesses and records the Secretary or Administrator considers advisable.

(2) A witness summoned under paragraph (1)(C) of this subsection is entitled to the same fee and mileage the witness would have been paid in a court of the United States.

(b) A civil action to enforce a subpena or order of the Secretary or Administrator under subsection (a) of this section may be brought in the United States district court for the judicial district in which the proceeding by the Secretary or Administrator was conducted. The court may punish a refusal to obey an order of the court to comply with a subpena or order of the Secretary or Administrator as a contempt of court.

(c) The Secretary and the Administrator shall disclose information obtained under this chapter (except information obtained under section 32904(c) of this title) under section 552 of title 5. However, the Secretary or Administrator may withhold information under section 552(b)(4) only if the Secretary or Administrator decides that disclosure of the information would cause significant competitive damage. A matter referred to in section 552(b)(4) and relevant to an administrative or judicial proceeding under this chapter may be disclosed in that proceeding. A measurement or calculation under section 32904(c) of this title shall be disclosed under section 552 of title 5 without regard to section 552(b).

(d) The Administrator may prescribe regulations to carry out duties of the Administrator under this chapter.

(a) A person may not fail to comply with this chapter and regulations and standards prescribed and orders issued under this chapter (except sections 32902, 32903, 32908(b), and 32917(b) and regulations and standards prescribed and orders issued under those sections). The Secretary of Transportation shall conduct a proceeding, with an opportunity for a hearing on the record, to decide whether a person has violated this subsection. An interested person may participate in a proceeding under this subsection.

(b) A manufacturer of automobiles may not fail to comply with an applicable average fuel economy standard under section 32902 of this title. Compliance is determined after considering credits available to the manufacturer under section 32903 of this title. If average fuel economy calculations under section 32904(c) of this title indicate that a manufacturer has violated this subsection, the Secretary shall conduct a proceeding, with an opportunity for a hearing on the record, to decide whether this subsection has been violated. The Secretary may not conduct the proceeding if further measurements of fuel economy, further calculations of average fuel economy, or other information indicates this subsection has not been violated. The results of the measurements and calculations and the information shall be published in the Federal Register. An interested person may participate in a proceeding under this subsection.

(a) A person that violates section 32911(a) of this title is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $10,000 for each violation. A separate violation occurs for each day the violation continues.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section, a manufacturer that violates a standard prescribed for a model year under section 32902 of this title is liable to the Government for a civil penalty of $5 multiplied by each .1 of a mile a gallon by which the applicable average fuel economy standard under that section exceeds the average fuel economy—

(1)(A) calculated under section 32904(a)(1)(A) of this title for automobiles to which the standard applies manufactured by the manufacturer during the model year;

(B) multiplied by the number of those automobiles; and

(C) reduced by the credits available to the manufacturer under section 32903 of this title for the model year; and

(2)(A) calculated under section 32904(a)(1)(B) of this title for passenger automobiles manufactured by the manufacturer during the model year;

(B) multiplied by the number of those automobiles; and

(C) reduced by the credits available to the manufacturer under section 32903 of this title for the model year.

(c)(1)(A) The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe by regulation a higher amount for each .1 of a mile a gallon to be used in calculating a civil penalty under subsection (b) of this section, if the Secretary decides that the increase in the penalty—

(i) will result in, or substantially further, substantial energy conservation for automobiles in model years in which the increased penalty may be imposed; and

(ii) will not have a substantial deleterious impact on the economy of the United States, a State, or a region of a State.

(B) The amount prescribed under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph may not be more than $10 for each .1 of a mile a gallon.

(C) The Secretary may make a decision under subparagraph (A)(ii) of this paragraph only when the Secretary decides that it is likely that the increase in the penalty will not—

(i) cause a significant increase in unemployment in a State or a region of a State;

(ii) adversely affect competition; or

(iii) cause a significant increase in automobile imports.

(D) A higher amount prescribed under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph is effective for the model year beginning at least 18 months after the regulation stating the higher amount becomes final.

(2) The Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register a proposed regulation under this subsection and a statement of the basis for the regulation and provide each manufacturer of automobiles a copy of the proposed regulation and the statement. The Secretary shall provide a period of at least 45 days for written public comments on the proposed regulation. The Secretary shall submit a copy of the proposed regulation to the Federal Trade Commission and request the Commission to comment on the proposed regulation within that period. After that period, the Secretary shall give interested persons and the Commission an opportunity at a public hearing to present oral information, views, and arguments and to direct questions about disputed issues of material fact to—

(A) other interested persons making oral presentations;

(B) employees and contractors of the Government that made written comments or an oral presentation or participated in the development or consideration of the proposed regulation; and

(C) experts and consultants that provided information to a person that the person includes, or refers to, in an oral presentation.

(3) The Secretary may restrict the questions of an interested person and the Commission when the Secretary decides that the questions are duplicative or not likely to result in a timely and effective resolution of the issues. A transcript shall be kept of a public hearing under this subsection. A copy of the transcript and written comments shall be available to the public at the cost of reproduction.

(4) The Secretary shall publish a regulation prescribed under this subsection in the Federal Register with the decisions required under paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(5) An officer or employee of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government violates section 1905 of title 18 by disclosing, except in an in camera proceeding by the Secretary or a court, information—

(A) provided to the Secretary or the court during consideration or review of a regulation prescribed under this subsection; and

(B) decided by the Secretary to be confidential under section 11(d) of the Energy Supply and Environmental Coordination Act of 1974 (15 U.S.C. 796(d)).

(d) The Secretary shall impose a penalty under this section by written notice.

§ 32913. Compromising penalties

(a) The Secretary of Transportation may compromise or remit a civil penalty imposed under section 32912(a) or (b) of this title. However, a penalty imposed under section 32912(b) may be compromised or remitted only to the extent—

(1) necessary to prevent the insolvency or bankruptcy of the manufacturer of automobiles;

(2) the manufacturer shows that the violation was caused by an act of God, a strike, or a fire; or

(3) the Federal Trade Commission certifies under subsection (b)(1) of this section that a reduction in the penalty is necessary to prevent a substantial lessening of competition.

(b)(1) A manufacturer liable for a civil penalty under section 32912(b) of this title may apply to the Commission for a certification that the penalty should be reduced to prevent a substantial lessening of competition in the segment of the motor vehicle industry subject to the standard that was violated. The Commission shall make the certification when if finds that reduction is necessary to prevent the lessening. The Commission shall state in the certification the maximum amount by which the penalty may be reduced.

(2) An application under this subsection must be made not later than 30 days after the Secretary decides that the manufacturer has violated section 32911(b) of this title. To the maximum extent practicable, the Commission shall make a decision on an application by the 90th day after the application is filed. A proceeding under this subsection may not delay the manufacturer's liability for the penalty for more than 90 days after the application is filed.

(3) When a penalty is collected in a civil action under this chapter before a decision of the Commission under this subsection is final, the payment shall be paid to the court in which the action was brought. The court shall deposit the payment in the general fund of the Treasury on the 90th day after the decision of the Commission becomes final. When the court is holding payment of a penalty reduced under subsection (a)(3) of this section, the Secretary shall direct the court to remit the appropriate amount of the penalty to the manufacturer.

(a) If a person does not pay a civil penalty after it becomes a final order of the Secretary of Transportation or a judgment of a court of appeals of the United States for a circuit, the Attorney General shall bring a civil action in the appropriate district court of the United States to collect the penalty. The validity and appropriateness of the final order imposing the penalty is not reviewable in the action.

(b) A claim of a creditor against a bankrupt or insolvent manufacturer of automobiles has priority over a claim of the United States Government against the manufacturer for a civil penalty under section 32912(b) of this title when the creditor's claim is for credit extended before a final judgment (without regard to section 32913(b)(1) and (2) of this title) in an action to collect under subsection (a) of this section.

§ 32915. Appeal of a civil penalty

An interested person may appeal a decision of the Secretary of Transportation to impose a civil penalty under section 32912(a) or (b) of this title, or of the Federal Trade Commission under section 32913(b)(1) of this title, in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit or in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the person resides or has its principal place of business. A person appealing a decision must file a notice of appeal with the court not later than 30 days after the decision and, at the same time, send a copy of the notice by certified mail to the Secretary or the Commission. The Secretary or the Commission immediately shall file with the court a certified copy of the record of the proceeding in which the decision was made.

§ 32916. Reports to Congress

(a) Not later than January 15 of each year, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit to each House of Congress, and publish in the Federal Register, a report on the review by the Secretary of average fuel economy standards prescribed under this chapter.

(b)(1) After an exemption has been granted under section 32904(b)(4) of this title, the Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of Labor annually shall conduct a joint examination of the extent to which section 32904(b)(4)—

(A) achieves the purposes of this chapter;

(B) improves fuel efficiency (thereby facilitating conservation of petroleum and reducing petroleum imports);

(C) has promoted employment in the United States related to automobile manufacturing;

(D) has not caused unreasonable harm to the automobile manufacturing sector in the United States; and

(E) has permitted manufacturers that have assembled passenger automobiles deemed domestically manufactured under section 32904(b)(1)(A) of this title thereafter to assemble in the United States passenger automobiles of the same model that have less than 75 percent of their value added in the United States or Canada, together with the reasons.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall include the results of the examination under paragraph (1) of this subsection in each report submitted under subsection (a) of this section more than 180 days after an exemption has been granted under section 32904(b)(4) of this title, or submit the results of the examination directly to Congress before the report is submitted when circumstances warrant.

(a)(1) When an average fuel economy standard prescribed under this chapter is in effect, a State or a political subdivision of a State may not adopt or enforce a law or regulation on fuel economy standards or average fuel economy standards for automobiles covered by an average fuel economy standard under this chapter.

(2) When a requirement under section 32908 of this title is in effect, a State or a political subdivision of a State may adopt or enforce a law or regulation on disclosure of fuel economy or fuel operating costs for an automobile covered by section 32908 only if the law or regulation is identical to that requirement. However, a State or a political subdivision of a State may prescribe a standard for fuel economy for automobiles obtained for its own use.

(b)(1) The President shall prescribe regulations that require passenger automobiles leased for at least 60 consecutive days or bought by an executive agency (as defined in section 105 of title 5) in a fiscal year to achieve a fleet average fuel economy (determined under paragraph (2) of this subsection) for that year of at least the greater of—

(A) 18 miles a gallon; or

(B) the applicable average fuel economy standard under section 32902(b) or (c) of this title for the model year that includes January 1 of that fiscal year.

(2) Fleet average fuel economy is—

(A) the number of passenger automobiles leased for at least 60 consecutive days or bought by an executive agency in a fiscal year (except automobiles designed for combat-related missions, law enforcement work, or emergency rescue work); divided by

(B) the sum of the fractions obtained by dividing the number of automobiles of each model leased or bought by the fuel economy of that model.

In this chapter—

(1) "covered major part" means a major part selected under sections 33102(d)(1)(B) and 33103 of this title for coverage by the vehicle theft prevention standard prescribed under section 33102.

(2) "existing line" means a line introduced into commerce before January 1, 1983.

(3) "first purchaser" means the person making the first purchase other than for resale.

(4) "line" means a name that a manufacturer of motor vehicles applies to a group of motor vehicle models of the same make that have the same body or chassis, or otherwise are similar in construction or design.

(5) "major part" means—

(A) the engine;

(B) the transmission;

(C) each door to the passenger compartment;

(D) the hood;

(E) the grille;

(F) each bumper;

(G) each front fender;

(H) the deck lid, tailgate, or hatchback;

(I) each rear quarter panel;

(J) the trunk floor pan;

(K) the frame or, for a unitized body, the supporting structure serving as the frame; and

(L) any other part of a passenger motor vehicle that the Secretary of Transportation by regulation specifies as comparable in design or function to any of the parts listed in subclauses (A)-(K) of this clause.

(6) "major replacement part" means a major part—

(A) not installed in or on a motor vehicle at the time of its delivery to the first purchaser; and

(B) the equitable or legal title to which has not been transferred to a first purchaser.

(7) "model year" has the same meaning given that term in section 32901(a)(14) of this title.

(8) "new line" means a line introduced into commerce after December 31, 1982.

(9) "passenger motor vehicle" does not include a multipurpose passenger vehicle (including a vehicle commonly known as a "passenger van").

(10) "vehicle theft prevention standard" means a minimum performance standard for identifying major parts of new motor vehicles and major replacement parts by inscribing or affixing numbers or symbols on those parts.

§ 33102. Theft prevention standard

(b)(1) The standard shall apply to—

(A) the covered major parts that manufacturers install in passenger motor vehicles in lines designated under section 33103 of this title as high theft lines; and

(B) the major replacement parts for the major parts described in clause (A) of this paragraph.

(2) The standard may apply only to—

(A) major parts that manufacturers install in passenger motor vehicles having a model year designation later than the calendar year in which the standard takes effect; and

(B) major replacement parts manufactured after the standard takes effect.

(c) The standard shall be practicable and provide relevant objective criteria.

(d)(1) For a major part installed by the manufacturer of the motor vehicle, the standard may not require—

(A) a part to have more than one identification; or

(B) a motor vehicle to have identification of more than 14 of its major parts.

(2) For a major replacement part, the standard may not require—

(A) identification of a part not designed as a replacement for a major part required to be identified under the standard; or

(B) the inscribing or affixing of identification except a symbol identifying the manufacturer and a common symbol identifying the part as a major replacement part.

(e) This chapter does not authorize the Secretary to require a person to keep records or make reports, except as provided in sections 33103(c), 33105(c), 33106(a), and 33112 of this title.

§ 33103. Designation of high theft vehicle lines and parts

(A) a passenger motor vehicle line determined under subsection (b) of this section to have had a new passenger motor vehicle theft rate in the 2-year period covering calendar years 1983 and 1984 greater than the median theft rate for all new passenger motor vehicles in that 2-year period.

(B) a passenger motor vehicle line initially introduced into commerce in the United States after December 31, 1982, that is selected under paragraph (3) of this subsection as likely to have a theft rate greater than the median theft rate referred to in clause (A) of this paragraph.

(C) subject to paragraph (2) of this subsection, a passenger motor vehicle line having (for existing lines) or likely to have (for new lines) a theft rate below the median theft rate referred to in clause (A) of this paragraph, if the major parts in the vehicles are selected under paragraph (3) of this subsection as interchangeable with the majority of the major parts that are subject to the standard and are contained in the motor vehicles of a line described in clause (A) or (B) of this paragraph.

(2) The standard may not apply to any major part of a line described in paragraph (1)(C) of this subsection if all the passenger motor vehicles of lines that are, or are likely to be, below the median theft rate, and that contain parts interchangeable with the major parts of the line involved, account (for existing lines), or the Secretary of Transportation determines they are likely to account (for new lines), for more than 90 percent of the total annual production of all lines of that manufacturer containing those interchangeable parts.

(3) The lines, and the major parts of the passenger motor vehicles in those lines, that are to be subject to the standard may be selected by agreement between the manufacturer and the Secretary. If the manufacturer and the Secretary disagree on the selection, the Secretary shall select the lines and parts, after notice to the manufacturer and opportunity for written comment, and subject to the confidentiality requirements of this chapter.

(4) To the maximum extent practicable, the Secretary shall prescribe reasonable procedures designed to ensure that a selection under paragraph (3) of this subsection is made at least 6 months before the first applicable model year beginning after the selection.

(5) A manufacturer may not be required to comply with the standard under a selection under paragraph (3) of this subsection for a model year beginning earlier than 6 months after the date of the selection.

(b)(1) In this subsection, "new passenger motor vehicle thefts", when used in reference to a calendar year, means thefts in the United States in that year of passenger motor vehicles with the same model-year designation as that calendar year.

(2) Under subsection (a) of this section, the theft rate for passenger motor vehicles of a line shall be determined by a fraction—

(A) the numerator of which is the number of new passenger motor vehicle thefts for that line during the 2-year period referred to in subsection (a)(1)(A) of this section; and

(B) the denominator of which is the sum of the respective production volumes of all passenger motor vehicles of that line (as reported to the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency under chapter 329 of this title) that are of model years 1983 and 1984 and are distributed for sale in commerce in the United States.

(3) Under subsection (a) of this section, the median theft rate for all new passenger motor vehicle thefts during that 2-year period is the theft rate midway between the highest and the lowest theft rates determined under paragraph (2) of this subsection. If there is an even number of theft rates determined under paragraph (2), the median theft rate is the arithmetic average of the 2 adjoining theft rates midway between the highest and the lowest of those theft rates.

(4) In consultation with the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Secretary periodically shall obtain from the most reliable source accurate and timely theft and recovery information and publish the information for review and comment. To the greatest extent possible, the Secretary shall use theft information reported by United States Government, State, and local police. After publication and opportunity for comment, the Secretary shall use the theft information to determine the median theft rate under this subsection. The Secretary and the Director shall take any necessary actions to improve the accuracy, reliability, and timeliness of the information, including ensuring that vehicles represented as stolen are really stolen.

(5) In calculating the median theft rate, the Secretary shall include the theft rates of lines exempted from the initial selection of high theft lines required to have been made not later than October 25, 1985, under section 603(a)(3) of the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act (Public Law 92-513, 86 Stat. 947), as added by section 101(a) of the Motor Vehicle Theft Law Enforcement Act of 1984 (Public Law 98-547, 98 Stat. 2757).

(c) The Secretary by regulation shall require each manufacturer to provide information necessary to select under subsection (a)(3) of this section the high theft lines and the major parts to be subject to the standard.

(d) Except as provided in section 33105 of this title, the Secretary may not make the standard inapplicable to a line that has been subject to the standard.

§ 33104. Cost limitation

(a) The standard under section 33102 of this title may not impose—

(1) on a manufacturer of motor vehicles, compliance costs of more than $15 a motor vehicle; or

(2) on a manufacturer of major replacement parts, compliance costs for each part of more than the reasonable amount (but less than $15) that the Secretary of Transportation specifies in the standard.

(b) For a manufacturer engaged in identifying engines or transmissions on October 25, 1984, in a way that substantially complies with the standard—

(1) the costs of identifying engines and transmissions may not be considered in calculating the manufacturer's costs under subsection (a) of this section; and

(2) the manufacturer may not be required under the standard to conform to any identification system for engines and transmissions that imposes greater costs on the manufacturer than are incurred under the identification system used by the manufacturer on October 25, 1984.

(A) "base period" means calendar year 1984.

(B) "price index" means the average over a calendar year of the Consumer Price Index (all items—United States city average) published monthly by the Secretary of Labor.

(2) At the beginning of each calendar year, as necessary data become available from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the Secretary of Labor shall certify to the Secretary of Transportation and publish in the Federal Register the percentage difference between the price index for the 12 months before the beginning of the calendar year and the price index for the base period. For model years beginning in that calendar year, the amounts specified in subsection (a) of this section shall be adjusted by the percentage difference.

§ 33105. Exemption for passenger motor vehicles equipped with anti-theft devices

(a) In this section—

(1) "anti-theft device" means a device t reduce or deter theft that—

(A) is in addition to the theft-deterrent devices required by motor vehicle safety standard numbered 114 (49 C.F.R. 571.114);

(B) the manufacturer believes will be effective in reducing or deterring theft of motor vehicles; and

(C) does not use a signaling device reserved by State law for use on police, emergency, or official vehicles, or on schoolbuses

(2) "standard equipment" means equipment already installed in a motor vehicle when it is delivered from the manufacturer and not an accessory or other item that the first purchaser customarily has the option to have installed.

(b)(1) A manufacturer may petition the Secretary of Transportation for an exemption from a requirement of a standard prescribed under section 33102 of this title for a line of passenger motor vehicles equipped a standard equipment with an anti-thef device that the Secretary decides is likely t be as effective in reducing and deterrin motor vehicle theft as a device required b the standard.

(2) For model year 1987, the Secretary ma grant an exemption for not more than lines of a manufacturer. For each subsequent model year, the Secretary may gran an exemption for not more than 2 additional lines of a manufacturer. An additional ex emption does not affect an exemption previously granted.

(c) A petition must be filed not later than 8 months before the start of production for the first model year covered by the petition. The petition must include—

(1) a detailed description of the device;

(2) the reasons for the manufacturer's conclusion that the device will be effective in reducing and deterring theft of motor vehicles; and

(3) additional information the Secretary reasonably may require to make the decision described in subsection (b)(1) of this section.

(d) The Secretary shall make a decision about a petition filed under this section not later than 120 days after the date the petition is filed. A decision approving a petition must be based on substantial evidence. The Secretary may approve a petition in whole or in part. If the Secretary does not make a decision within the 120-day period, the petition shall be deemed to be approved and the manufacturer shall be exempt from the standard for the line covered by the petition for the subsequent model year.

(e) The Secretary may rescind an exemption if the Secretary decides that the antitheft device has not been as effective in reducing and deterring motor vehicle theft as compliance with the standard. A rescission may be effective only—

(1) for a model year after the model year in which the rescission occurs; and

(2) at least 6 months after the manufacturer receives written notice of the rescission from the Secretary.

§ 33106. Monitoring compliance of manufacturer

(a) To enable the Secretary of Transportation to decide whether a manufacturer of motor vehicles containing a part subject to a standard prescribed under section 33102 of this title, or a manufacturer of major replacement parts subject to the standard, is complying with this chapter and the standard, the Secretary may require the manufacturer to—

(1) keep records;

(2) make reports;

(3) provide items and information; and

(4) allow an officer or employee designated by the Secretary to inspect the vehicles and parts and relevant records of the manufacturer.

(b) To enforce this chapter, an officer or employee designated by the Secretary, on presenting appropriate credentials and a written notice to the owner, operator, or agent in charge, may inspect a facility in which motor vehicles containing major parts subject to the standard, or major replacement parts subject to the standard, are manufactured, held for introduction into interstate commerce, or held for sale after introduction into interstate commerce. An inspection shall be conducted at a reasonable time, in a reasonable way, and with reasonable promptness.

(c)(1) A manufacturer of a motor vehicle subject to the standard, and a manufacturer of a major replacement part subject to the standard, shall provide at the time of delivery of the vehicle or part a certification that the vehicle or part conforms to the applicable motor vehicle theft prevention standard. The certification shall accompany the vehicle or part until its delivery to the first purchaser. The Secretary by regulation may prescribe the type and form of the certification.

(2) This subsection does not apply to a motor vehicle or major replacement part that is—

(A) intended only for export;

(B) labeled only for export on the vehicle or replacement part and the outside of any container until exported; and

(C) exported.

(d) A manufacturer shall notify the Secretary if the manufacturer discovers that—

(1) there is an error in the identification (required by the standard) applied to a major part installed by the manufacturer in a motor vehicle during its assembly, or to a major replacement part manufactured by the manufacturer; and

(2) the motor vehicle or major replacement part has entered interstate commerce.

§ 33107. Prohibited acts

(a) A person may not—

(1) manufacture for sale, sell, offer for sale, introduce or deliver for introduction in interstate commerce, or import into the United States, a motor vehicle or major replacement part subject to a standard prescribed under section 33102 of this title, unless it conforms to the standard;

(2) fail to comply with a regulation prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation under this chapter;

(3) fail to keep specified records, refuse access to or copying of records, fail to make reports or provide items or information, or fail or refuse to allow entry or inspection, as required by this chapter; or

(4) fail to provide the certification required by section 33106(c) of this title, or provide a certification that the person knows, or in the exercise of reasonable care has reason to know, is false or misleading in a material respect.

(b) Subsection (a)(1) of this section does not apply to a person establishing that in the exercise of reasonable care the person did not have reason to know that the motor vehicle or major replacement part was not in conformity with the standard.

§ 33108. Enforcement and penalties

(a)(1) A person that violates section 33107 of this title is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $1,000 for each violation. The failure of more than one part of a single motor vehicle to conform to an applicable standard under section 33102 of this title is only a single violation. A person is liable for a civil penalty under this subsection of not more than $250,000 for a related series of violations.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation may impose a penalty under this section. The Secretary may compromise a penalty. In deciding on a penalty or compromise, the Secretary shall consider the size of the person's business and the gravity of the violation.

(3) The Attorney General shall bring a civil action to collect a penalty imposed under this section.

(4) A penalty or amount compromised may be deducted from amounts owed the person by the Government.

(b)(1) The Attorney General may bring a civil action to enjoin a violation of this chapter or the sale, offer for sale, introduction or delivery for introduction in interstate commerce, or importation into the United States, of a passenger motor vehicle containing a major part, or of a major replacement part, that is subject to the standard and is determined before the sale of the vehicle or part to a first purchaser not to conform to the standard.

(2)(A) When practicable, the Secretary—

(i) shall notify a person against whom an action under this subsection is planned;

(ii) shall give the person an opportunity to present that person's views; and

(iii) except for a knowing and willful violation, shall give the person a reasonable opportunity to comply.

(B) The failure of the Secretary to comply with subparagraph (A) of this paragraph does not prevent a court from granting appropriate relief.

(c) In a trial for criminal contempt for violating an injunction or restraining order issued under subsection (b) of this section, the violation of which is also a violation of this chapter, the defendant may demand a jury trial. The defendant shall be tried as provided in rule 42(b) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (18 App. U.S.C.).

(d) A civil action under subsection (a) or (b) of this section may be brought in the United States district court for the judicial district in which the violation occurred or the defendant resides, is found, or transacts business. Process in the action may be served in any other judicial district in which the defendant resides or is found. A subpena for a witness in the action may be served in any judicial district.

§ 33109. Confidentiality of information

(a) Information obtained by the Secretary of Transportation under this chapter related to a confidential matter referred to in section 1905 of title 18 may be disclosed only—

(1) to another officer or employee of the United States Government for use in carrying out this chapter; or

(2) in a proceeding under this chapter (except a proceeding under section 33103(a)(3)).

(b) This section does not authorize information to be withheld from a committee of Congress authorized to have the information.

§ 33110. Judicial review

A person that may be adversely affected by a regulation prescribed under this chapter may obtain judicial review of the regulation under section 32909 of this title. A remedy under this section is in addition to any other remedies provided by law.

§ 33111. Preemption of State and local law

When a motor vehicle theft prevention standard prescribed under section 33102 of this title is in effect, a State or political subdivision of a State may not have a different motor vehicle theft prevention standard for a motor vehicle or major replacement part.

§ 33112. Insurance reports and information

(a) The purposes of this section are—

(1) to prevent or discourage the theft of motor vehicles, particularly those stolen for the removal of certain parts;

(2) to prevent or discourage the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of used parts that are removed from those vehicles; and

(3) to help reduce the cost to consumers of comprehensive insurance coverage for motor vehicles.

(b) In this section—

(1) "insurer" includes a person (except a governmental authority) having a fleet of at least 20 motor vehicles that are used primarily for rental and are not covered by a theft insurance policy issued by an insurer of passenger motor vehicles.

(2) "motor vehicle" includes a truck, a multipurpose passenger vehicle, and a motorcycle.

(c)(1) An insurer providing comprehensive coverage for motor vehicles shall provide annually to the Secretary of Transportation information on—

(A) the thefts and recoveries (in any part) of motor vehicles;

(B) the number of vehicles that have been recovered intact;

(C) the rating rules and plans, such as loss information and rating characteristics, used by the insurer to establish premiums for comprehensive coverage, including the basis for the premiums, and premium penalties for motor vehicles considered by the insurer as more likely to be stolen;

(D) the actions taken by the insurer to reduce the premiums, including changing rate levels for comprehensive coverage because of a reduction in thefts of motor vehicles;

(E) the actions taken by the insurer to assist in deterring or reducing thefts of motor vehicles; and

(F) other information the Secretary requires to carry out this chapter and to make the report and findings required by this chapter.

(2) The information on thefts and recoveries shall include an explanation on how the information is obtained, the accuracy and timeliness of the information, and the use made of the information, including the extent and frequency of reporting the information to national, public, and private entities such as the Federal Bureau of Investigation and State and local police.

(d) An insurer shall report promptly in writing to the Secretary if the insurer, in paying a claim under an adjustment or negotiation between the insurer and the insured for a stolen motor vehicle—

(1) reduces the payment to the insured by the amount of the value, salvage or otherwise, of a recovered part subject to a standard prescribed under section 33102 of this title; and

(2) the reduction is not made at the express election of the insured.

(e) The Secretary shall exempt from this section, for one or more years, an insurer that the Secretary decides should be exempted because—

(1) the cost of preparing and providing the information is excessive in relation to the size of the insurer's business; and

(2) the information from that insurer will not contribute significantly to carrying out this chapter.

(f)(1) In this subsection, "small insurer" means an insurer whose premiums for motor vehicle insurance issued directly or through an affiliate, including a pooling arrangement established under State law or regulation for the issuance of motor vehicle insurance, account for—

(A) less than one percent of the total premiums for all forms of motor vehicle insurance issued by insurers in the United States; and

(B) less than 10 percent of the total premiums for all forms of motor vehicle insurance issued by insurers in any State.

(2) The Secretary by regulation shall exempt a small insurer from this section if the Secretary finds that the exemption will not significantly affect the validity or usefulness of the information collected and compiled under this section, nationally or State-by-State. However, the Secretary may not exempt an insurer under this paragraph that is considered an insurer only because of subsection (b)(1) of this section.

(3) Regulations under this subsection shall provide that eligibility as a small insurer shall be based on the most recent calendar year for which adequate information is available, and that, once attained, the eligibility shall continue without further demonstration of eligibility for one or more years, as the Secretary considers appropriate.

(g) Information required by this section shall be provided in the form the Secretary requires.

(h) Subject to section 552 of title 5, the Secretary periodically shall compile and publish information obtained by the Secretary under this section, in a form that will be helpful to the public, the police, and Congress.

(i) In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall consult with public and private agencies and associations the Secretary considers appropriate.

§ 33113. Voluntary vehicle identification standards

(a) The Secretary of Transportation by regulation may prescribe a vehicle theft prevention standard under which a person may elect to inscribe or affix an identifying number or symbol on major parts of a motor vehicle manufactured or owned by the person for purposes of section 511 of title 18 and related provisions. The standard may include provisions for registration of the identification with the Secretary or a person designated by the Secretary.

(b) The standard under this section shall be practicable and provide relevant objective criteria.

(c) Compliance with the standard under this section is voluntary. Failure to comply does not subject a person to a penalty or enforcement under this chapter.

(d) Compliance with the standard under this section does not relieve a manufacturer from a requirement of a standard prescribed under section 33102 of this title.

§ 40101. Policy

(a) In carrying out subpart II of this part, the Secretary of Transportation shall consider the following matters, among others, as being in the public interest and consistent with public convenience and necessity:

(1) the assignment and maintenance of safety as the highest priority in air commerce.

(2) before authorizing new air transportation services, the complete evaluation of—

(A) each recommendation of the Secretary on the safety implications of those services; and

(B) each report and recommendation submitted under section 44721 of this title.

(3) the prevention of deterioration in established safety procedures in air transportation and air commerce.

(4) the availability of a variety of adequate, economic, efficient, and low-priced services without unreasonable discrimination or unfair or deceptive practices.

(5) the coordination of transportation and improvement of relations among air carriers and the encouragement of fair wages and working conditions.

(6) the placement of maximum reliance on competitive market forces and on actual and potential competition—

(A) to provide the needed air transportation system; and

(B) to encourage efficient and well-managed air carriers to earn adequate profits and attract capital, considering material differences between interstate air transportation and foreign air transportation.

(7) the development and maintenance of a sound regulatory system that is responsive to the needs of the public and in which decisions are reached promptly to make it easier to adapt the air transportation system to the present and future needs of—

(A) the commerce of the United States;

(B) the United States Postal Service; and

(C) national defense.

(8) the encouragement of air transportation at major urban areas through secondary or satellite airports if consistent with regional airport plans of regional and local authorities and endorsed by appropriate State authorities—

(A) encouraging the transportation by air carriers that provide transportation exclusively at those airports; and

(B) fostering an environment that allows those carriers to establish themselves and develop secondary or satellite airport services.

(9) the prevention of unfair, deceptive, predatory, or anticompetitive practices in air transportation.

(10) the avoidance of unreasonable industry concentration, excessive market domination, monopoly powers, and other conditions that may allow at least one air carrier or foreign air carrier unreasonably to increase rates, reduce services, or exclude competition in air transportation.

(11) the maintenance of a complete and convenient system of continuous scheduled interstate air transportation for small communities and isolated areas with direct financial assistance from the United States Government when appropriate.

(12) the encouragement, development, and maintenance of an air transportation system relying on actual and potential competition—

(A) to provide efficiency, innovation, and low rates; and

(B) to establish the variety of, quality of, and rates for, air transportation services.

(13) the encouragement of entry into air transportation markets by new and existing air carriers and the continued strengthening of small air carriers to ensure a more effective and competitive airline industry.

(14) the promotion, encouragement, and development of civil aeronautics and a viable, privately-owned United States air transport industry.

(15) the strengthening of the competitive position of air carriers to at least ensure equality with foreign air carriers, including giving air carriers the opportunity to maintain and increase their profitability in foreign air transportation.

(b) In carrying out subpart II of this part, the Secretary of Transportation shall consider the following matters, among others and in addition to the matters referred to in subsection (a) of this section, as being in the public interest for all-cargo air transportation:

(1) the encouragement and development of an expedited all-cargo air transportation system provided by private enterprise and responsive to—

(A) the present and future needs of shippers;

(B) the commerce of the United States; and

(C) national defense.

(2) the encouragement and development of an integrated transportation system relying on competitive market forces to decide the extent, variety, quality, and price of services provided.

(3) providing services without unreasonable discrimination, unfair or deceptive practices, or predatory pricing.

(c) In carrying out subpart III of this part, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall consider the following matters:

(1) the requirements of national defense and commercial and general aviation.

(2) the public right of freedom of transit through the navigable airspace.

(d) In carrying out subpart III of this part, the Administrator shall consider the following matters, among others, as being in the public interest:

(1) the regulation of air commerce in a way that best promotes its development and safety and fulfills national defense requirements.

(2) the promotion, encouragement, and development of civil aeronautics.

(3) the control of the use of the navigable airspace and the regulation of civil and military operations in that airspace in the interest of the safety and efficiency of both of those operations.

(4) the consolidation of research and development of air navigation facilities and the installation and operation of those facilities.

(5) the development and operation of a common system of air traffic control and navigation for military and civil aircraft.

(6) the provision of assistance to law enforcement agencies in the enforcement of laws related to regulation of controlled substances, to the extent consistent with aviation safety.

(e) In formulating United States international air transportation policy, the Secretaries of State and Transportation shall develop a negotiating policy emphasizing the greatest degree of competition compatible with a well-functioning international air transportation system, including the following:

(1) the strengthening of the competitive position of air carriers to ensure at least equality with foreign air carriers, including giving air carriers the opportunity to maintain and increase their profitability in foreign air transportation.

(2) freedom of air carriers and foreign air carriers to offer rates that correspond to consumer demand.

(3) the fewest possible restrictions on charter air transportation.

(4) the maximum degree of multiple and permissive international authority for air carriers so that they will be able to respond quickly to a shift in market demand.

(5) the elimination of operational and marketing restrictions to the greatest extent possible.

(6) the integration of domestic and international air transportation.

(7) an increase in the number of nonstop United States gateway cities.

(8) opportunities for carriers of foreign countries to increase their access to places in the United States if exchanged for benefits of similar magnitude for air carriers or the traveling public with permanent linkage between rights granted and rights given away.

(9) the elimination of discrimination and unfair competitive practices faced by United States airlines in foreign air transportation, including—

(A) excessive landing and user fees;

(B) unreasonable ground handling requirements;

(C) unreasonable restrictions on operations;

(D) prohibitions against change of gauge; and

(E) similar restrictive practices.

(10) the promotion, encouragement, and development of civil aeronautics and a viable, privately-owned United States air transport industry.

§ 40102. Definitions

(a) In this part—

(1) "aeronautics" means the science and art of flight.

(2) "air carrier" means a citizen of the United States undertaking, directly or indirectly, to provide air transportation by any means.

(3) "air commerce" means foreign air commerce, interstate air commerce, the transportation of mail by aircraft, the operation of aircraft within the limits of a Federal airway, or the operation of aircraft that directly affects, or may endanger safety in, foreign or interstate air commerce.

(4) "air navigation facility" means a facility used, available for use, or designed for use, in aid of air navigation, including—

(A) a landing area;

(B) a light;

(C) apparatus or equipment for distributing weather information, signaling, radio-directional finding, or radio or other electrical communication; and

(D) another structure or mechanism for guiding or controlling flight in the air or the landing and takeoff of aircraft.

(5) "air transportation" means foreign air transportation, interstate air transportation, or the transportation of mail by aircraft.

(6) "aircraft" means any contrivance invented, used, or designed to navigate, or fly in, the air.

(7) "aircraft engine" means an engine used, or intended to be used, to propel an aircraft, including a part, appurtenance, and accessory of the engine, except a propeller.

(8) "airman" means an individual who—

(A) when in command or as pilot, mechanic, or member of the crew, navigates aircraft when under way;

(B) except to the extent the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may provide otherwise for individuals employed outside the United States, is directly in charge of inspecting, maintaining, overhauling, or repairing aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, or appliances; or

(C) serves as an aircraft dispatcher or air traffic control-tower operator.

(9) "airport" means a landing area used regularly by aircraft for receiving or discharging passengers or property.

(10) "all-cargo air transportation" means the transportation by aircraft in interstate air transportation of only property or only mail, or both.

(11) "appliance" means an instrument, equipment, apparatus, a part, an appurtenance, or an accessory used, capable of being used, or intended to be used, in operating or controlling aircraft in flight, including a parachute, communication equipment, and another mechanism installed in or attached to aircraft during flight, and not a part of an aircraft, aircraft engine, or propeller.

(12) "charter air carrier" means an air carrier that holds a certificate of public convenience and necessity that authorizes it to provide charter air transportation.

(13) "charter air transportation" means charter trips in air transportation authorized under this part.

(14) "citizen of the United States" means—

(A) an individual who is a citizen of the United States;

(B) a partnership each of whose partners is a citizen of the United States; or

(C) a corporation or association organized under the laws of the United States or a State, the District of Columbia, or a territory or possession of the United States, of which the president and at least two-thirds of the board of directors and other managing officers are citizens of the United States, and in which at least 75 percent of the voting interest is owned or controlled by persons that are citizens of the United States.

(15) "civil aircraft" means an aircraft except a public aircraft.

(16) "civil aircraft of the United States" means an aircraft registered under subchapter I of chapter 441 of this title.

(17) "conditional sale" means—

(A) a contract for the sale of an aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, appliance, or spare part, under which the person making the contract to buy the property takes possession of the property but title to the property vests in that person at a later time on—

(i) paying any part of the purchase price;

(ii) performing another condition; or

(iii) the happening of a contingency; or

(B) a contract to bail or lease an aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, appliance, or spare part, under which the person making the bailment or lease for the property—

(i) agrees to pay an amount substantially equal to the value of the property; and

(ii) is to become, or has the option of becoming, the owner of the property on complying with the contract.

(18) "conveyance" means an instrument affecting title to, or an interest in, property.

(19) "Federal airway" means a part of the navigable airspace designated by the Administrator as a Federal airway.

(20) "foreign air carrier" means a person, not a citizen of the United States, that undertakes, directly or indirectly, to provide foreign air transportation by any means.

(21) "foreign air commerce" means the transportation of passengers or property by aircraft for compensation, the transportation of mail by aircraft, or the operation of aircraft in furthering a business or vocation, between a place in the United States and a place outside the United States when any part of the transportation or operation is by aircraft.

(22) "foreign air transportation" means the transportation of passengers or property by aircraft as a common carrier for compensation, or the transportation of mail by aircraft, between a place in the United States and a place outside the United States when any part of the transportation is by aircraft.

(23) "interstate air commerce" means the transportation of passengers or property by aircraft for compensation, the transportation of mail by aircraft, or the operation of aircraft in furthering a business or vocation—

(A) between a place in—

(i) a State, territory, or possession of the United States and a place in the District of Columbia or another State, territory, or possession of the United States;

(ii) a State and another place in the same State through the airspace over a place outside the State;

(iii) the District of Columbia and another place in the District of Columbia; or

(iv) a territory or possession of the United States and another place in the same territory or possession; and

(B) when any part of the transportation or operation is by aircraft.

(24) "interstate air transportation" means the transportation of passengers or property by aircraft as a common carrier for compensation, or the transportation of mail by aircraft—

(A) between a place in—

(i) a State, territory, or possession of the United States and a place in the District of Columbia or another State, territory, or possession of the United States;

(ii) Hawaii and another place in Hawaii through the airspace over a place outside Hawaii;

(iii) the District of Columbia and another place in the District of Columbia; or

(iv) a territory or possession of the United States and another place in the same territory or possession; and

(B) when any part of the transportation is by aircraft.

(25) "intrastate air carrier" means a citizen of the United States undertaking to provide only intrastate air transportation by any means.

(26) "intrastate air transportation" means the transportation by a common carrier of passengers or property for compensation, entirely in the same State, by turbojet-powered aircraft capable of carrying at least 30 passengers.

(27) "landing area" means a place on land or water, including an airport or intermediate landing field, used, or intended to be used, for the takeoff and landing of aircraft, even when facilities are not provided for sheltering, servicing, or repairing aircraft, or for receiving or discharging passengers or property.

(28) "mail" means United States mail and foreign transit mail.

(29) "navigable airspace" means airspace above the minimum altitudes of flight prescribed by regulations under subpart III of this part, including airspace needed to ensure safety in the takeoff and landing of aircraft.

(30) "navigate aircraft" and "navigation of aircraft" include the piloting of aircraft.

(31) "operate aircraft" and "operation of aircraft" mean using aircraft for air navigation, including—

(A) the navigation of aircraft; and

(B) causing or authorizing the operation of aircraft (with or without the right of legal control) as an owner, lessee, or otherwise of the aircraft.

(32) "person", in addition to its meaning under section 1 of title 1, includes a governmental authority, trustee, receiver, assignee, or personal representative of a person.

(33) "predatory" means a practice that violates the antitrust laws as defined in the first section of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. 12).

(34) "propeller" includes a part, appurtenance, or accessory of a propeller.

(35) "public aircraft"—

(A) means an aircraft—

(i) used only for the United States Government; or

(ii) owned and operated, or exclusively leased for at least 90 continuous days, by a government (except the United States Government) or political subdivision of that government, including a State, the District of Columbia, or a territory or possession of the United States; but

(B) does not include a government-owned aircraft transporting passengers or property for commercial purposes.

(36) "rate" means a rate, fare, or charge for air transportation.

(37) "spare part" means a part, appurtenance, or accessory of an aircraft (except an aircraft engine or propeller), aircraft engine (except a propeller), propeller, or appliance, that is to be installed at a later time in an aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, or appliance.

(38) "State authority" means an authority of a State designated under State law—

(A) to receive notice required to be given a State authority under subpart II of this part; or

(B) as the representative of the State before the Secretary of Transportation in any matter about which the Secretary is required to consult with or consider the views of a State authority under subpart II of this part.

(39) "territory or possession of the United States" means—

(A) the Canal Zone, but this definition does not affect the jurisdiction of the President over air navigation in the Canal Zone; and

(B) any other territory or possession of the United States.

(40) "ticket agent" means a person (except an air carrier, a foreign air carrier, or an employee of an air carrier or foreign air carrier) that as a principal or agent sells, offers for sale, negotiates for, or holds itself out as selling, providing, or arranging for, air transportation.

(41) "United States" means the States of the United States, the District of Columbia, and the territories and possessions of the United States, including territorial waters and airspace.

(b) In subpart II of this part, "control" means control by any means.

§ 40103. Sovereignty and use of airspace

(a)(1) The United States Government has exclusive sovereignty of its airspace, including the airspace above—

(A) its inland waters; and

(B) those parts of adjacent marginal high seas, bays, and lakes over which, by international law or international agreement, the Government exercises jurisdiction.

(2) A citizen of the United States has a public right of transit through the navigable airspace. To further that right, the Secretary of Transportation shall consult with the Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board established under section 502 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 792) before prescribing a regulation or issuing an order or procedure that will have a significant impact on the accessibility of commercial airports or commercial air transportation for handicapped individuals.

(b)(1) The Administrator of the Federa Aviation Administration shall develop plan and policy for the use of the navigable airspace and assign by regulation or order th use of the airspace necessary to ensure th safety of aircraft and the efficient use of airspace. The Administrator may change o revoke an assignment when required in th public interest.

(2) The Administrator shall prescribe ai traffic regulations on the flight of aircraf (including regulations on safe altitudes for—

(A) the navigation, protection, and identification of aircraft;

(B) the protection of individuals an property on the ground;

(C) the efficient use of the navigable airspace; and

(D) the prevention of collision betwee aircraft, between aircraft and land or wate vehicles, and between aircraft and airborn objects.

(3) To establish security provisions tha will encourage and allow maximum use o the airspace by civil aircraft consistent wit national security, the Administrator, in consultation with the Secretary of Defens shall—

(A) establish areas in the airspace the Administrator decides are necessary in the interest of national defense; and

(B) by regulation or order, restrict or prohibit flight of civil aircraft in those area that the Administrator cannot identif locate, and control.

(4) Notwithstanding the military exception in section 553(a)(1) of title 5, subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 5 applies to a regulation prescribed under this subsection.

(c) A foreign aircraft, not part of th armed forces of a foreign country, may b navigated in the United States as provide in section 41703 of this title.

(d) Aircraft of the armed forces of a foreign country may be navigated in th United States, including the Canal Zon only when authorized by the Secretary o State.

(e) A person does not have an exclusiv right to use an air navigation facility o which amounts of the Government hav been expended. However, providing servic at an airport by only one fixed-based operator is not an exclusive right if—

(1) it is unreasonably costly, burdensom or impractical for more than one fixed-bas operator to provide the services; and

(2) allowing more than one fixed-based operator to provide the services requires a reduction in space leased under an existing agreement between the operator and the airport.

§ 40104. Promotion of civil aeronautics and air commerce

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall encourage the development of civil aeronautics and air commerce in the United States and outside the United States. In carrying out this section, the Administrator shall establish, within available resources, a program to distribute civil aviation information in each region served by the Administration. The program shall provide, on request, information and expertise on civil aviation to State and local school administrators, college and university officials, and officers of other interested organizations.

§ 40105. International negotiations, agreements, and obligations

(a) The Secretary of State shall advise the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration and the Secretaries of Transportation and Commerce, and consult with them as appropriate, about negotiations for an agreement with a government of a foreign country to establish or develop air navigation, including air routes and services. The Secretary of Transportation shall consult with the Secretary of State in carrying out this part to the extent this part is related to foreign air transportation.

(b)(1) In carrying out this part, the Secretary of Transportation and the Administrator—

(A) shall act consistently with obligations of the United States Government under a treaty or agreement with the government of a foreign country;

(B) shall consider applicable laws and requirements of a foreign country; and

(C) may not limit compliance by an air carrier with obligations or liabilities imposed by the government of a foreign country when the Secretary takes any action related to a certificate of public convenience and necessity issued under chapter 411 of this title.

(2) This subsection does not apply to an agreement made between an air carrier or an officer or representative of an air carrier and the government of a foreign country, if the Secretary of Transportation disapproves the agreement because it is not in the public interest. Section 40106(b)(2) of this title applies to this subsection.

(c) In carrying out section 40101(e) of this title, the Secretaries of State and Transportation, to the maximum extent practicable, shall consult on broad policy goals and individual negotiations with—

(1) the Secretaries of Commerce and Defense;

(2) airport operators;

(3) scheduled air carriers;

(4) charter air carriers;

(5) airline labor;

(6) consumer interest groups;

(7) travel agents and tour organizers; and

(8) other groups, institutions, and governmental authorities affected by international aviation policy.

(d) The President shall grant to at least one representative of each House of Congress the privilege of attending international aviation negotiations as an observer if the privilege is requested in advance in writing.

§ 40106. Emergency powers

(a) Appropriate military authority may authorize aircraft of the armed forces to deviate from air traffic regulations prescribed under section 40103(b)(2) of this title when the authority decides the deviation is essential to the national defense because of a military emergency or urgent military necessity. The authority shall—

(1) give the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration prior notice of the deviation at the earliest practicable time; and

(2) to the extent time and circumstances allow, make every reasonable effort to consult with the Administrator and arrange for the deviation in advance on a mutually agreeable basis.

(b)(1) When the President decides that the government of a foreign country is acting inconsistently with the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft or that the government of a foreign country allows territory under its jurisdiction to be used as a base of operations or training of, or as a sanctuary for, or arms, aids, or abets, a terrorist organization that knowingly uses the unlawful seizure, or the threat of an unlawful seizure, of an aircraft as an instrument of policy, the President may suspend the authority of—

(A) an air carrier or foreign air carrier to provide foreign air transportation to and from that foreign country;

(B) a person to operate aircraft in foreign air commerce to and from that foreign country;

(C) a foreign air carrier to provide foreign air transportation between the United States and another country that maintains air service with the foreign country; and

(D) a foreign person to operate aircraft in foreign air commerce between the United States and another country that maintains air service with the foreign country.

(2) The President may act under this subsection without notice and without an opportunity for a proceeding. The suspension remains in effect for as long as the President decides is necessary to ensure the security of aircraft against unlawful seizure. Notwithstanding section 40105(b) of this title, the authority of the President to suspend rights under this subsection is a condition to a certificate of public convenience and necessity, air carrier operating certificate, foreign air carrier or foreign aircraft permit, or foreign air carrier operating specification issued by the Secretary of Transportation under this part.

(3) An air carrier or foreign air carrier may not provide foreign air transportation, and a person may not operate aircraft in foreign air commerce, in violation of this subsection.

§ 40107. Presidential transfers

(a) The President may transfer to the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration a duty, power, activity, or facility of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the executive branch of the United States Government, or an officer or unit of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the executive branch, related primarily to selecting, developing, testing, evaluating, establishing, operating, or maintaining a system, procedure, facility, or device for safe and efficient air navigation and air traffic control. In making a transfer, the President may transfer records and property and make officers and employees from the department, agency, instrumentality, or unit available to the Administrator.

(b) If war occurs, the President by executive order may transfer to the Secretary of Defense a duty, power, activity, or facility of the Administrator. In making the transfer, the President may transfer records, property, officers, and employees of the Administration to the Department of Defense.

§ 40108. Aviation training schools

(a) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may operate a school to train officers and employees of the Administration in carrying out duties and powers carried out by the Administrator.

(b) The Administrator may authorize other officers and employees of the United States Government, officers and employees of governments of foreign countries, and individuals from the aeronautics industry to attend those schools. However, if the attendance of any of those officers, employees, and individuals increases the cost of operating the schools, the Administrator may require the payment or transfer of amounts or other consideration to offset the additional cost. The amount received may be credited to the appropriation current when the expenditures are or were paid, the appropriation current when the amount is received, or both.

§ 40109. Authority to exempt

(a)(1) The Secretary of Transportation may exempt from this part—

(A) an air carrier not engaged directly in operating aircraft in air transportation; or

(B) a foreign air carrier not engaged directly in operating aircraft in foreign air transportation.

(2) The exemption is effective to the extent and for periods the Secretary decides are in the public interest.

(b) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may grant an exemption from a regulation prescribed in carrying out sections 40103(b)(1) and (2), 44901, and 44903 of this title when the Administrator decides the exemption is in the public interest.

(c) Except as provided in this section, the Secretary may exempt to the extent the Secretary considers necessary a person or class of persons from a provision of chapter 411, sections 41301–41306, 41308–41310(a), 41501, 41503, 41504, 41506, 41510, 41511, 41701, 41702, 41705–41709, 41711, 41712, and 41731–41742, chapter 419, subchapter II of chapter 421, and section 46301(b) of this title, or a regulation or term prescribed under any of those provisions, when the Secretary decides that the exemption is consistent with the public interest.

(d) The Secretary may not exempt an air carrier from section 42112 of this title. However, the Secretary may exempt from section 42112(b)(1) and (2) an air carrier not providing scheduled air transportation, and the operations conducted during daylight hours by an air carrier providing scheduled air transportation, when the Secretary decides that—

(1) because of the limited extent of, or unusual circumstances affecting, the operation of the air carrier, the enforcement of section 42112(b)(1) and (2) of this title is or would be an unreasonable burden on the air carrier that would obstruct its development and prevent it from beginning or continuing operations; and

(2) the exemption would not affect adversely the public interest.

(e) The Secretary may not exempt an air carrier under this section from a provision referred to in subsection (c) of this section, or a regulation or term prescribed under any of those provisions, that sets maximum flying hours for pilots or copilots.

(f)(1) An air carrier is exempt from section 41101(a)(1) of this title, and the Secretary may exempt an air carrier from another provision of subpart II of this part, if the air carrier—

(A)(i) provides passenger transportation only with aircraft having a maximum capacity of 55 passengers; or

(ii) provides the transportation of property only with aircraft having a maximum payload of less than 18,000 pounds; and

(B) complies with liability insurance requirements and other regulations the Secretary prescribes.

(2) The Secretary may increase the passenger or payload capacities when the public interest requires.

(3)(A) An exemption under this subsection applies to an air carrier providing air transportation between 2 places in Alaska, or between Alaska and Canada, only if the carrier is authorized by Alaska to provide the transportation.

(B) The Secretary may limit the number or location of places that may be served by an air carrier providing transportation only in Alaska under an exemption from section 41101(a)(1) of this title, or the frequency with which the transportation may be provided, only when the Secretary decides that providing the transportation substantially impairs the ability of an air carrier holding a certificate issued by the Secretary to provide its authorized transportation, including the minimum transportation requirement for Alaska specified under section 41732(b)(1)(B) of this title.

(g)(1) To the extent the Secretary decides an exemption is in the public interest, the Secretary may exempt by order a foreign air carrier from the requirements and limitations of this part for not more than 30 days to allow the foreign air carrier to carry passengers, property, or mail in interstate air transportation in certain markets if the Secretary finds that—

(A) because of an emergency created by unusual circumstances not arising in the normal course of business, air carriers holding certificates under section 41102 of this title cannot accommodate traffic in those markets;

(B) all possible efforts have been made to accommodate the traffic by using the resources of the air carriers, including the use of—

(i) foreign aircraft, or sections of foreign aircraft, under lease or charter to the air carriers; and

(ii) the air carriers' reservations systems to the extent practicable;

(C) the exemption is necessary to avoid unreasonable hardship for the traffic in the markets that cannot be accommodated by the air carriers; and

(D) granting the exemption will not result in an unreasonable advantage to any party in a labor dispute where the inability to accommodate traffic in a market is a result of the dispute.

(2) When the Secretary grants an exemption to a foreign air carrier under this subsection, the Secretary shall—

(A) ensure that air transportation the foreign air carrier provides under the exemption is made available on reasonable terms;

(B) monitor continuously the passenger load factor of air carriers in the market that hold certificates under section 41102 of this title; and

(C) review the exemption at least every 30 days to ensure that the unusual circumstances that established the need for the exemption still exist.

(3) The Secretary may renew an exemption (including renewals) under this subsection for not more than 30 days. An exemption may continue for not more than 5 days after the unusual circumstances that established the need for the exemption cease.

(h) The Secretary may act under subsections (d) and (f)(3)(B) of this section only after giving the air carrier notice and an opportunity for a proceeding.

§ 40110. Administrative

(a) The Secretary of Transportation (and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) may take action the Secretary or Administrator, as appropriate, considers necessary to carry out this part, including conducting investigations, prescribing regulations, standards, and procedures, and issuing orders.

(b) In carrying out this part, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may acquire an interest in real property, including an interest in airspace immediately adjacent to and needed for airports and other air navigation facilities owned by the United States Government and operated by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration. However, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may acquire space in buildings only when the Administrator of General Services decides, under section 1(d) of Reorganization Plan No. 18 of 1950 (eff. July 1, 1950, 64 Stat. 1270), that the space to be acquired is to be used for the special purposes of the Federal Aviation Administration and generally is not suitable for the use of other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government. The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may consider the reasonable probable future use of the underlying land in making an award for a condemnation of an interest in airspace.

(c)(1) In carrying out this part, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may—

(A) construct and improve laboratories and other test facilities; and

(B) dispose of an interest in property for adequate compensation.

(2) Except for airport and airway property and technical equipment used for special aviation purposes, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall dispose of the property under the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 471 et seq.).

(d) In carrying out this part, the Secretary has the same authority to regulate the transportation of hazardous materials by air that the Secretary has under section 5103 of this title. However, this subsection does not prohibit or regulate the transportation of a firearm (as defined in section 232 of title 18) or ammunition for a firearm, when transported by an individual for personal use.

(e) The Secretary (and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) may use the assistance of the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and any research or technical department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government on matters related to aircraft fuel and oil, and to the design, materials, workmanship, construction, performance, maintenance, and operation of aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, appliances, and air navigation facilities. Each department, agency, and instrumentality may conduct scientific and technical research, investigations, and tests necessary to assist the Secretary or Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration in carrying out this part. This part does not authorize duplicating laboratory research activities of a department, agency, or instrumentality.

(f) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may indemnify an officer or employee of the Administration against a claim or judgment arising out of an act that the Administrator decides was committed within the scope of the official duties of the officer or employee.

§ 40111. Reports and records

(a)(1) Except as provided in this part, the Secretary of Transportation (and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) shall make a written report of each proceeding and investigation under this part in which a formal hearing was held and shall provide a copy to each party to the proceeding or investigation. The report shall include the decision conclusions, order, and requirements of the Secretary or Administrator as appropriate.

(2) The Secretary (and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) shall have all reports, orders, decisions, and regulations the Secretary or Administrator, as appropriate, issues or prescribes published in the form and way best adapted for public use. A publication of the Secretary or Administrator is competent evidence of its contents.

(b) Except as provided in subpart II of this part, copies of tariffs and arrangements filed with the Secretary under subpart II and the statistics, tables, and figures contained in reports made to the Secretary under subpart II, are public records. The Secretary is the custodian of those records. A public record, or a copy or extract of it, certified by the Secretary under the seal of the Department of Transportation is competent evidence in a proceeding of the Secretary and in a judicial proceeding.

(a)(1) A person may object to the public disclosure of information—

(A) in a record filed under this part; or

(B) obtained under this part by the Secr tary of Transportation, the Secretary of State, or the United States Postal Service.

(2) An objection must be in writing and must state the reasons for the objection. The Secretary of Transportation or State or the Postal Service shall order the information withheld from public disclosure when the appropriate Secretary or the Postal Service decides that disclosure of the information would—

(A) prejudice the United States Government in preparing and presenting its position in international negotiations; or

(B) have an adverse effect on the competitive position of an air carrier in foreign a transportation.

(b) This section does not authorize info mation to be withheld from a committee Congress authorized to have the inform tion.

§ 40113. State taxation

(A) "air carrier transportation property means property (as defined by the Secreta of Transportation) owned or used by an a carrier providing air transportation.

(B) "assessment" means valuation for property tax levied by a taxing district.

(C) "assessment jurisdiction" means a geographical area in a State used in determining the assessed value of property for ad valorem taxation.

(D) "commercial and industrial property" means property (except transportation property and land used primarily for agriculture or timber growing) devoted to a commercial or industrial use and subject to a property tax levy.

(E) "State" includes the District of Columbia, a territory or possession of the United States, and a political authority of at least 2 States.

(2) A State or political subdivision of a State may not levy or collect a tax, fee, head charge, or other charge on—

(A) an individual traveling in air commerce;

(B) the transportation of an individual traveling in air commerce;

(C) the sale of air transportation; or

(D) the gross receipts from that air commerce or transportation.

(3)(A) A State, political subdivision of a State, or authority acting for a State or political subdivision may not do any of the following acts because those acts unreasonably burden and discriminate against interstate commerce:

(i) assessing air carrier transportation property at a value that has a higher ratio to the true market value of the property than the ratio that the assessed value of other commercial and industrial property of the same type in the same assessment jurisdiction has to the true market value of the other commercial and industrial property.

(ii) levying or collecting a tax on an assessment that may not be made under clause (i) of this subparagraph.

(iii) levying or collecting an ad valorem property tax on air carrier transportation property at a tax rate greater than the tax rate applicable to commercial and industrial property in the same assessment jurisdiction.

(B) Subparagraph (A) of this paragraph does not apply to an in lieu tax completely used for airport and aeronautical purposes.

(4) Except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection, a State or political subdivision of a State may levy or collect—

(A) other taxes, including property taxes, net income taxes, franchise taxes, and sales or use taxes on the sale of goods or services; and

(B) reasonable rental charges, landing fees, and other service charges from aircraft operators for using airport facilities of an airport owned or operated by that State or subdivision.

(b)(1) In this subsection—

(A) "pay" means money received by an employee for services.

(B) "State" includes the District of Columbia and a territory or possession of the United States.

(C) an employee is deemed to have earned 50 percent of the employee's pay in a State or political subdivision of a State in which the scheduled flight time of the employee in the State or subdivision is more than 50 percent of the total scheduled flight time of the employee when employed during the calendar year.

(2) The pay of an employee of an air carrier having regularly assigned duties on aircraft in at least 2 States is subject to the income tax laws of only the following:

(A) the State or political subdivision of the State that is the residence of the employee.

(B) the State or political subdivision of the State in which the employee earns more than 50 percent of the pay received by the employee from the carrier.

§ 40114. Government-financed air transportation

(a) A department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government shall take necessary steps to ensure that the transportation of passengers and property by air is provided by an air carrier holding a certificate under section 41102 of this title if—

(1) the department, agency, or instrumentality—

(A) obtains the transportation for itself or in carrying out an arrangement under which payment is made by the Government or payment is made from amounts provided for the use of the Government; or

(B) provides the transportation to or for a foreign country or international or other organization without reimbursement;

(2) the transportation is authorized by the certificate or by regulation or exemption of the Secretary of Transportation; and

(3) the air carrier is—

(A) available, if the transportation is between a place in the United States and a place outside the United States; or

(B) reasonably available, if the transportation is between 2 places outside the United States.

(b) This section does not preclude the transportation of passengers and property by a foreign air carrier if the transportation is provided under a bilateral or multilateral air transportation agreement to which the Government and the government of a foreign country are parties if the agreement—

(1) is consistent with the goals for international aviation policy of section 40101(e) of this title; and

(2) provides for the exchange of rights or benefits of similar magnitude.

(c) The Comptroller General shall allow the expenditure of an appropriation for transportation in violation of this section only when satisfactory proof is presented showing the necessity for the transportation.

(d) Notwithstanding subsections (a) and (c) of this section, an amount appropriated to the Secretary of State, the Director of the United States Information Agency, the Director of the United States International Development Cooperation Agency, or the Director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency may be used to pay for the transportation of an officer or employee of the Department of State or one of those agencies, a dependent of the officer or employee, and accompanying baggage, by an air carrier not holding a certificate under section 41102 of this title when the transportation is between 2 places outside the United States.

(e) This section does not affect the application of the antidiscrimination provisions of this part.

§ 40115. Remedies as cumulative

A remedy under this part is in addition to any other remedies provided by law.

§ 40116. Relationship to other laws

(a) Except as provided in the International Navigational Rules Act of 1977 (33 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.), the navigation and shipping laws of the United States and the rules for the prevention of collisions do not apply to aircraft or to the navigation of vessels related to those aircraft.

(b) The President may extend (in the way and for periods the President considers necessary) the application of this part to outside the United States when—

(1) an international arrangement gives the United States Government authority to make the extension; and

(2) the President decides the extension is in the national interest.

SUBPART II—ECONOMIC REGULATION

CHAPTER 411—AIR CARRIER CERTIFICATES

Sec.
41101. Requirement for a certificate.
41102. General, temporary, and charter air transportation certificates of air carriers.
41103. All-cargo air transportation certificates of air carriers.
41104. Additional limitations and requirements of charter air carriers.
41105. Transfers of certificates.
41106. Airlift service.
41107. Transportation of mail.
41108. Applications for certificates.
41109. Terms of certificates.
41110. Effective periods and changes, suspensions, and revocations of certificates.
41111. Simplified procedure for applications for, and changes, suspensions, and transfers of, certificates.
41112. Liability insurance and financial responsibility.

§ 41101. Requirement for a certificate

(a) Except as provided in this chapter or another law—

(1) an air carrier may provide air transportation only if the air carrier holds a certificate issued under this chapter authorizing the air transportation;

(2) a charter air carrier may provide charter air transportation only if the charter air carrier holds a certificate issued under this chapter authorizing the charter air transportation; and

(3) an air carrier may provide all-cargo air transportation only if the air carrier holds a certificate issued under this chapter authorizing the all-cargo air transportation.

(b) A citizen of the United States providing transportation in a State of passengers or property as a common carrier for compensation with aircraft capable of carrying at least 30 passengers, under authority granted by the appropriate State authority—

(1) may provide transportation for passengers and property that includes through service by the citizen over its routes in the State and in air transportation by an air carrier or foreign air carrier; and

(2) subject to sections 41309 and 42111 of this title, may make an agreement with an air carrier or foreign air carrier to provide the joint transportation.

(c) A certificate issued under this chapter does not confer a proprietary or exclusive right to use airspace, an airway of the United States, or an air navigation facility.

§ 41102. General, temporary, and charter air transportation certificates of air carriers

(a) The Secretary of Transportation may issue a certificate of public convenience and necessity to a citizen of the United States authorizing the citizen to provide any part of the following air transportation the citizen has applied for under section 41108 of this title:

(1) air transportation as an air carrier.

(2) temporary air transportation as an air carrier for a limited period.

(3) charter air transportation as a charter air carrier.

(b)(1) Before issuing a certificate under subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary must find that the citizen is fit, willing, and able to provide the transportation to be authorized by the certificate and to comply with this part and regulations of the Secretary.

(2) In addition to the findings under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Secretary, before issuing a certificate under subsection (a) of this section for foreign air transportation, must find that the transportation is consistent with the public convenience and necessity.

(c) The Secretary may issue a certificate under subsection (a) of this section for interstate air transportation (except the transportation of passengers) or foreign air transportation for a temporary period of time (whether the application is for permanent or temporary authority) when the Secretary decides that a test period is desirable—

(1) to decide if the projected services, efficiencies, methods, and rates and the projected results will materialize and remain for a sustained period of time; or

(2) to evaluate the new transportation.

(d) The Secretary shall submit each decision authorizing the provision of foreign air transportation to the President under section 41307 of this title.

§ 41103. All-cargo air transportation certificates of air carriers

(a) A citizen of the United States may apply to the Secretary of Transportation for a certificate authorizing the citizen to provide all-cargo air transportation. The application must contain information and be in the form the Secretary by regulation requires.

(b) Not later than 180 days after an application for a certificate is filed under this section, the Secretary shall issue the certificate to a citizen of the United States authorizing the citizen, as an air carrier, to provide any part of the all-cargo air transportation applied for unless the Secretary finds that the citizen is not fit, willing, and able to provide the all-cargo air transportation to be authorized by the certificate and to comply with regulations of the Secretary.

(c) The Secretary may impose terms the Secretary considers necessary when issuing a certificate under this section. However, the Secretary may not impose terms that restrict the places served or rates charged by the holder of the certificate.

(d) A citizen issued a certificate under this section—

(1) is exempt in providing the transportation under the certificate from the requirements of—

(A) section 41101(a)(1) of this title and regulations or procedures prescribed under section 41101(a)(1); and

(B) other provisions of this part and regulations or procedures prescribed under those provisions when the Secretary finds under regulations of the Secretary that the exemption is appropriate; and

(2) is an air carrier under this part except to the extent the carrier is exempt under this section from a requirement of this part.

§ 41104. Additional limitations and requirements of charter air carriers

(a) The Secretary of Transportation may prescribe a regulation or issue an order restricting the marketability, flexibility, accessibility, or variety of charter air transportation provided under a certificate issued under section 41102 of this title only to the extent required by the public interest. A regulation prescribed or order issued under this subsection may not be more restrictive than a regulation related to charter air transportation that was in effect on October 1, 1978.

(b) An air carrier holding a certificate issued under section 41102 of this title may provide charter air transportation between places in Alaska only to the extent the Secretary decides the transportation is required by public convenience and necessity. The Secretary may make that decision when issuing or changing the certificate. This subsection does not apply to a certificate issued under section 41102 to a citizen of the United States who, before July 1, 1977—

(1) maintained a principal place of business in Alaska; and

(2) conducted air transport operations between places in Alaska with aircraft with a certificate for gross takeoff weight of more than 40,000 pounds.

(c)(1) The Secretary shall suspend for not more than 30 days any part of the certificate of a charter air carrier if the Secretary decides that the failure of the carrier to comply with the requirements described in sections 41110(e) and 41112 of this title, or a regulation or order of the Secretary under section 41110(e) or 41112, requires immediate suspension in the interest of the rights, welfare, or safety of the public. The Secretary may act under this paragraph without notice or an opportunity for a proceeding.

(2) The Secretary shall begin immediately a proceeding to decide if the certificate referred to in paragraph (1) of this subsection should be changed, suspended, or revoked. Until the proceeding is completed, the Secretary may suspend the certificate for additional periods totaling not more than 60 days. If the Secretary decides that the carrier is complying with the requirements described in sections 41110(e) and 41112 of this title and regulations and orders under sections 41110(e) and 41112, the Secretary immediately may end the suspension period and proceeding begun under this subsection. However, the Secretary is not prevented from imposing a civil penalty on the carrier for violating the requirements described in section 41110(e) or 41112 or a regulation or order under section 41110(e) or 41112.

§ 41105. Transfers of certificates

A certificate issued under section 41102 of this title may be transferred only when the Secretary of Transportation approves the transfer as consistent with the public interest.

§ 41106. Airlift service

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, the transportation of passengers or property by transport category aircraft in interstate air transportation obtained by the Secretary of Defense or the Secretary of a military department through a contract of at least 31 days for airlift service in the United States may be provided only by an air carrier that—

(1) has aircraft in the civil reserve air fleet or offers to place the aircraft in that fleet; and

(2) holds a certificate issued under section 41102 of this title.

(b) The Secretary of Transportation shall act as expeditiously as possible on an application for a certificate under section 41102 of this title to provide airlift service. When the Secretary of Defense decides that no air carrier holding a certificate under section 41102 is capable of providing, and willing to provide, the airlift service, the Secretary of Defense may make a contract to provide the service with an air carrier not having a certificate.

§ 41107. Transportation of mail

When the United States Postal Service finds that the needs of the Postal Service require the transportation of mail by aircraft in foreign air transportation or between places in Alaska, in addition to the transportation of mail authorized under certifi cates in effect, the Postal Service shall certi fy that finding to the Secretary of Transpor tation with a statement about the addition al transportation and facilities necessary t provide the additional transportation.
copy of each certification and statemen shall be posted for at least 20 days in th office of the Secretary. After notice and a opportunity for a proceeding, the Secretar shall issue a new certificate under sectio 41102 of this title, or change an existing ce tificate under section 41110(a)(2)(A) of thi title, to provide the additional transporta tion and facilities if the Secretary finds th additional transportation is required by th public convenience and necessity.

§ 41108. Applications for certificates

(a) To be issued a certificate of public co venience and necessity under section 4110 of this title, a citizen of the United State must apply to the Secretary of Transporta tion. The application must—

(1) be in the form and contain inform tion required by regulations of the Secretar
and

(2) be accompanied by proof of service o interested persons as required by regulatio of the Secretary and on each communi that may be affected by the issuance of th certificate.

(b)(1) When an application is filed, th
Secretary shall post a notice of the applic tion in the office of the Secretary and gi notice of the application to other persons required by regulations of the Secretary.
interested person may file a response wi the Secretary opposing or supporting the suance of the certificate. Not later than days after the application is filed, the Sec tary shall—

(A) provide an opportunity for a publ hearing on the application;

(B) begin the procedure under secti 41111 of this title; or

(C) dismiss the application on its meri

(2) An order of dismissal issued by the S retary under paragraph (1)(C) of this subs tion is a final order and may be reviewed dicially under section 46110 of this title.

(3) If the Secretary provides an opportu ty for a hearing under paragraph (1)(A) this subsection, an initial or recommend decision shall be issued not later than 1 days after the date the Secretary provi
the opportunity. The Secretary shall issue final order on the application not later th 90 days after the decision is issued. How er, if the Secretary does not act within 90-day period, the initial or recommend decision on an application to provide—

(A) interstate air transportation is a fi order and may be reviewed judicially un section 46110 of this title; and

(B) foreign air transportation shall be s mitted to the President under section 41 of this title.

(4) If the Secretary acts under paragra
(1)(B) of this subsection, the Secretary sh issue a final order on the application later than 180 days after beginning the p cedure on the application.

(5) If a citizen applying for a certific does not meet the procedural sched adopted by the Secretary in a proceedi the Secretary may extend the period acting under paragraphs (3) and (4) of t subsection by a period equal to the amo of delay caused by the citizen. In addition an extension under this paragraph, an tial or recommended decision under pa graph (3) of this subsection may be dela for not more than 30 days in extraordinary circumstances.

(c)(1) A citizen applying for a certificate must prove that the citizen is fit, willing, and able to provide the transportation referred to in section 41102 of this title and to comply with this part.

(2) A person opposing a citizen applying for a certificate must prove that the transportation referred to in section 41102(b)(2) of this title is not consistent with the public convenience and necessity. The transportation is deemed to be consistent with the public convenience and necessity unless the Secretary finds, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the transportation is not consistent with the public convenience and necessity.

(a)(1) Each certificate issued under section 41102 of this title shall specify the type of transportation to be provided.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation—

(A) may prescribe terms for providing air transportation under the certificate that the Secretary finds may be required in the public interest; but

(B) may not prescribe a term preventing an air carrier from adding or changing schedules, equipment, accommodations, and facilities for providing the authorized transportation to satisfy business development and public demand.

(3) A certificate issued under section 41102 of this title to provide foreign air transportation shall specify the places between which the air carrier is authorized to provide the transportation only to the extent the Secretary considers practicable and otherwise only shall specify each general route to be followed. The Secretary shall authorize an air carrier holding a certificate to provide foreign air transportation to handle and transport mail of countries other than the United States.

(4) A certificate issued under section 41102 of this title to provide foreign charter air transportation shall specify the places between which the air carrier is authorized to provide the transportation only to the extent the Secretary considers practicable and otherwise only shall specify each geographical area in which, or between which, the transportation may be provided.

(b)(1) An air carrier may file with the Secretary an application to change any term of its certificate issued under section 41102 of this title to provide interstate or foreign air transportation. Not later than 60 days after an application is filed, the Secretary shall—

(A) provide the carrier an opportunity for an oral evidentiary hearing on the record; or

(B) begin to consider the application under section 41111 of this title.

(2) The Secretary shall change each term the Secretary finds to be inconsistent with the criteria under section 40101(a) and (b) of this title.

(3) An application under this subsection may not be dismissed under section 41108(b)(1)(C) of this title.

§ 41110. Effective periods and changes, suspensions, and revocations of certificates

(A) the Secretary of Transportation suspends or revokes the certificate under this section;

(B) the end of the period the Secretary specifies for an air carrier having a certificate of temporary authority issued under section 41102(a)(2) of this title; or

(C) the Secretary certifies that transportation is no longer being provided under a certificate.

(2) On application or on the initiative of the Secretary and after notice and an opportunity for a proceeding or, except as provided in paragraph (4) of this subsection, under section 41111 of this title, the Secretary may—

(A) change or suspend any part of a certificate if the Secretary finds the public convenience and necessity require change or suspension; and

(B) revoke any part of a certificate if the Secretary finds that the holder of the certificate intentionally does not comply with this chapter, sections 41308–41310(a), 41501, 41503, 41504, 41506, 41510, 41511, 41701, 41702, 41705–41709, 41711, 41712, and 41731–41742, chapter 419, subchapter II of chapter 421, and section 46301(b) of this title, a regulation or order of the Secretary under any of those provisions, or a term of its certificate.

(3) The Secretary may revoke a certificate under paragraph (2)(B) of this subsection only if the holder of the certificate does not comply, within a reasonable time the Secretary specifies, with an order to the holder requiring compliance.

(4) A certificate to provide foreign air transportation may not be changed, suspended, or revoked under section 41111 of this title if the holder of the certificate requests an oral evidentiary hearing or the Secretary finds, under all the facts and circumstances, that the hearing is required in the public interest.

(b) The Secretary may order that a certificate issued under section 41103 of this title authorizing all-cargo air transportation is ineffective if, after notice and an opportunity for a proceeding, the Secretary finds that the transportation is not provided to the minimum extent specified by the Secretary.

(c)(1) Notwithstanding subsection (a)(2)–(4) of this section, after notice and a reasonable opportunity for the affected air carrier to present its views, but without a proceeding, the Secretary may suspend or revoke the authority of an air carrier to provide foreign air transportation to a place under a certificate issued under section 41102 of this title if the carrier—

(A) notifies the Secretary, under section 41734(a) of this title or a regulation of the Secretary, that it intends to suspend all transportation to that place; or

(B) does not provide regularly scheduled transportation to the place for 90 days immediately before the date the Secretary notifies the carrier of the action the Secretary proposes.

(2) Paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection does not apply to a place provided seasonal transportation comparable to the transportation provided during the prior year.

(d) On application or on the initiative of the Secretary, the Secretary may—

(1) review the performance of an air carrier issued a certificate under section 41102(c) of this title on the basis that the air carrier will provide innovative or low-priced air transportation under the certificate; and

(2) change, suspend, or revoke the certificate or authority under subsection (a)(2) or (c) of this section if the air carrier has not provided, or is not providing, the transportation.

(e) After notice and an opportunity for a proceeding, the Secretary shall change, suspend, or revoke any part of a certificate issued under section 41102 of this title if the Secretary finds that the air carrier—

(1) is not fit, willing, and able to continue to provide the transportation authorized by the certificate and to comply with this part and regulations of the Secretary; or

(2) does not file reports necessary for the Secretary to decide if the carrier is complying with the requirements of clause (1) of this subsection.

(f) The Secretary—

(1) in consultation with appropriate departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government, shall reexamine immediately the fitness of an air carrier that—

(A) violates the laws and regulations of the United States related to the illegal importation of a controlled substance; or

(B) does not adopt available measures to prevent the illegal importation of a controlled substance into the United States on its aircraft; and

(2) when appropriate, shall change, suspend, or revoke the certificate of the carrier issued under this chapter.

(g) An interested person may file a response with the Secretary opposing or supporting the change, suspension, or revocation of a certificate under subsection (a) of this section.

(A) acting on an application for a certificate to provide air transportation under section 41102 of this title; and

(B) changing, suspending, or transferring any part of that certificate under section 41105 or 41110(a) or (c) of this title.

(2) Regulations under this section shall provide for notice and an opportunity for each interested person to file appropriate written evidence and argument. An oral evidentiary hearing is not required to be provided under this section.

(b) The Secretary may use the simplified procedure to act on an application for a certificate to provide air transportation under section 41102 of this title, or to change, suspend, or transfer any part of that certificate under section 41105 or 41110(a) or (c) of this title, when the Secretary decides the use of the procedure is in the public interest.

(c)(1) To the extent the Secretary finds practicable, regulations under this section shall include each standard the Secretary will apply when—

(A) deciding whether to use the simplified procedure; and

(B) making a decision on an action in which the procedure is used.

(2) The regulations may provide that written evidence and argument may be filed under section 41108(b) of this title as a part of a response opposing or supporting the issuance of a certificate.

§ 41112. Liability insurance and financial responsibility

(a) The Secretary of Transportation may issue a certificate to a citizen of the United States to provide air transportation as an air carrier under section 41102 of this title only if the citizen complies with regulations and orders of the Secretary governing the filing of an insurance policy or self-insurance plan approved by the Secretary. The policy or plan must be sufficient to pay, not more than the amount of the insurance, for bodily injury to, or death of, an individual or for loss of, or damage to, property of others, resulting from the operation or maintenance of the aircraft under the certificate. A certificate does not remain in effect unless the carrier complies with this subsection.

(b) To protect passengers and shippers using an aircraft operated by an air carrier issued a certificate under section 41102 of this title, the Secretary may require the carrier to file a performance bond or equivalent security in the amount and on terms the Secretary prescribes. The bond or security must be sufficient to ensure the carrier adequately will pay the passengers and shippers when the transportation the carrier agrees to provide is not provided. The Secretary shall prescribe the amounts to be paid under this subsection.

CHAPTER 413—FOREIGN AIR TRANSPORTATION

Sec.
41301. Requirement for a permit.
41302. Permits of foreign air carriers.
41303. Transfer of permits.
41304. Effective periods and changes, suspensions, and revocations of permits.
41305. Applications for permits.
41306. Simplified procedure for applications for, and changes and suspensions of, permits.
41307. Presidential review of actions about foreign air transportation.
41308. Exemption from the antitrust laws.
41309. Cooperative agreements and requests.
41310. Discriminatory practices.

§ 41301. Requirement for a permit

A foreign air carrier may provide foreign air transportation only if the foreign air carier holds a permit issued under this chapter authorizing the foreign air transportation.

§ 41302. Permits of foreign air carriers

The Secretary of Transportation may issue a permit to a person (except a citizen of the United States) authorizing the person to provide foreign air transportation as a foreign air carrier if the Secretary finds that—

(1) the person is fit, willing, and able to provide the foreign air transportation to be authorized by the permit and to comply with this part and regulations of the Secretary; and

(2)(A) the person is qualified, and has been designated by the government of its country, to provide the foreign air transportation under an agreement with the United States Government; or

(B) the foreign air transportation to be provided under the permit will be in the public interest.

§ 41303. Transfer of permits

A permit issued under section 41302 of this title may be transferred only when the Secretary of Transportation approves the transfer because the transfer is in the public interest.

§ 41304. Effective periods and changes, suspensions, and revocations of permits

(a) The Secretary of Transportation may prescribe the period during which a permit issued under section 41302 of this title is in effect. After notice and an opportunity for a proceeding, the Secretary may change, suspend, or revoke the permit if the Secretary finds that action to be in the public interest.

(b) Without an opportunity for a proceeding, but subject to the approval of the President, the Secretary—

(1) may suspend summarily the permits of foreign air carriers of a foreign country, or change or limit the operations of the foreign air carriers under the permits, when the Secretary finds—

(A) the action is in the public interest; and

(B) the government, an aeronautical authority, or a foreign air carrier of the foreign country, over the objection of the United States Government, has—

(i) limited or denied the operating rights of an air carrier; or

(ii) engaged in unfair, discriminatory, or restrictive practices that have a substantial adverse competitive impact on an air carrier related to air transportation to, from, through, or over the territory of the foreign country; and

(2) to make this subsection effective, may restrict operations between the United States and the foreign country by a foreign air carrier of a third country.

(c) The Secretary—

(1) in consultation with appropriate departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government, shall reexamine immediately the fitness of a foreign air carrier that—

(A) violates the laws and regulations of the United States related to the illegal importation of a controlled substance; or

(B) does not adopt available measures to prevent the illegal importation of a controlled substance into the United States on its aircraft; and

(2) when appropriate, shall change, suspend, or revoke the permit of the carrier issued under this chapter.

(d) An interested person may file a response with the Secretary opposing or supporting the change, suspension, or revocation of a permit under subsection (a) of this section.

§ 41305. Applications for permits

(a)(1) A person must apply in writing to the Secretary of Transportation to be issued a permit under section 41302 of this title. The Secretary shall prescribe regulations to require that the application be—

(A) verified;

(B) in a certain form and contain certain information;

(C) served on interested persons; and

(D) accompanied by proof of service on those persons.

(2) When an application is filed, the Secretary shall post a notice of the application in the office of the Secretary and give notice of the application to other persons as required by regulations of the Secretary. An interested person may file a response with the Secretary opposing or supporting the issuance of the permit. The Secretary shall act on an application as expeditiously as possible.

(b) The Secretary may impose terms for providing foreign air transportation under the permit that the Secretary finds may be required in the public interest.

§ 41306. Simplified procedure for applications for, and changes and suspensions of, permits

(a) The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations that simplify the procedure for—

(1) acting on an application for a permit to provide foreign air transportation under section 41302 of this title; and

(2) changing or suspending any part of that permit under section 41304(a) or (b) of this title.

(b) Regulations under this section shall provide for notice and an opportunity for each interested person to file appropriate written evidence and argument. An oral evidentiary hearing is not required to be provided under this section.

§ 41307. Presidential review of actions about foreign air transportation

The Secretary of Transportation shall submit to the President for review each decision of the Secretary to issue, deny, chang suspend, revoke, or transfer a certificat issued under section 41102 of this title a thorizing an air carrier, or a permit issue under section 41302 of this title authorizin a foreign air carrier, to provide foreign a transportation. The President may disa prove the decision of the Secretary only the reason for disapproval is based on fo eign relations or national defense conside ations that are under the jurisdiction of th President. The President may not disa prove a decision of the Secretary if th reason is economic or related to carrier s lection. A decision of the Secretary—

(1) is void if the President disapproves th decision and publishes the reasons (to th extent allowed by national security) for di approval not later than 60 days after it submitted to the President; or

(2)(A) takes effect as a decision of the Se retary if the President does not disappro the decision not later than 60 days after th decision is submitted to the President; and

(B) when effective, may be reviewed jud cially under section 46110 of this title.

§ 41308. Exemption from the antitrust laws

(a) In this section, "antitrust laws" h the same meaning given that term in t first section of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.
12).

(b) When the Secretary of Transportatio decides it is required by the public intere the Secretary, as part of an order under se tion 41309 or 42111 of this title, may exem a person affected by the order from the an trust laws to the extent necessary to allo
the person to proceed with the transacti specifically approved by the order and wi any transaction necessarily contemplat by the order.

(c) In an order under section 41309 of th title approving an agreement, reque change, or cancellation, the Secretary, the basis of the findings required under s tion 41309(b)(1), shall exempt a person fected by the order from the antitrust laws the extent necessary to allow the person proceed with the transaction specifically proved by the order and with any trans tion necessarily contemplated by the order

(a) An air carrier or foreign air carr may file with the Secretary of Transpor tion a true copy of or, if oral, a true a complete memorandum of, an agreeme (except an agreement related to interst air transportation), or a request for auth ity to discuss cooperative arrangeme (except arrangements related to interst air transportation), and any change or c cellation of an agreement, between the carrier or foreign air carrier and anoth air carrier, a foreign carrier, or another c rier.

(b) The Secretary of Transportation sh approve an agreement, request, change, cancellation referred to in subsection (a) this section when the Secretary finds it not adverse to the public interest and is in violation of this part. However, the Sec tary shall disapprove—

(1) or, after periodic review, end appro of, an agreement, request, change, or can lation, that substantially reduces or eli nates competition unless the Secretary fi that—

(A) the agreement, request, change, or c cellation is necessary to meet a seri transportation need or to achieve import public benefits (including internatio comity and foreign policy consideratio
and

(B) the transportation need cannot be met or those benefits cannot be achieved by reasonably available alternatives that are materially less anticompetitive; or

(2) an agreement that—

(A) is between an air carrier not directly operating aircraft in foreign air transportation and a common carrier subject to subtitle IV of this title; and

(B) governs the compensation the common carrier may receive for the transportation.

(c)(1) When an agreement, request, change, or cancellation is filed, the Secretary of Transportation shall give the Attorney General and the Secretary of State written notice of, and an opportunity to submit written comments about, the filing. On the initiative of the Secretary of Transportation or on request of the Attorney General or Secretary of State, the Secretary of Transportation may provide an opportunity for a proceeding to decide whether an agreement, request, change, or cancellation is consistent with this part whether or not it was approved previously.

(2) In a proceeding before the Secretary of Transportation applying standards under subsection (b)(1) of this section, a party opposing an agreement, request, change, or cancellation has the burden of proving that it substantially reduces or eliminates competition and that less anticompetitive alternatives are available. The party defending the agreement, request, change, or cancellation has the burden of proving the transportation need or public benefits.

(3) The Secretary of Transportation shall include the findings required by subsection (b)(1) of this section in an order of the Secretary approving or disapproving an agreement, request, change, or cancellation.

§ 41310. Discriminatory practices

(a) An air carrier or foreign air carrier may not subject a person, place, port, or type of traffic in foreign air transportation to unreasonable discrimination.

(b)(1) The Secretary of Transportation shall survey charges imposed on an air carrier by the government of a foreign country or another foreign entity for the use of airport property or airway property in foreign air transportation. If the Secretary of Transportation decides that a charge is discriminatory, the Secretary promptly shall report the decision to the Secretary of State. The Secretaries of State and Transportation promptly shall begin negotiations with the appropriate government to end the discrimination. If the discrimination is not ended in a reasonable time through negotiation, the Secretary of Transportation shall establish a compensating charge equal to the discriminatory charge. With the approval of the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury shall impose the compensating charge on a foreign air carrier of that country as a condition to accepting the general declaration of the aircraft of the foreign air carrier when it lands or takes off.

(2) The Secretary of the Treasury shall maintain an account to credit amounts collected under paragraph (1) of this subsection. An air carrier shall be paid from the account an amount certified by the Secretary of Transportation to compensate the air carrier for the discriminatory charge paid to the government.

(c)(1) The Secretary of Transportation may take actions the Secretary considers are in the public interest to eliminate an activity of a government of a foreign country or another foreign entity, including a foreign air carrier, when the Secretary, on the initiative of the Secretary or on complaint, decides that the activity—

(A) is an unjustifiable or unreasonable discriminatory, predatory, or anticompetitive practice against an air carrier; or

(B) imposes an unjustifiable or unreasonable restriction on access of an air carrier to a foreign market.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation may deny, change, suspend, revoke, or transfer under paragraph (1) of this subsection a foreign air carrier permit or tariff under section 41302, 41303, 41304(a), 41504(c), 41507, or 41509 of this title.

(d)(1) An air carrier or a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government may file a complaint under subsection (c) of this section with the Secretary of Transportation. The Secretary shall approve, deny, or dismiss the complaint, set the complaint for a proceeding or investigation, or begin another proceeding proposing remedial action not later than 60 days after receiving the complaint. The Secretary may extend the period for acting for additional periods totaling not more than 30 days if the Secretary decides that with additional time it is likely that a complaint can be resolved satisfactorily through negotiations with the government of the foreign country or foreign entity. The Secretary must act not later than 90 days after receiving the complaint. However, the Secretary may extend this 90-day period for not more than an additional 90 days if, on the last day of the initial 90-day period, the Secretary finds that—

(A) negotiations with the government have progressed to a point that a satisfactory resolution of the complaint appears imminent;

(B) an air carrier has not been subjected to economic injury by the government or entity as a result of filing the complaint; and

(C) the public interest requires additional time before the Secretary acts on the complaint.

(2) In carrying out paragraph (1) of this subsection and subsection (c) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall—

(A) solicit the views of the Secretaries of Commerce and State and the United States Trade Representative;

(B) give an affected air carrier or foreign air carrier reasonable notice and an opportunity to submit written evidence and arguments within the time limits of this subsection; and

(C) submit to the President under section 41307 or 41509(f) of this title actions proposed by the Secretary of Transportation.

(e)(1) The Secretaries of State, the Treasury, and Transportation and the heads of other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government shall keep under review, to the extent of each of their jurisdictions, each form of discrimination or unfair competitive practice to which an air carrier is subject when providing foreign air transportation. Each Secretary and head shall—

(A) take appropriate action to eliminate any discrimination or unfair competitive practice found to exist; and

(B) request Congress to enact legislation when the authority to eliminate the discrimination or unfair practice is inadequate.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall report to Congress annually on each action taken under paragraph (1) of this subsection and on the continuing program to eliminate discrimination and unfair competitive practices. The Secretaries of State and the Treasury each shall give the Secretary of Transportation information necessary to prepare the report.

(f) Not later than 30 days after acting on a complaint under this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall report to the Committee on Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate on action taken under this section on the complaint.

CHAPTER 415—RATES

Sec.
41501. Establishing reasonable rates, classifications, rules, practices, and divisions of joint rates for foreign air transportation.
41502. Establishing joint rates for through routes with other common carriers.
41503. Establishing joint rates for through routes provided by State authorized carriers.
41504. Tariffs for foreign air transportation.
41505. Uniform methods for establishing joint rates, and divisions of joint rates, applicable to commuter air carriers.
41506. Rate division filing requirements for foreign air transportation.
41507. Authority of the Secretary of Transportation to change rates, classifications, rules, and practices for foreign air transportation.
41508. Authority of the Secretary of Transportation to change divisions of joint rates for foreign air transportation.
41509. Authority of the Secretary of Transportation to suspend, cancel, and reject tariffs for foreign air transportation.
41510. Required adherence to foreign air transportation tariffs.
41511. Special fares for foreign air transportation.

Every air carrier and foreign air carrier shall establish, comply with, and enforce—

(1) reasonable rates, classifications, rules, and practices related to foreign air transportation; and

(2) for joint rates established for foreign air transportation, reasonable divisions of those rates among the participating air carriers or foreign air carriers without unreasonably discriminating against any of those carriers.

§ 41502. Establishing joint rates for through routes with other common carriers

(a) An air carrier may establish reasonable joint rates with another common carrier for through service provided under section 41101(b) of this title. However, an air carrier not directly operating aircraft in air transportation (except an air express company) may not establish under this section a joint rate for the transportation of property with a common carrier subject to subtitle IV of this title.

(b) For through service by an air carrier and a common carrier subject to subtitle IV of this title, the participating carriers shall establish—

(1) reasonable rates and reasonable classifications, rules, and practices affecting those rates or the value of the transportation provided under those rates; and

(2) for joint rates established for the through service, reasonable divisions of those joint rates among the participating carriers.

(c) An air carrier and a common carrier subject to subtitle IV of this title that are participating in through service and joint rates shall include in their tariffs, filed with the Secretary of Transportation, a statement showing the through service and joint rates.

Subject to sections 41309 and 42111 of this title, a citizen of the United States providing transportation under section 41101(b) of this title may make an agreement with an air carrier or foreign air carrier for joint rates for that transportation. The joint rates agreed to must be the lowest of—

(1) the sum of the applicable rates for—

(A) the part of the transportation provided in the State and approved by the appropriate State authority; and

(B) the part of the transportation provided by the air carrier or foreign air carrier;

(2) a joint rate established and filed under section 41504 of this title; or

(3) a joint rate prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation under section 41507 of this title.

§ 41504. Tariffs for foreign air transportation

(a) In the way prescribed by regulation by the Secretary of Transportation, every air carrier and foreign air carrier shall file with the Secretary, publish, and keep open to public inspection, tariffs showing the rates for the foreign air transportation provided between places served by the carrier and provided between places served by the carrier and places served by another air carrier or foreign air carrier with which through service and joint rates have been established. A tariff—

(1) shall contain—

(A) to the extent the Secretary requires by regulation, a description of the classifications, rules, and practices related to the foreign air transportation;

(B) a statement of the rates in money of the United States; and

(C) other information the Secretary requires by regulation; and

(2) may contain—

(A) a statement of the rates in money that is not money of the United States; and

(B) information that is required under the laws of a foreign country in or to which the air carrier or foreign air carrier is authorized to operate.

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, an air carrier or foreign air carrier may change a rate or a classification, rule, or practice affecting that rate or the value of the transportation provided under that rate, specified in a tariff of the carrier for foreign air transportation only after 30 days after the carrier has filed, published, and posted notice of the proposed change in the same way as required for a tariff under subsection (a) of this section. However, the Secretary may prescribe an alternative notice requirement, of at least 25 days, to allow an air carrier or foreign air carrier to match a proposed change in a passenger rate or a charge of another air carrier or foreign air carrier. A notice under this paragraph must state plainly the change proposed and when the change will take effect.

(2) If the effect of a proposed change would be to begin a passenger rate that is outside of, or not covered by, the range of passenger rates specified under section 41509(e)(2)-(4) of this title, the proposed change may be put into effect only after 60 days' after the notice is filed under regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

(c) The Secretary may reject a tariff or tariff change that is not consistent with this section and regulations prescribed by the Secretary. A tariff or change that is rejected is void.

§ 41505. Uniform methods for establishing joint rates, and divisions of joint rates, applicable to commuter air carriers

(a) In this section, "commuter air carrier" means an air carrier providing transportation under section 40109(f) of this title that provides at least 5 scheduled roundtrips a week between the same 2 places.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section, when the Secretary of Transportation prescribes under section 41508 or 41509 of this title a uniform method generally applicable to establishing joint rates and divisions of joint rates for and between air carriers holding certificates issued under section 41102 of this title, the Secretary shall make that uniform method apply to establishing joint rates and divisions of joint rates for and between air carriers and commuter air carriers.

(c) A commuter air carrier that has an agreement with an air carrier to provide transportation for passengers and property that includes through service by the commuter air carrier over the commuter air carrier's routes and air transportation provided by the air carrier shall give the air carrier and the Secretary at least 90 days' notice before changing, suspending, or ending the transportation. If the commuter air carrier does not give that notice, the uniform method of establishing joint rates and divisions of joint rates referred to in subsection (b) of this section does not apply to the commuter air carrier.

Every air carrier and foreign air carrier shall keep currently on file with the Secretary of Transportation, if the Secretary requires, the established divisions of all joint rates for foreign air transportation in which the carrier participates.

§ 41507. Authority of the Secretary of Transportation to change rates, classifications, rules, and practices for foreign air transportation

(a) When the Secretary of Transportation decides that a rate charged or received by an air carrier or foreign air carrier for foreign air transportation, or a classification, rule, or practice affecting that rate or the value of the transportation provided under that rate, is or will be unreasonably discriminatory, the Secretary may—

(1) change the rate, classification, rule, or practice as necessary to correct the discrimination; and

(2) order the air carrier or foreign air carrier to stop charging or collecting the discriminatory rate or carrying out the discriminatory classification, rule, or practice.

(b) The Secretary may act under this section on the Secretary's own initiative or on a complaint filed with the Secretary and only after notice and an opportunity for a proceeding.

§ 41508. Authority of the Secretary of Transportation to change divisions of joint rates for foreign air transportation

(a) When the Secretary of Transportation decides that a division between air carriers, foreign air carriers, or both, of a joint rate for foreign air transportation is or will be unreasonable or unreasonably discriminatory against any of those carriers, the Secretary shall prescribe a reasonable division of the joint rate among those carriers. The Secretary may order the change in the divisio of the joint rate to be made retroactively t the date the complaint was filed, the dat the order for an investigation was made, o a later date the Secretary decides is reasona ble.

(b) The Secretary may act under this sec tion on the Secretary's own initiative or o a complaint filed with the Secretary an only after notice and an opportunity for proceeding.

§ 41509. Authority of the Secretary of Transporta tion to suspend, cancel, and reject tariffs for for eign air transportation

(a)(1) On the initiative of the Secretary o
Transportation or on a complaint filed wit the Secretary, the Secretary may conduct proceeding to decide whether a rate for for eign air transportation contained in an ex isting or newly filed tariff of an air carrie or foreign air carrier, a classification, rul or practice affecting that rate, or the valu of the transportation provided under tha rate, is lawful. The Secretary may begin th proceeding at once and without an answe or another formal pleading by the air carr er or foreign air carrier, but only after rea sonable notice. If, after the proceeding, th
Secretary decides that the rate, classifica tion, rule, or practice is or will be unreaso able or unreasonably discriminatory, th
Secretary may cancel or reject the tariff an prevent the use of the rate, classificatio rule, or practice.

(2) With or without a proceeding, the Se retary may cancel or reject an existing newly filed tariff of a foreign air carrier an prevent the use of a rate, classification, rul or practice when the Secretary decides th the cancellation or rejection is in the publ interest.

(3) In deciding whether to cancel or reje a tariff of an air carrier or foreign air carr er under this subsection, the Secretary sho consider—

(A) the effect of the rate on the moveme of traffic;

(B) the need in the public interest of ad quate and efficient transportation by a carriers and foreign air carriers at th lowest cost consistent with providing th transportation;

(C) the standards prescribed under law r lated to the character and quality of tran portation to be provided by air carriers an foreign air carriers;

(D) the inherent advantages of transport
tion by aircraft;

(E) the need of the air carrier and forei air carrier for revenue sufficient to enab the air carrier and foreign air carrier, und honest, economical, and efficient manag ment, to provide adequate and efficient a carrier and foreign air carrier transport
tion;

(F) whether the rate will be predatory tend to monopolize competition among a carriers and foreign air carriers in forei air transportation;

(G) reasonably estimated or foreseeal future costs and revenues for the air carr or foreign air carrier for a reasonably lim ed future period during which the r would be in effect; and

(H) other factors.

(b)(1)(A) Pending a decision under subs tion (a)(1) of this section, the Secretary m suspend a tariff and the use of a rate c tained in the tariff or a classification, ru or practice affecting that rate.

(B) The Secretary may suspend a tariff a foreign air carrier and the use of a ra classification, rule, or practice when the suspension is in the public interest.

(2) A suspension becomes effective when the Secretary files with the tariff and delivers to the air carrier or foreign air carrier affected by the suspension a written statement of the reasons for the suspension. To suspend a tariff, reasonable notice of the suspension must be given to the affected carrier.

(3) The suspension of a newly filed tariff may be for periods totaling not more than 365 days after the date the tariff otherwise would go into effect. The suspension of an existing tariff may be for periods totaling not more than 365 days after the effective date of the suspension. The Secretary may rescind at any time the suspension of a newly filed tariff and allow the rate, classification, rule, or practice to go into effect.

(c)(1) If a tariff is suspended pending the outcome of a proceeding under subsection (a) of this section and the Secretary does not take final action in the proceeding during the suspension period, the tariff goes into effect at the end of that period subject to cancellation when the proceeding is concluded.

(2)(A) During the period of suspension, or after the cancellation or rejection, of a newly filed tariff (including a tariff that has gone into effect provisionally), the affected air carrier or foreign air carrier shall maintain in effect and use—

(i) the corresponding seasonal rates, or the classifications, rules, and practices affecting those rates or the value of transportation provided under those rates, that were in effect for the carrier immediately before the new tariff was filed; or

(ii) another rate provided for under an applicable intergovernmental agreement or understanding.

(B) If the suspended, cancelled, or rejected tariff is the first tariff of the carrier for the covered transportation, the carrier, for the purpose of operations during the period of suspension or pending effectiveness of a new tariff, may file another tariff containing a rate or another classification, rule, or practice affecting the rate, or the value of the transportation provided under the rate, that is in effect (and not subject to a suspension order) for any air carrier providing the same transportation.

(3) If an existing tariff is suspended or cancelled, the affected air carrier or foreign air carrier, for the purpose of operations during the period of suspension or pending effectiveness of a new tariff, may file another tariff containing a rate or another classification, rule, or practice affecting the rate, or the value of the transportation provided under the rate, that is in effect (and not subject to a suspension order) for any air carrier providing the same transportation.

(d) When the Secretary finds that the government or an aeronautical authority of a foreign country has refused to allow an air carrier to charge a rate contained in a tariff filed and published under section 41504 of this title for foreign air transportation to the foreign country—

(1) the Secretary, without providing an opportunity for a proceeding—

(A) may suspend any existing tariff of a foreign air carrier providing transportation between the United States and the foreign country for periods totaling not more than 365 days after the date of the suspension; and

(B) may order the foreign air carrier to charge, during the suspension periods, rates that are the same as those contained in a tariff (designated by the Secretary) of an air carrier filed and published under section 41504 of this title for foreign air transportation to the foreign country; and

(2) a foreign air carrier may continue to provide foreign air transportation to the foreign country only if the government or aeronautical authority of the foreign country allows an air carrier to start or continue foreign air transportation to the foreign country at the rates designated by the Secretary.

(e)(1)(A) In this subsection, "standard foreign fare level" means—

(i) for a class of fares existing on October 1, 1979, the fare between 2 places (as changed under subparagraph (B) of this paragraph) filed for and allowed by the Civil Aeronautics Board to go into effect after September 30, 1979, and before August 13, 1980 (with seasonal fares changed by the percentage difference that prevailed between seasons in 1978), or the fare established under section 1002(j)(8) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (Public Law 85-726, 72 Stat. 731), as added by section 24(a) of the International Air Transportation Competition Act of 1979 (Public Law 96-192, 94 Stat. 46); or

(ii) for a class of fares established after October 1, 1979, the fare between 2 places in effect on the effective date of the establishment of the new class.

(B) At least once every 60 days for fuel costs, and at least once every 180 days for other costs, the Secretary shall change the standard foreign fare level for the particular foreign air transportation to which the standard foreign fare level applies by increasing or decreasing that level by the percentage change from the last previous period in the actual operating cost for each available seat-mile. In changing a standard foreign fare level, the Secretary may not make a change to costs actually incurred. In establishing a standard foreign fare level and making changes in the level under this paragraph, the Secretary may use all relevant or appropriate information reasonably available to the Secretary.

(2) The Secretary may not decide that a proposed fare for foreign air transportation is unreasonable on the basis that the fare is too low or too high if the proposed fare is neither more than 5 percent higher nor 50 percent lower than the standard foreign fare level for the same or essentially similar class of transportation. The Secretary by regulation may increase the 50 percent specified in this paragraph.

(3) Paragraph (2) of this subsection does not apply to a proposed fare that is not more than—

(A) 5 percent higher than the standard foreign fare level when the Secretary decides that the proposed fare may be unreasonably discriminatory or that suspension of the fare is in the public interest because of an unreasonable regulatory action by the government of a foreign country that is related to a fare proposal of an air carrier; or

(B) 50 percent lower than the standard foreign fare level when the Secretary decides that the proposed fare may be predatory or discriminatory or that suspension of the fare is required because of an unreasonable regulatory action by the government of a foreign country that is related to a fare proposal of an air carrier.

(f) The Secretary shall submit to the President an order made under this section suspending, cancelling, or rejecting a rate for foreign air transportation, and an order rescinding the effectiveness of such an order, before publishing the order. Not later than 10 days after its submission, the President may disapprove the order on finding disapproval is necessary for United States foreign policy or national defense reasons.

(g) This section and compliance with an order of the Secretary under this section are conditions to any certificate or permit held by an air carrier or foreign air carrier. An air carrier or foreign air carrier may provide foreign air transportation only as long as the carrier maintains rates for that transportation that comply with this section and orders of the Secretary under this section.

(a) An air carrier, foreign air carrier, or ticket agent may not do the following:

(1) charge or receive compensation for foreign air transportation that is different from the rate specified in the tariff of the carrier that is in effect for that transportation.

(2) refund or remit any part of the rate specified in the tariff.

(3) extend to any person a privilege or facility, related to a matter required by the Secretary of Transportation to be specified in a tariff for foreign air transportation, except as specified in the tariff.

(b) A person may not knowingly do the following:

(1) pay compensation for foreign air transportation of property that is different from the rate specified in the tariff in effect for that transportation.

(2) solicit, accept, or receive—

(A) a refund or remittance of any part of the rate specified in the tariff; or

(B) a privilege or facility, related to a matter required by the Secretary to be specified in a tariff for foreign air transportation of property, except as specified in the tariff.

§ 41511. Special fares for foreign air transportation

(a) This chapter does not prohibit an air carrier or foreign air carrier, under terms the Secretary of Transportation prescribes, from issuing or interchanging tickets or passes for free or reduced-fare foreign air transportation to or for the following:

(1) a director, officer, or employee of the carrier (including a retired director, officer, or employee who is receiving retirement benefits from an air carrier or foreign air carrier).

(2) a parent or the immediate family of such an officer or employee or the immediate family of such a director.

(3) a widow, widower, or minor child of an employee of the carrier who died as a direct result of a personal injury sustained when performing a duty in the service of the carrier.

(4) a witness or attorney attending a legal investigation in which the air carrier is interested.

(5) an individual injured in an aircraft accident and a physician or nurse attending the individual.

(6) a parent or the immediate family of an individual injured or killed in an aircraft accident when the transportation is related to the accident.

(7) an individual or property to provide relief in a general epidemic, pestilence, or other emergency.

(8) other individuals under other circumstances the Secretary prescribes by regulation.

(b) Under terms the Secretary prescribes, an air carrier or foreign air carrier may grant reduced-fare foreign air transportation on a space-available basis to the following:

(1) a minister of religion.

(2) an individual who is at least 60 years of age and no longer gainfully employed.

(3) an individual who is at least 65 years of age.

(4) an individual who has severely impaired vision or hearing or another physical or mental handicap and an accompanying attendant needed by that individual.

SUBCHAPTER I—REQUIREMENTS

§ 41701. Classification of air carriers

The Secretary of Transportation may establish—

(1) reasonable classifications for air carriers when required because of the nature of the transportation provided by them; and

(2) reasonable requirements for each class when the Secretary decides those requirements are necessary in the public interest.

§ 41702. Interstate air transportation

An air carrier shall provide safe and adequate interstate air transportation.

§ 41703. Navigation of foreign civil aircraft

(a) A foreign aircraft, not part of the armed forces of a foreign country, may be navigated in the United States only—

(1) if the country of registry grants a similar privilege to aircraft of the United States;

(2) by an airman holding a certificate or license issued or made valid by the United States Government or the country of registry;

(3) if the Secretary of Transportation authorizes the navigation; and

(4) if the navigation is consistent with terms the Secretary may prescribe.

(b) The Secretary may authorize navigation under this section only if the Secretary decides the authorization is—

(1) in the public interest; and

(2) consistent with any agreement between the Government and the government of a foreign country.

(c) The Secretary may authorize an aircraft permitted to navigate in the United States under this section to provide air commerce in the United States. However, the aircraft may take on for compensation, at a place in the United States, passengers, property, or mail destined for another place in the United States only if—

(1) specifically authorized under section 40109(g) of this title; or

(2) under regulations the Secretary prescribes authorizing air carriers to provide otherwise authorized air transportation with foreign registered aircraft under lease or charter to them without crew.

(d) This section does not affect section 41301 or 41302 of this title. However, a foreign air carrier holding a permit under section 41302 does not need to obtain additional authorization under this section for an operation authorized by the permit.

§ 41704. Transporting property not to be transported in an aircraft cabin

Under regulations or orders of the Secretary of Transportation, an air carrier shall transport as baggage the property of a passenger traveling in air transportation that may not be carried in an aircraft cabin because of a law or regulation of the United States. The carrier is liable to pay an amount not more than the amount declared to the carrier by that passenger for actual loss of, or damage to, the property caused by the carrier. The carrier may impose reasonable charges and conditions for its liability.

§ 41705. Discrimination against handicapped individuals

In providing air transportation, an air carrier may not discriminate against an otherwise qualified individual on the following grounds:

(1) the individual has a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities.

(2) the individual has a record of such an impairment.

(3) the individual is regarded as having such an impairment.

§ 41706. Prohibitions against smoking on scheduled flights

(a) An individual may not smoke in the passenger cabin or lavatory of an aircraft on a scheduled airline flight segment in air transportation or intrastate air transportation that is—

(1) between places in a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, or the Virgin Islands;

(2) between a place in any jurisdiction referred to in clause (1) of this subsection (except Alaska and Hawaii) and a place in any other of those jurisdictions; or

(3)(A) scheduled for not more than 6 hours duration; and

(B)(i) between a place referred to in clause (1) of this subsection (except Alaska and Hawaii) and Alaska or Hawaii; or

(ii) between Alaska and Hawaii.

(b) The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations necessary to carry out this section.

§ 41707. Incorporating contract terms into written instrument

To the extent the Secretary of Transportation prescribes by regulation, an air carrier may incorporate by reference in a ticket or written instrument any term of the contract for providing interstate air transportation.

§ 41708. Reports by air carriers

(a) To the extent the Secretary of Transportation finds necessary to carry out this subpart, this section and section 41709 of this title apply to a person controlling an air carrier or affiliated (within the meaning of section 11343(c) of this title) with a carrier.

(b) The Secretary may require an air carrier or foreign air carrier—

(1)(A) to file annual, monthly, periodical, and special reports with the Secretary in the form and way prescribed by the Secretary, and

(B) to file the reports under oath;

(2) to provide specific answers to questions on which the Secretary considers information to be necessary; and

(3) to file with the Secretary a copy of each agreement, arrangement, contract, or understanding between the carrier and anothe carrier or person related to transportation affected by this subpart.

§ 41709. Records of air carriers

(a) The Secretary of Transportation shal prescribe the form of records to be kept b an air carrier, including records on th movement of traffic; receipts and expenditures of money, and the time period durin which the records shall be kept. A carrie may keep only records prescribed or approved by the Secretary. However, a carrie may keep additional records if the additional records do not impair the integrity of th records prescribed or approved by the Secretary and are not an unreasonable financia burden on the carrier.

(b)(1) The Secretary at any time may—

(A) inspect the land, buildings, and equipment of an air carrier or foreign air carrie when necessary to decide under subchapte II of this chapter or section 41102, 41103, o 41302 of this title whether a carrier is fi willing, and able; and

(B) inspect records kept or required to b kept by an air carrier, foreign air carrier, o ticket agent.

(2) The Secretary may employ specia agents or auditors to carry out this subsection.

§ 41710. Time requirements

When a matter requiring action of the Secretary of Transportation is submitted unde section 40109(a) or (c)-(h), 41309, or 4211 of this title and an evidentiary hearing—

(1) is ordered, the Secretary shall make final decision on the matter not later tha the last day of the 12th month that begin after the date the matter is submitted; or

(2) is not ordered, the Secretary shall mak a final decision on the matter not later tha the last day of the 6th month that begin after the date the matter is submitted.

§ 41711. Air carrier management inquiry and coo eration with other authorities

In carrying out this subpart, the Secretar of Transportation may—

(1) inquire into the management of th business of an air carrier and obtain fro the air carrier, and a person controllin controlled by, or under common contr with the carrier, information the Secretar decides reasonably is necessary to carry o the inquiry;

(2) confer and hold a joint proceedin with a State authority; and

(3) exchange information related to aer nautics with a government of a foreig country through appropriate department agencies, and instrumentalities of th United States Government.

§ 41712. Unfair or deceptive practices and unfair methods of competition

On the initiative of the Secretary of Transportation or the complaint of an air carrier, foreign air carrier, or ticket agent, and if the Secretary considers it is in the public interest, the Secretary may investigate and decide whether an air carrier, foreign air carrier, or ticket agent has been or is engaged in an unfair or deceptive practice or an unfair method of competition in air transportation or the sale of air transportation. If the Secretary, after notice and an opportunity for a proceeding, finds that an air carrier, foreign air carrier, or ticket agent is engaged in an unfair or deceptive practice or unfair method of competition, the Secretary shall order the air carrier, foreign air carrier, or ticket agent to stop the practice or method.

§ 41713. Preemption of authority over rates, routes, and service

(a) In this section, "State" means a State, the District of Columbia, and a territory or possession of the United States.

(b)(1) Except as provided in this subsection, a State, political subdivision of a State, or political authority of at least 2 States may not enact or enforce a law or regulation related to a rate, route, or service of an air carrier that may provide air transportation under this subpart.

(2) Paragraph (1) of this subsection does not apply to air transportation provided entirely in Alaska unless the transportation is air transportation (except charter air transportation) provided under a certificate issued under section 41102 of this title.

(3) This subsection does not limit a State, political subdivision of a State, or political authority of at least 2 States that owns or operates an airport served by an air carrier holding a certificate issued by the Secretary of Transportation from carrying out its proprietary powers and rights.

SUBCHAPTER II—SMALL COMMUNITY AIR SERVICE

In this subchapter—

(1) "eligible place" means a place in the United States that—

(A) was an eligible point under section 419 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 before October 1, 1988;

(B) received scheduled air transportation at any time during the 12-month period ending on October 1, 1988; and

(C) the Secretary of Transportation determines is at least 45 highway miles from the nearest hub airport.

(2) "enhanced essential air service" means scheduled air transportation to an eligible place of a higher level or quality than basic essential air service described in section 41732 of this title.

(3) "hub airport" means an airport that each year has at least .25 percent of the total annual boardings in the United States.

(4) "nonhub airport" means an airport that each year has less than .05 percent of the total annual boardings in the United States.

(5) "small hub airport" means an airport that each year has at least .05 percent, but less than .25 percent, of the total annual boardings in the United States.

§ 41732. Basic essential air service

(a) Basic essential air service provided under section 41733 of this title is scheduled air transportation of passengers and property—

(1) to a hub airport that has convenient connecting or single-plane air service to a substantial number of destinations beyond that airport; or

(2) to a small hub or nonhub airport, when in Alaska or when the nearest hub airport is more than 400 miles from an eligible place.

(b) Basic essential air service shall include at least the following:

(1)(A) for a place not in Alaska, 2 daily round trips 6 days a week, with not more than one intermediate stop on each flight; or

(B) for a place in Alaska, a level of service at least equal to that provided in 1976 or 2 round trips a week, whichever is greater, except that the Secretary of Transportation and the appropriate State authority of Alaska may agree to a different level of service after consulting with the affected community.

(2) flights at reasonable times considering the needs of passengers with connecting flights at the airport and at rates that are not excessive compared to the generally prevailing rates of other air carriers for like service between similar places.

(3) for a place not in Alaska, service provided in an aircraft with an effective capacity of at least 15 passengers if the average daily boardings at the place in any calendar year from 1976-1986 were more than 11 passengers unless—

(A) that level-of-service requirement would require paying compensation in a fiscal year under section 41733(d) or 41734(d) or (e) of this title for the place when compensation otherwise would not have been paid for that place in that year; or

(B) the affected community agrees with the Secretary in writing to the use of smaller aircraft to provide service to the place.

(4) service accommodating the estimated passenger and property traffic at an average load factor, for each class of traffic considering seasonal demands for the service, of not more than—

(A) 50 percent; or

(B) 60 percent when service is provided by aircraft with more than 14 passenger seats.

(5) service provided in aircraft with at least 2 engines and using 2 pilots, unless scheduled air transportation has not been provided to the place in aircraft with at least 2 engines and using 2 pilots for at least 60 consecutive operating days at any time since October 31, 1978.

(6) service provided by pressurized aircraft when the service is provided by aircraft that regularly fly above 8,000 feet in altitude.

§ 41733. Level of basic essential air service

(a) For each eligible place for which a decision was made before October 1, 1988, under section 419 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, establishing the level of essential air transportation, the level of basic essential air service for that place shall be the level established by the Secretary of Transportation for that place by not later than December 29, 1988.

(b)(1) The Secretary shall decide on the level of basic essential air service for each eligible place for which a decision was not made before October 1, 1988, establishing the level of essential air transportation, when the Secretary receives notice that service to that place will be provided by only one air carrier. The Secretary shall make the decision by the last day of the 6-month period beginning on the date the Secretary receives the notice. The Secretary may impose notice requirements necessary to carry out this subsection. Before making a decision, the Secretary shall consider the views of any interested community and the appropriate State authority of the State in which the community is located.

(2) Until the Secretary has made a decision on a level of basic essential air service for an eligible place under this subsection, the Secretary, on petition by an appropriate representative of the place, shall prohibit an air carrier from ending, suspending, or reducing air transportation to that place that appears to deprive the place of basic essential air service.

(c)(1) If the Secretary decides that basic essential air service will not be provided to an eligible place without compensation, the Secretary shall provide notice that an air carrier may apply to provide basic essential air service to the place for compensation under this section. In selecting an applicant, the Secretary shall consider, among other factors—

(A) the demonstrated reliability of the applicant in providing scheduled air service;

(B) the contractual and marketing arrangements the applicant has made with a larger carrier to ensure service beyond the hub airport;

(C) the interline arrangements that the applicant has made with a larger carrier to allow passengers and property of the applicant at the hub airport to be transported by the larger carrier through one reservation, ticket, and baggage check-in;

(D) the preferences of the actual and potential users of air transportation at the eligible place, giving substantial weight to the views of the elected officials representing the users; and

(E) for an eligible place in Alaska, the experience of the applicant in providing, in Alaska, scheduled air service, or significant patterns of non-scheduled air service under an exemption granted under section 40109(a) and (c)-(h) of this title.

(2) Under guidelines prescribed under section 41737(a) of this title, the Secretary shall pay the rate of compensation for providing basic essential air service under this section and section 41734 of this title.

(d) The Secretary shall pay compensation under this section at times and in the way the Secretary decides is appropriate. The Secretary shall end payment of compensation to an air carrier for providing basic essential air service to an eligible place when the Secretary decides the compensation is no longer necessary to maintain basic essential air service to the place.

(e) The Secretary shall review periodically the level of basic essential air service for each eligible place. Based on the review and consultations with an interested community and the appropriate State authority of the State in which the community is located, the Secretary may make appropriate changes in the level of service.

§ 41734. Ending, suspending, and reducing basic essential air service

(a) An air carrier may end, suspend, or reduce air transportation to an eligible place below the level of basic essential air service established for that place under section 41733 of this title only after giving the Secretary of Transportation, the appropriate State authority, and the affected communities at least 90 days' notice before ending, suspending, or reducing that transportation.

(b) If at the end of the notice period under subsection (a) of this section the Secretary has not found another air carrier to provide basic essential air service to the eligible place, the Secretary shall require the carrier providing notice to continue to provide basic essential air service to the place for an additional 30-day period or until another carrier begins to provide basic essential air service to the place, whichever occurs first.

(c) If at the end of the 30-day period under subsection (b) of this section the Secretary decides another air carrier will not provide basic essential air service to the place on a continuing basis, the Secretary shall require the carrier providing service to continue to provide service for additional 30-day periods until another carrier begins providing service on a continuing basis. At the end of each 30-day period, the Secretary shall decide if another carrier will provide service on a continuing basis.

(d) If an air carrier receiving compensation under section 41733 of this title for providing basic essential air service to an eligible place is required to continue to provide service to the place under this section after the 90-day notice period under subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary shall continue to pay that compensation after the last day of that period. The Secretary shall pay the compensation until the Secretary finds another carrier to provide the service to the place or the 90th day after the end of that notice period, whichever is earlier. If, after the 90th day after the end of the 90-day notice period, the Secretary has not found another carrier to provide the service, the carrier required to continue to provide that service shall receive compensation sufficient—

(1) to pay for the fully allocated actual cost to the carrier of performing the basic essential air service that was being provided when the 90-day notice was given under subsection (a) of this section plus a reasonable return on investment that is at least 5 percent of operating costs; and

(2) to provide the carrier an additional return that recognizes the demonstrated additional lost profits from opportunities foregone and the likelihood that those lost profits increase as the period during which the carrier is required to provide the service continues.

(e) If the Secretary requires an air carrier providing basic essential air service to an eligible place without compensation under section 41733 of this title to continue providing that service after the 90-day notice period required by subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary shall provide the carrier with compensation after the end of the 90-day notice period that is sufficient—

(1) to pay for the fully allocated actual cost to the carrier of performing the basic essential air service that was being provided when the 90-day notice was given under subsection (a) of this section plus a reasonable return on investment that is at least 5 percent of operating costs; and

(2) to provide the carrier an additional return that recognizes the demonstrated additional lost profits from opportunities foregone and the likelihood that those lost profits increase as the period during which the carrier is required to provide the service continues.

(f) When the Secretary requires an air carrier to continue to provide basic essential air service to an eligible place, the Secretary shall continue to make every effort to find another carrier to provide at least that basic essential air service to the place on a continuing basis.

(g) If an air carrier, providing basic essential air service under section 41733 of this title between an eligible place and an airport at which the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration limits the number of instrument flight rule takeoffs and landings of aircraft, provides notice under subsection (a) of this section of an intention to end, suspend, or reduce that service and another carrier is found to provide the service, the Secretary shall require the carrier providing notice to transfer any operational authority the carrier has to land or take off at that airport related to the service to the eligible place to the carrier that will provide the service, if—

(1) the carrier that will provide the service needs the authority; and

(2) the authority to be transferred is being used only to provide air service to the eligible place.

§ 41735. Enhanced essential air service

(a)(1) A State or local government may submit a proposal to the Secretary of Transportation for enhanced essential air service to an eligible place for which basic essential air service is being provided under section 41733 of this title. The proposal shall—

(A) specify the level and type of enhanced essential air service the State or local government considers appropriate; and

(B) include an agreement related to compensation required for the proposed service.

(2) The agreement submitted under paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection shall provide that—

(A) the State or local government or a person pay 50 percent of the compensation required for the proposed service and the United States Government pay the remaining 50 percent; or

(B)(i) the Government pay 100 percent of the compensation; and

(ii) if the proposed service is not successful for at least a 2-year period under the criteria prescribed by the Secretary under paragraph (3) of this subsection, the eligible place is not eligible for air service or air transportation for which compensation is paid by the Secretary under this subchapter.

(3) The Secretary shall prescribe by regulation objective criteria for deciding whether enhanced essential air service to an eligible place under this section is successful in terms of—

(A) increasing passenger usage of the airport facilities at the place; and

(B) reducing the amount of compensation provided by the Secretary under this subchapter for that service.

(b) Not later than 90 days after receiving a proposal under subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary shall—

(1) approve the proposal if the Secretary decides the proposal is reasonable; or

(2) if the Secretary decides the proposal is not reasonable, disapprove the proposal and notify the State or local government of the disapproval and the reasons for the disapproval.

(c)(1) The Secretary shall pay compensation under this section when and in the way the Secretary decides is appropriate. Compensation for enhanced essential air service under this section may be paid only for the costs incurred in providing air service to an eligible place that are in addition to the costs incurred in providing basic essential air service to the place under section 41733 of this title. The Secretary shall continue to pay compensation under this section only as long as—

(A) the air carrier maintains the level of enhanced essential air service;

(B) the State or local government or person agreeing to pay compensation under this section continues to pay the compensation; and

(C) the Secretary decides the compensation is necessary to maintain the service to the place.

(2) The Secretary may require the State o local government or person agreeing to pa compensation under this section to mak advance payments or provide other securit to ensure that timely payments are made.

(d)(1) The Secretary shall review periodically the enhanced essential air service provided to each eligible place under this section.

(2) For service for which the Governmen pays 50 percent of the compensation, base on the review and consultation with the affected community and the State or local government or person paying the remaining 5 percent of the compensation, the Secretar shall make appropriate adjustments in th type and level of service to the place.

(3) For service for which the Governmen pays 100 percent of the compensation, base on the review and consultation with th State or local government submitting th proposal, the Secretary shall decide whethe the service has succeeded for at least a 2 year period under the criteria prescribe under subsection (a)(3) of this section. If unsuccessful, the place is not eligible for ai service or air transportation for which compensation is paid by the Secretary unde this subchapter.

(e) An air carrier may end, suspend, o reduce air transportation to an eligibl place below the level of enhanced essentia air service established for that place by th Secretary under this section only afte giving the Secretary, the affected commun ty, and the State or local government o person paying compensation for that servic at least 30 days' notice before ending, su pending, or reducing the service. This su section does not relieve the carrier of an o ligation under section 41734 of this title.

§ 41736. Air transportation to non-eligible places

(a)(1) A State or local government ma propose to the Secretary of Transportatio that the Secretary provide compensation t an air carrier to provide air transportatio to a place that is not an eligible place unde this subchapter. Not later than 90 days afte receiving a proposal under this section, th Secretary shall—

(A) decide whether to designate the pla as eligible to receive compensation unde this section; and

(B)(i) approve the proposal if the State o local government or a person is willing an able to pay 50 percent of the compensatio for providing the transportation, and noti the State or local government of the appro al; or

(ii) disapprove the proposal if the Secr tary decides the proposal is not reasonab under paragraph (2) of this subsection, an notify the State or local government of th disapproval and the reasons for the disa proval.

(2) In deciding whether a proposal is re sonable, the Secretary shall consider, amon other factors—

(A) the traffic-generating potential of t place;

(B) the cost to the United States Gover ment of providing the proposed transport tion; and

(C) the distance of the place from the cl est hub airport.

(b) Notwithstanding subsection (a)(1)(of this section, the Secretary shall approve proposal under this section to compens an air carrier for providing air transpor tion to a place in the 48 contiguous Sta or the District of Columbia and design the place as eligible for compensation und this section if—

(1) at any time before October 23, 1978, the place was served by a carrier holding a certificate under section 401 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958;

(2) the place is more than 50 miles from the nearest small hub airport or an eligible place;

(3) the place is more than 150 miles from the nearest hub airport; and

(4) the State or local government submitting the proposal or a person is willing and able to pay 25 percent of the cost of providing the compensated transportation.

(c)(1) If the Secretary designates a place under subsection (a)(1) of this section as eligible for compensation under this section, the Secretary shall decide, not later than 6 months after the date of the designation, on the level of air transportation to be provided under this section. Before making a decision, the Secretary shall consider the views of any interested community, the appropriate State authority of the State in which the place is located, and the State or local government or person agreeing to pay compensation for the transportation under subsection (b)(4) of this section.

(2) After making the decision under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Secretary shall provide notice that any air carrier that is willing to provide the level of air transportation established under paragraph (1) for a place may submit an application to provide the transportation. In selecting an applicant, the Secretary shall consider, among other factors—

(A) the factors listed in section 41733(c)(1) of this title; and

(B) the views of the State or local government or person agreeing to pay compensation for the transportation.

(d)(1) The Secretary shall pay compensation under this section when and in the way the Secretary decides is appropriate. The Secretary shall continue to pay compensation under this section only as long as—

(A) the air carrier maintains the level of air transportation established by the Secretary under subsection (c)(1) of this section;

(B) the State or local government or person agreeing to pay compensation for transportation under this section continues to pay that compensation; and

(C) the Secretary decides the compensation is necessary to maintain the transportation to the place.

(2) The Secretary may require the State or local government or person agreeing to pay compensation under this section to make advance payments or provide other security to ensure that timely payments are made.

(e) The Secretary shall review periodically the level of air transportation provided under this section. Based on the review and consultation with any interested community, the appropriate State authority of the State in which the community is located, and the State or local government or person paying compensation under this section, the Secretary may make appropriate adjustments in the level of transportation.

(f) After providing notice and an opportunity for interested persons to comment, the Secretary may withdraw the designation of a place under subsection (a)(1) of this section as eligible to receive compensation under this section if the place has received air transportation under this section for at least 2 years and the Secretary decides the withdrawal would be in the public interest. The Secretary by regulation shall prescribe standards for deciding whether the withdrawal of a designation under this subsection is in the public interest. The standards shall include the factors listed in subsection (a)(2) of this section.

(g) An air carrier providing air transportation for compensation under this section may end, suspend, or reduce that transportation below the level of transportation established by the Secretary under this section only after giving the Secretary, the affected community, and the State or local government or person paying compensation under this section at least 30 days' notice before ending, suspending, or reducing the transportation.

§ 41737. Compensation guidelines, limitations, and claims

(a)(1) The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe guidelines governing the rate of compensation payable under this subchapter. The guidelines shall be used to determine the reasonable amount of compensation required to ensure the continuation of air service or air transportation under this subchapter. The guidelines shall—

(A) provide for a reduction in compensation when an air carrier does not provide service or transportation agreed to be provided;

(B) consider amounts needed by an air carrier to promote public use of the service or transportation for which compensation is being paid; and

(C) include expense elements based on representative costs of air carriers providing scheduled air transportation of passengers, property, and mail on aircraft of the type the Secretary decides is appropriate for providing the service or transportation for which compensation is being provided.

(2) Promotional amounts described in paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection shall be a special, segregated element of the compensation provided to a carrier under this subchapter.

(b) The Secretary may pay compensation to an air carrier for providing air service or air transportation under this subchapter only if the Secretary finds the carrier is able to provide the service or transportation in a reliable way.

(c) Compensation paid under this subchapter for air service or air transportation to or from an eligible place in the 48 contiguous States or the District of Columbia may be not more than $300 for each passenger.

(d) Not later than 15 days after receiving a written claim from an air carrier for compensation under this subchapter, the Secretary shall—

(1) pay or deny the United States Government share of a claim; and

(2) if denying the claim, notify the carrier of the denial and the reasons for the denial.

§ 41738. Fitness of air carriers

Notwithstanding section 40109(a) and (c)-(h) of this title, an air carrier may provide air service to an eligible place or air transportation to a place designated under section 41736 of this title only when the Secretary of Transportation decides that—

(1) the carrier is fit, willing, and able to perform the service or transportation; and

(2) aircraft used to provide the service or transportation, and operations related to the service or transportation, conform to the safety standards prescribed by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration.

§ 41739. Air carrier obligations

If at least 2 air carriers make an agreement to operate under or use a single carrier designator code to provide air transportation, the carrier whose code is being used shares responsibility with the other carriers for the quality of transportation provided the public under the code by the other carriers.

§ 41740. Joint proposals

The Secretary of Transportation shall encourage the submission of joint proposals by 2 or more air carriers for providing air service or air transportation under this subchapter through arrangements that maximize the service or transportation to and from major destinations beyond the hub.

§ 41741. Insurance

The Secretary of Transportation may pay an air carrier compensation under this subchapter only when the carrier files with the Secretary an insurance policy or self-insurance plan approved by the Secretary. The policy or plan must be sufficient to pay for bodily injury to, or death of, an individual, or for loss of or damage to property of others, resulting from the operation of aircraft, but not more than the amount of the policy or plan limits.

§ 41742. Ending effective date

This subchapter is not effective after September 30, 1998.

CHAPTER 419—TRANSPORTATION OF MAIL

Sec.
41901. General authority.
41902. Schedules for certain transportation of mail.
41903. Duty to provide certain transportation of mail.
41904. Noncitizens transporting mail to or in foreign countries.
41905. Regulating air carrier transportation of foreign mail.
41906. Emergency mail transportation.
41907. Rates for foreign transportation of mail.
41908. Rates for transporting mail of foreign countries.
41909. Duty to oppose unreasonable Universal Postal Union rates.
41910. Weighing mail.
41911. Evidence of providing mail service.
41912. Effect on foreign postal arrangements.

§ 41901. General authority

(a) The United States Postal Service may provide for the transportation of mail by aircraft in interstate air transportation under section 5402(d) and (f) of title 39.

(b) Except as provided in section 5402 of title 39, on the initiative of the Secretary of Transportation or on petition by the Postal Service or an air carrier, the Secretary shall prescribe and publish—

(1) after notice and an opportunity for a hearing on the record, reasonable rates of compensation to be paid by the Postal Service for the transportation of mail by aircraft in foreign air transportation or between places in Alaska, the facilities used in and useful for the transportation of mail, and the services related to the transportation of mail for each carrier holding a certificate that authorizes that transportation;

(2) the methods used, whether by aircraft-mile, pound-mile, weight, space, or a combination of those or other methods, to determine the rates of compensation for each air carrier or class of air carriers; and

(3) the effective date of the rates.

(c) In prescribing services under subsection (b) of this section, the Secretary may include transportation other than by aircraft that is incidental to transportation of mail by aircraft or necessary because of emergency conditions related to aircraft operations.

(d) Considering conditions peculiar to transportation by aircraft and to particular air carriers or classes of air carriers, the Secretary may prescribe different rates under this section for different air carriers or classes of air carriers and for different classes of service. In prescribing a rate for a carrier under this section, the Secretary shall consider, among other factors, the following:

(1) the condition that the carrier may hold and operate under a certificate authorizing the transportation of mail only by providing necessary and adequate facilities and service for the transportation of mail.

(2) standards related to the character and quality of service to be provided that are prescribed by or under law.

(e) A petition for prescribing a reasonable rate of compensation under this section must include a statement of the rate the petitioner believes is reasonable.

(f) The Postal Service shall introduce as part of the record in every proceeding under this section a comprehensive statement of the services to be required of the air carrier and other information the Postal Service has that the Secretary considers material to a proceeding under this section.

(g) The authority of the Secretary under this part and section 5402 of title 39 providing for the transportation of mail by aircraft between places in Alaska expires on the date specified in section 5402(f) of title 39.

§ 41902. Schedules for certain transportation of mail

(a) Except as provided in section 41906 of this title and section 5402 of title 39, an air carrier may transport mail by aircraft in foreign air transportation or between places in Alaska only under a schedule designated or required to be established under subsection (c) of this section for the transportation of mail.

(b) Every air carrier shall file with the Secretary of Transportation and the United States Postal Service a statement showing—

(1) the places between which the air carrier is authorized to provide foreign air transportation;

(2) the places between which the air carrier is authorized to transport mail entirely in one State;

(3) the places between which the air carrier is authorized to transport mail in Alaska;

(4) every schedule of aircraft regularly operated by the air carrier between places described in clauses (1)-(3) of this subsection and every change in each schedule; and

(5) for each schedule, the places served by the air carrier and the time of arrival at, and departure from, each place.

(c) The Postal Service may—

(1) designate any schedule of an air carrier filed under subsection (b)(4) of this section for the transportation of mail between the places between which the air carrier is authorized by its certificate to transport mail; and

(2) require the air carrier to establish additional schedules for the transportation of mail between those places.

(d) A schedule designated or required to be established for the transportation of mail under subsection (c) of this section may be changed only after 10 days' notice of the change is filed as provided in subsection (b)(4) of this section. The Postal Service may disapprove a proposed change in a schedule, may change the schedule, or may change the proposed change.

(e) An order of the Postal Service under this section may become effective only after 10 days after the order is issued. A person adversely affected by the order may appeal the order to the Secretary before the end of the 10-day period under regulations the Secretary prescribes. If the public convenience and necessity require, the Secretary may change, suspend, or cancel the order. Pending a decision about the order, the Secretary may postpone the effective date of the order.

(f) The Secretary shall give preference to a proceeding under this section over all other proceedings before the Secretary under this subpart.

§ 41903. Duty to provide certain transportation of mail

(a) Subject to subsection (b) of this section, an air carrier authorized by its certificate to transport mail by aircraft in foreign air transportation or between places in Alaska shall—

(1) provide facilities and services necessary and adequate to provide that transportation; and

(2) transport mail between the places authorized in the certificate for transportation of mail when required, and under regulations prescribed, by the United States Postal Service.

(b) The Secretary of Transportation may prescribe the maximum mail load for a schedule or for an aircraft or type of aircraft for the transportation of mail by aircraft in foreign air transportation or between places in Alaska. If the Postal Service tenders to an air carrier mail exceeding the maximum load for transportation by the carrier under a schedule designated or required to be established for the transportation of mail under section 41902(c) of this title, the carrier, as nearly in accordance with the schedule as the Secretary decides is possible, shall—

(1) provide facilities sufficient to transport the mail to the extent the Secretary decides the carrier reasonably is able to do so; and

(2) transport that mail.

§ 41904. Noncitizens transporting mail to or in foreign countries

When the United States Postal Service decides that it may be necessary to have a person not a citizen of the United States transport mail by aircraft to or in a foreign country, the Postal Service may make an arrangement with the person, without advertising, to provide the transportation.

§ 41905. Regulating air carrier transportation of foreign mail

An air carrier holding a certificate that authorizes foreign air transportation and transporting mail of a foreign country shall transport that mail under the control of, and subject to regulation by, the United States Government.

§ 41906. Emergency mail transportation

(a) In an emergency caused by a flood, fire, or other disaster, the United States Postal Service may make a contract without advertising to transport mail by aircraft to or from a locality affected by the emergency when the available facilities of persons authorized to transport mail to or from the locality are inadequate to meet the requirements of the Postal Service during the emergency. The contract may be only for periods necessary to maintain mail service because of the inadequacy of the facilities. Payment for transportation provided under the contract shall be made at rates provided in the contract.

(b) Transportation provided under a contract made under subsection (a) of this section is not air transportation within the meaning of this part.

(a) When air transportation is provided between the United States and a foreign country both by aircraft owned or operated by an air carrier holding a certificate under chapter 411 of this title and by aircraft owned or operated by a foreign air carrier, the United States Postal Service may not pay to or for the account of the foreign air carrier a rate of compensation for transporting mail by aircraft between the United States and the foreign country that the Postal Service believes will result (over a reasonable period determined by the Postal Service considering exchange fluctuations and other factors) in the foreign air carrier receiving a rate of compensation for transporting the mail that is higher than the rate—

(1) the foreign country pays to air carriers for transporting mail of the foreign country by aircraft between the foreign country and the United States; or

(2) determined by the Postal Service to be comparable to the rate the foreign country pays to air carriers for transporting mail of the foreign country by aircraft between the foreign country and an intermediate country on the route of the air carrier between the foreign country and the United States.

(b) The Secretary of Transportation shall act expeditiously on proposed changes in rates for transporting mail by aircraft in foreign air transportation. When prescribing those rates, the Secretary shall consider—

(1) the rates paid for transportation of mail under the Universal Postal Union Convention as ratified by the United States Government;

(2) the rate-making elements used by the Universal Postal Union in prescribing its airmail rates; and

(3) the competitive disadvantage to United States flag air carriers resulting from foreign air carriers receiving Universal Postal Union rates for transporting United States mail and national origin mail of their own countries.

§ 41908. Rates for transporting mail of foreign countries

(a) The United States Postal Service shall determine the rates that an air carrier holding a certificate that authorizes foreign air transportation must charge a foreign country for transporting mail of the foreign country. The Postal Service shall put those rates into effect under the postal convention regulating postal relations between the United States and the foreign country or as provided under this section.

(b) The Postal Service may authorize an air carrier holding a certificate that authorizes foreign air transportation, under limitations the Postal Service prescribes, to change the rates the air carrier charges a foreign country for transporting mail of the foreign country in the foreign country or between the foreign country and another foreign country.

(c)(1) When an air carrier holding a certificate that authorizes foreign air transportation transports mail of a foreign country—

(A) under an arrangement with the foreign country made or approved under this section, the carrier must collect its compensation for the transportation from the foreign country under the arrangement; and

(B) without having an arrangement with the foreign country consistent with this section, the compensation collected by the United States Government for the transportation shall be for the account of the air carrier.

(2) An air carrier holding a certificate that authorizes foreign air transportation is not entitled to receive compensation from both a foreign country and the Government for transporting the same mail of the foreign country.

§ 41909. Duty to oppose unreasonable Universal Postal Union rates

The Secretary of State and the United States Postal Service shall—

(1) take appropriate action to ensure that the rates paid for transporting mail under the Universal Postal Union Convention are not higher than reasonable rates for transporting mail; and

(2) oppose any existing or proposed Universal Postal Union rate that is higher than a reasonable rate for transporting mail.

§ 41910. Weighing mail

The United States Postal Service may weigh mail transported by aircraft and make statistical and administrative computations necessary in the interest of mail service. When the Secretary of Transportation decides that additional or more frequent weighings of mail are advisable or necessary to carry out this part, the Postal Service shall provide the weighings, but it is not required to provide them for continuous periods of more than 30 days.

§ 41911. Evidence of providing mail service

When and in the form required by the United States Postal Service, an air carrier transporting or handling—

(1) United States mail shall submit evidence, signed by an authorized official, that the transportation or handling has been provided; and

(2) mail of a foreign country shall submit evidence, signed by an authorized official, of the amount of mail transported or handled and the compensation payable and received for that transportation or handling.

§ 41912. Effect on foreign postal arrangements

This part does not—

(1) affect an arrangement made by the United States Government with the postal administration of a foreign country related to the transportation of mail by aircraft; or

(2) impair the authority of the United States Postal Service to make such an arrangement.

42102. Payments to eligible protected employees.
42103. Duty to hire protected employees.

SUBCHAPTER II—MUTUAL AID AGREEMENTS AND LABOR REQUIREMENTS OF AIR CARRIERS

42111. Mutual aid agreements.
42112. Labor requirements of air carriers.

SUBCHAPTER I—EMPLOYEE PROTECTION PROGRAM

§ 42101. Definitions

(a) In this subchapter—

(1) "eligible protected employee" means a protected employee who is deprived of employment, or whose compensation is reduced, because of a qualifying dislocation.

(2) "major contraction" means a reduction (except as provided in subsection (b) of this section) of at least 7.5 percent in the number of full-time employees of an air carrier within a 12-month period, except for employees deprived of employment because of a strike or whose employment is ended for cause.

(3) "protected employee" means an individual who on October 24, 1978, was employed for at least 4 years by an air carrier holding a certificate under section 41102 of this title, but does not include a director or officer of a corporation.

(4) "qualifying dislocation" means a bankruptcy or major contraction of an air carrier holding a certificate under section 41102 of this title when the Secretary of Transportation finds the bankruptcy or contraction occurred after December 31, 1978, and before January 1, 1989, the major cause of which was the change in regulatory structure provided by the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978.

(b) The Secretary may find a reduction of less than 7.5 percent of the number of full-time employees is part of a major contraction if the Secretary decides another reduction is likely to occur within a 12-month period that, when included with the first reduction, will result in a total reduction of more than 7.5 percent.

(a) Subject to amounts provided in an appropriation law, the Secretary of Labor shall make monthly assistance payments, moving expense payments, and reimbursement payments as provided under this section to an eligible protected employee whose employment is not ended for cause. The employee must apply to receive the payments and cooperate with the Secretary in finding other employment.

(b)(1) Subject to amounts provided in an appropriation law, an eligible protected employee shall receive 72 monthly assistance payments. However, an eligible protected employee deprived of employment may not receive a payment after obtaining other employment. For each class or craft of protected employees, the Secretary of Labor, after consulting with the Secretary of Transportation, shall prescribe guidelines for computing the amount of each monthly assistance payment to be made to a member of the class or craft and what percentage of salary that payment represents.

(2) The amount of a monthly payment payable under paragraph (1) of this subsection to an eligible protected employee shall be reduced—

(A) by unemployment compensation the employee receives; or

(B) if the employee does not accept reasonably comparable employment, to an amount the employee would be entitled to receive if the employee had accepted the employment.

(3) If accepting comparable employment to avoid a reduction in the monthly assistance payment under paragraph (2) of this subsection would force an eligible protected employee to relocate, the employee may decide not to relocate. Instead of the payments provided under this section, the employee may receive the lesser of 3 payments or the maximum number of payments that remain to be paid under paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(c)(1) Subject to amounts provided in an appropriation law, an eligible protected employee who relocates shall receive—

(A) reasonable moving expense payments to move the employee and the employee's immediate family; and

(B) reimbursement payments for a loss incurred in selling the employee's principal place of residence for less than fair market value or in cancelling a lease on, or contract to buy, the residence.

(2) The Secretary of Labor shall decide on the amount of the moving expenses and the fair market value of the residence.

§ 42103. Duty to hire protected employees

(a) A protected employee of an air carrier regulated by the Secretary of Transportation who was furloughed or whose employment was ended by the carrier (except for cause) before October 23, 1988, is entitled to be the first employed in the occupational specialty of the employee, regardless of the employee's age, by any other air carrier holding a certificate under section 41102 of this title before October 24, 1978. However, the air carrier may recall its furloughed employees before hiring a protected employee of another air carrier regulated by the Secretary who was furloughed or whose employment was ended by the other carrier (except for cause) before October 23, 1988. An employee hired by an air carrier under this section retains seniority and recall rights with the air carrier that furloughed or ended the employment of the employee.

(b) The Secretary of Labor—

(1) shall establish and publish periodically a list of jobs available with an air carrier holding a certificate under section 41102 of this title that includes necessary information and detail;

(2) shall assist eligible protected employees to find other employment;

(3) shall encourage negotiations between air carriers and representatives of employees on rehiring practices and seniority; and

(4) may require an air carrier to file with the Secretary information necessary to carry out this section.

§ 42104. Congressional review of regulations

(a) In this section, "legislative day" means a calendar day on which both Houses of Congress are in session.

(b) The Secretary of Labor may not prescribe a final regulation under this subchapter until 30 legislative days after the regulation is submitted to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives.

(c) A regulation prescribed as final under this subchapter shall be submitted to Congress and becomes effective only if, during the period of 60 legislative days after the regulation is submitted to Congress, either House does not pass a resolution disapproving the regulation. However, if Congress adopts a resolution approving the regulation during the 60-day period, the regulation is effective on that date.

§ 42105. Airline Employees Protective Account

The Department of Labor has an Airline Employees Protective Account consisting of amounts appropriated to it. An amount necessary to carry out this subchapter, including administrative expenses, may be appropriated to the Account annually.

§ 42106. Ending effective date

This subchapter is not effective after the last day the Secretary of Labor must make a payment under this subchapter.

SUBCHAPTER II—MUTUAL AID AGREEMENTS AND LABOR REQUIREMENTS OF AIR CARRIERS

§ 42111. Mutual aid agreements

An air carrier that will receive payments from another air carrier under an agreement between the air carriers for the time the one air carrier is not providing foreign air transportation, or is providing reduced levels of foreign air transportation, because of a labor strike must file a true copy of the agreement with the Secretary of Transportation and have it approved by the Secretary under section 41309 of this title. Notwithstanding section 41309, the Secretary shall approve the agreement only if it provides that—

(1) the air carrier will receive payments of not more than 60 percent of direct operating expenses, including interest expenses, but not depreciation or amortization expenses;

(2) benefits may be paid for not more than 8 weeks, and may not be for losses incurred during the first 30 days of a strike; and

(3) on request of the striking employees, the dispute will be submitted to binding arbitration under the Railway Labor Act (45 U.S.C. 151 et seq.).

§ 42112. Labor requirements of air carriers

(a) In this section—

(1) "copilot" means an employee whose duties include assisting or relieving the pilot in manipulating an aircraft and who is qualified to serve as, and has in effect an airman certificate authorizing the employee to serve as, a copilot.

(2) "pilot" means an employee who is—

(A) responsible for manipulating or who manipulates the flight controls of an aircraft when under way, including the landing and takeoff of an aircraft; and

(B) qualified to serve as, and has in effect an airman certificate authorizing the employee to serve as, a pilot.

(b) An air carrier shall—

(1) maintain rates of compensation, maximum hours, and other working conditions and relations for its pilots and copilots who are providing interstate air transportation in the 48 contiguous States and the District of Columbia to conform with decision number 83, May 10, 1934, National Labor Board, notwithstanding any limitation in that decision on the period of its effectiveness;

(2) maintain rates of compensation for its pilots and copilots who are providing foreign air transportation or air transportation only in one territory or possession of the United States; and

(3) comply with title II of the Railway Labor Act (45 U.S.C. 181 et seq.) as long as it holds its certificate.

(c) A minimum annual rate under subsection (b)(2) of this section may not be less than the annual rate required to be paid for comparable service to a pilot or copilot under subsection (b)(1) of this section.

(d) This section does not prevent pilots or copilots of an air carrier from obtaining by collective bargaining higher rates of compensation or more favorable working conditions or relations.

SUBPART III—SAFETY

CHAPTER 441—REGISTRATION AND RECORDATION OF AIRCRAFT

Sec.
44101. Operation of aircraft.
44102. Registration requirements.
44103. Registration of aircraft.
44104. Registration of aircraft components and dealers' certificates of registration.
44105. Suspension and revocation of aircraft certificates.
44106. Revocation of aircraft certificates for controlled substance violations.
44107. Recordation of conveyances and instruments.
44108. Validity of conveyances and instruments.
44109. Reporting transfer of ownership.
44110. Information about aircraft ownership and rights.
44111. Changes in registration and recordation system for aircraft not providing air transportation.
44112. Limitation of liability.

§ 44101. Operation of aircraft

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, a person may operate an aircraft only when the aircraft is registered under section 44103 of this title.

(b) A person may operate an aircraft in the United States that is not registered—

(1) when authorized under section 40103(d) or 41703 of this title;

(2) when it is an aircraft of the armed forces and is identified in the way prescribed by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration; and

(3) for a reasonable period of time after a transfer of ownership, under regulations prescribed by the Administrator.

§ 44102. Registration requirements

(a) An aircraft may be registered under section 44103 of this title only when the aircraft is—

(1) not registered under the laws of a foreign country and is owned by—

(A) a citizen of the United States;

(B) an individual citizen of a foreign country lawfully admitted for permanent residence in the United States; or

(C) a corporation not a citizen of the United States when the corporation is organized and doing business under the laws of the United States or a State, and the aircraft is based and primarily used in the United States; or

(2) an aircraft of—

(A) the United States Government; or

(B) a State, the District of Columbia, a territory or possession of the United States, or a political subdivision of a State, territory, or possession.

(b) In carrying out subsection (a)(1)(C) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall define "based and primarily used in the United States".

§ 44103. Registration of aircraft

(a)(1) On application of the owner of an aircraft that meets the requirements of section 44102 of this title, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall—

(A) register the aircraft; and

(B) issue a certificate of registration to its owner.

(2) The Administrator may prescribe the extent to which an aircraft owned by the holder of a dealer's certificate of registration issued under section 44104(2) of this title also is registered under this section.

(b)(1) Except as provided in section 44106(e)(2) of this title, the Administrator may not issue an owner's certificate of registration under subsection (a)(1) of this section to a person whose certificate is revoked under section 44106 during the 5-year period beginning on the date of the revocation. However, the Administrator may issue the certificate to the person after the one-year period beginning on the date of the revocation if the Administrator decides that the aircraft otherwise meets the requirements of section 44102 of this title and that denial of a certificate for the 5-year period—

(A) would be excessive considering the nature of the offense or the act committed and the burden the denial places on the person; or

(B) would not be in the public interest.

(2) A decision of the Administrator under paragraph (1) (A) or (B) of this subsection is within the discretion of the Administrator. That decision or failure to make a decision is not subject to administrative or judicial review.

(c) A certificate of registration issued under this section is—

(1) conclusive evidence of the nationality of an aircraft for international purposes, but not conclusive evidence in a proceeding under the laws of the United States; and

(2) not evidence of ownership of an aircraft in a proceeding in which ownership is or may be in issue.

(d) An operator of an aircraft shall make available for inspection a certificate of registration for the aircraft when requested by a United States Government, State, or local law enforcement officer.

§ 44104. Registration of aircraft components and dealers' certificates of registration

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may provide—

(1) in the interest of safety, for registering and identifying an aircraft engine, propeller, or appliance; and

(2) in the public interest, for issuing, suspending, and revoking a dealer's certificate of registration under this chapter and for its use by a person manufacturing, distributing, or selling aircraft.

§ 44105. Suspension and revocation of aircraft certificates

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may suspend or revoke a certificate of registration issued under section 44103 of this title when the aircraft no longer meets the requirements of section 44102 of this title.

(a) In this section, "controlled substance" has the same meaning given that term in section 102 of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 802).

(b)(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall issue an order revoking the certificate of registration for an aircraft issued to an owner under section 44103 of this title and any other certificate of registration that the owner of the aircraft holds under section 44103, if the Administrator finds that—

(A) the aircraft was used to carry out, o facilitate, an activity that is punishable b death or imprisonment for more than on year under a law of the United States or State related to a controlled substanc (except a law related to simple possession o a controlled substance); and

(B) the owner of the aircraft permitted th use of the aircraft knowing that the aircra was to be used for the activity described i clause (A) of this paragraph.

(2) An aircraft owner that is not an individual is deemed to have permitted the us of the aircraft knowing that the aircraft wa to be used for the activity described in paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection only if a majority of the individuals who control th owner of the aircraft or who are involved i forming the major policy of the owner permitted the use of the aircraft knowing tha the aircraft was to be used for the activity described in paragraph (1)(A).

(c) Before the Administrator revokes a certificate under subsection (b) of this section, the Administrator shall—

(1) advise the holder of the certificate of the charges or reasons on which the Administrator bases the proposed action; and

(2) provide the holder of the certificate an opportunity to answer the charges and state why the certificate should not be revoked.

(d)(1) A person whose certificate is revoked by the Administrator under subsection (b) of this section may appeal the revocation order to the National Transportation Safety Board. The Board shall affirm or reverse the order after providing notice and a hearing on the record. In conducting the hearing, the Board is not bound by the findings of fact of the Administrator.

(2) When a person files an appeal with the Board under this subsection, the order of the Administrator revoking the certificate is stayed. However, if the Administrator advises the Board that safety in air transportation or air commerce requires the immediate effectiveness of the order—

(A) the order remains effective; and

(B) the Board shall dispose of the appeal not later than 60 days after notification by the Administrator under this paragraph.

(3) A person substantially affected by an order of the Board under this subsection may seek judicial review of the order under section 46110 of this title. The Administrator shall be made a party to that judicial proceeding.

(e)(1) The Administrator may not revoke, and the Board may not affirm a revocation of, a certificate of registration under this section on the basis of an activity described in subsection (b)(1)(A) of this section if the holder of the certificate is acquitted of all charges related to a controlled substance in an indictment or information arising from the activity.

(2) If the Administrator has revoked a certificate of registration of a person under this section because of an activity described in subsection (b)(1)(A) of this section, the Administrator shall reissue a certificate to the person if the person—

(A) subsequently is acquitted of all charges related to a controlled substance in an indictment or information arising from the activity; and

(B) otherwise meets the requirements of section 44102 of this title.

§ 44107. Recordation of conveyances and instruments

(a) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall establish a system for recording—

(1) conveyances that affect an interest in civil aircraft of the United States;

(2) leases and instruments executed for security purposes, including assignments and changes, that affect an interest in—

(A) a specifically identified aircraft engine having at least 750 rated takeoff horsepower or its equivalent;

(B) a specifically identified aircraft propeller capable of absorbing at least 750 rated takeoff shaft horsepower;

(C) an aircraft engine, propeller, or appliance maintained for installation or use in an aircraft, aircraft engine, or propeller, by or for an air carrier holding a certificate issued under section 44705 of this title; and

(D) spare parts maintained by or for an air carrier holding a certificate issued under section 44705 of this title; and

(3) releases, cancellations, discharges, and satisfactions related to a conveyance, instrument, or lease recorded under clause (1) or (2) of this subsection.

(b) An instrument or lease recorded under subsection (a)(2)(C) or (D) of this section only has to describe generally the engine, propeller, appliance, or spare part by type and designate its location.

(c) Except as the Administrator otherwise may provide, a conveyance or instrument may be recorded under subsection (a) of this section only after it has been acknowledged before—

(1) a notary public; or

(2) another officer authorized to acknowledge deeds under the laws of the United States, a State, the District of Columbia, or a territory or possession of the United States.

(d) The Administrator shall—

(1) keep a record of the time and date that each conveyance and instrument is filed and recorded with the Administrator; and

(2) record each conveyance and instrument filed with the Administrator, in the order of their receipt, and index them by—

(A) the specifically identified aircraft, aircraft engine, or propeller, or its location if recorded under subsection (a)(2)(C) or (D) of this section; and

(B) the names of the parties to each conveyance and instrument.

§ 44108. Validity of conveyances and instruments

(a) Until a conveyance or instrument that may be recorded under section 44107(a)(1) or (2) of this title is filed for recording, the conveyance or instrument is valid only against—

(1) the person making the conveyance or instrument;

(2) that person's heirs and devisees; and

(3) a person having actual notice of the conveyance or instrument.

(b) When a conveyance or instrument is recorded under section 44107 of this title, the conveyance or instrument is valid from the date of filing against all persons, without other recordation, except that—

(1) an instrument recorded under section 44107(a)(2)(A) or (B) of this title is valid for a specifically identified engine or propeller without regard to an instrument previously or subsequently recorded under section 44107(a)(2)(C) or (D); and

(2) an instrument recorded under section 44107(a)(2)(C) or (D) of this title is valid only for items at the location designated in the instrument.

(c)(1) The validity of a conveyance or instrument that may be recorded under section 44107 of this title is subject to the laws of the State, the District of Columbia, or the territory or possession of the United States at which the conveyance or instrument is delivered, regardless of the place at which the subject of the conveyance or instrument is located or delivered. If the conveyance or instrument specifies the place at which delivery is intended, it is presumed that the conveyance or instrument was delivered at the specified place.

(2) This subsection does not take precedence over the Convention on the International Recognition of Rights in Aircraft (4 U.S.T. 1830).

(d) This section does not apply to—

(1) a conveyance described in section 44107(a)(1) of this title that was made before August 22, 1938; or

(2) an instrument described in section 44107(a)(2) of this title that was made before June 20, 1948.

§ 44109. Reporting transfer of ownership

(a) A person having an ownership interest in an aircraft for which a certificate of registration was issued under section 44103 of this title shall file a notice with the Secretary of the Treasury that the Secretary requires by regulation, not later than 15 days after a sale, conditional sale, transfer, or conveyance of the interest.

(b) The Secretary—

(1) shall prescribe regulations that establish guidelines for exempting a person or class from subsection (a) of this section; and

(2) may exempt a person or class under the regulations.

§ 44110. Information about aircraft ownership and rights

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may provide by regulation for—

(1) endorsing information on each certificate of registration issued under section 44103 of this title and each certificate issued under section 44704 of this title about ownership of the aircraft for which each certificate is issued; and

(2) recording transactions affecting an interest in, and for other records, proceedings, and details necessary to decide the rights of a party related to, a civil aircraft of the United States, aircraft engine, propeller, appliance, or spare part.

§ 44111. Changes in registration and recordation system for aircraft not providing air transportation

(a) This section applies only to aircraft not used to provide air transportation.

(b) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall make changes in the system for registering and recording aircraft necessary to make the system more effective in serving the needs of—

(1) buyers and sellers of aircraft;

(2) officials responsible for enforcing laws related to the regulation of controlled substances (as defined in section 102 of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 802)); and

(3) other users of the system.

(c) Changes made under subsection (b) of this section—

(1) may include a system of titling aircraft or registering all aircraft, even aircraft not operated;

(2) shall ensure positive, verifiable, and timely identification of the true owner; and

(3) shall address at least each of the following deficiencies in and abuses of the existing system:

(A) the registration of aircraft to fictitious persons.

(B) the use of false or nonexistent addresses by persons registering aircraft.

(C) the use by a person registering an aircraft of a post office box or "mail drop" as a return address to evade identification of the person's address.

(D) the registration of aircraft to entities established to facilitate unlawful activities.

(E) the submission of names of individuals on applications for registration of aircraft that are not identifiable.

(F) the ability to make frequent legal changes in the registration markings assigned to aircraft.

(G) the use of false registration markings on aircraft.

(H) the illegal use of "reserved" registration markings on aircraft.

(I) the large number of aircraft classified as being in "self-reported status".

(J) the lack of a system to ensure timely and adequate notice of the transfer of ownership of aircraft.

(K) the practice of allowing temporary operation and navigation of aircraft without the issuance of a certificate of registration.

(d)(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe regulations to carry out this section and provide a written explanation of how the regulations address each of the deficiencies and abuses described in subsection (c) of this section. In prescribing the regulations, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall consult with the Administrator of Drug Enforcement, the Secretary of the Treasury, other law enforcement officials of the United States Government, representatives of State and local law enforcement officials, representatives of the general aviation aircraft industry, representatives of users of general aviation aircraft, and other interested persons.

(2) Regulations prescribed under this subsection shall require that—

(A) each individual listed in an application for registration of an aircraft provide with the application the individual's driver's license number; and

(B) each person (not an individual) listed in an application for registration of an aircraft provide with the application the person's taxpayer identifying number.

§ 44112. Limitation of liability

(a) In this section—

(1) "lessor" means a person leasing for at least 30 days a civil aircraft, aircraft engine, or propeller.

(2) "owner" means a person that owns a civil aircraft, aircraft engine, or propeller.

(3) "secured party" means a person having a security interest in, or security title to, a civil aircraft, aircraft engine, or propeller under a conditional sale or equipment trust contract, chattel or corporate mortgage, or similar instrument.

(b) A lessor, owner, or secured party is liable for personal injury, death, or property loss or damage on land or water only when a civil aircraft, aircraft engine, or propeller is in the actual possession or control of the lessor, owner, or secured party, and the personal injury, death, or property loss or damage occurs because of—

(1) the aircraft, engine, or propeller; or

(2) the flight of, or an object falling from, the aircraft, engine, or propeller.

44307. Revolving fund.
44308. Administrative.
44309. Civil actions.
44310. End of authority.

In this chapter—

(1) "American aircraft" means—

(A) a civil aircraft of the United States; and

(B) an aircraft owned or chartered by, or made available to—

(i) the United States Government; or

(ii) a State, the District of Columbia, a territory or possession of the United States, or a political subdivision of the State, territory, or possession.

(2) "insurance carrier" means a person authorized to do aviation insurance business in a State, including a mutual or stock insurance company and a reciprocal insurance association.

§ 44302. General authority

(a)(1) Subject to subsection (b) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation may provide insurance and reinsurance against loss or damage arising out of any risk from the operation of an American aircraft or foreign-flag aircraft—

(A) in foreign air commerce; or

(B) between at least 2 places, all of which are outside the United States.

(2) An aircraft may be insured or reinsured for not more than its reasonable value as determined by the Secretary. Insurance or reinsurance may be provided only when the Secretary decides that the insurance cannot be obtained on reasonable terms from an insurance carrier.

(b) The Secretary may provide insurance or reinsurance under subsection (a) of this section only with the approval of the President. The President may approve the insurance or reinsurance only after deciding that the continued operation of the American aircraft or foreign-flag aircraft to be insured or reinsured is necessary to carry out the foreign policy of the United States Government.

(c) The President may require the Secretary to consult with interested departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government before providing insurance or reinsurance under this chapter.

(d) With the approval of the Secretary, a person having an insurable interest in an aircraft may insure with other underwriters in an amount exceeding the amount insured with the Secretary. However, the Secretary may not benefit from the additional insurance. This subsection does not prevent the Secretary from making contracts of coinsurance.

The Secretary of Transportation may provide insurance and reinsurance authorized under section 44302 of this title for the following:

(1) an American aircraft or foreign-flag aircraft engaged in aircraft operations the President decides are necessary to carry out the foreign policy of the United States Government.

(2) property transported or to be transported on aircraft referred to in clause (1) of this section, including—

(A) shipments by express or registered mail;

(B) property owned by citizens or residents of the United States;

(C) property—

(i) imported to, or exported from, the United States; and

(ii) bought or sold by a citizen or resident of the United States under a contract putting the risk of loss or obligation to provide insurance against risk of loss on the citizen or resident; and

(D) property transported between—

(i) a place in a State or the District of Columbia and a place in a territory or possession of the United States;

(ii) a place in a territory or possession of the United States and a place in another territory or possession of the United States; or

(iii) 2 places in the same territory or possession of the United States.

(3) the personal effects and baggage of officers and members of the crew of an aircraft referred to in clause (1) of this section and of other individuals employed or transported on that aircraft.

(4) officers and members of the crew of an aircraft referred to in clause (1) of this section and other individuals employed or transported on that aircraft against loss of life, injury, or detention.

(5) statutory or contractual obligations or other liabilities, customarily covered by insurance, of an aircraft referred to in clause (1) of this section or of the owner or operator of that aircraft.

§ 44304. Reinsurance

(a) To the extent the Secretary of Transportation is authorized to provide insurance under this chapter, the Secretary may reinsure any part of the insurance provided by an insurance carrier. The Secretary may reinsure with, transfer to, or transfer back to, the carrier any insurance or reinsurance provided by the Secretary under this chapter.

(b) The Secretary may provide reinsurance at premiums not less than, or obtain reinsurance at premiums not higher than, the premiums the Secretary establishes on similar risks or the premiums the insurance carrier charges for the insurance to be reinsured by the Secretary, whichever is most advantageous to the Secretary. However, the Secretary may make allowances to the insurance carrier for expenses incurred in providing services and facilities that the Secretary considers good business practice, except for payments by the carrier for the stimulation or solicitation of insurance business.

§ 44305. Insuring United States Government property

With the approval of the President, a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government may obtain insurance under this chapter, except for insurance on valuables subject to sections 1 and 2 of the Government Losses in Shipment Act (40 U.S.C. 721, 722). With that approval, the Secretary of Transportation may provide the insurance without premium at the request of the Secretary of Defense or the head of a department, agency, or instrumentality designated by the President when the Secretary of Defense or the designated head agrees to indemnify the Secretary of Transportation against all losses covered by the insurance. The Secretary of Defense and any designated head may make indemnity agreements with the Secretary of Transportation under this section.

§ 44306. Premiums and limitations on coverage and claims

(a) To the extent practical, the premium charged for insurance or reinsurance under this chapter shall be based on consideration of the risk involved.

(b) The Secretary of Transportation may provide insurance and reinsurance under this chapter for a period of not more than 60 days. The period may be extended for additional periods of not more than 60 days each only if the President decides, before each additional period, that the continued operation of the aircraft to be insured or reinsured is necessary to carry out the foreign policy of the United States Government.

(c) The insurance policy on an aircraft insured or reinsured under this chapter shall specify a stated amount that is not more than the value of the aircraft, as determined by the Secretary. A claim under the policy may not be paid for more than that stated amount.

§ 44307. Revolving fund

(a)(1) There is a revolving fund in the Treasury. The Secretary of the Treasury shall disburse from the fund payments to carry out this chapter.

(2) Necessary amounts to carry out this chapter may be appropriated to the fund. The amounts appropriated and other amounts received in carrying out this chapter shall be deposited in the fund.

(b) On request of the Secretary of Transportation, the Secretary of the Treasury may invest any part of the amounts in the revolving fund in interest-bearing securities of the United States Government. The interest on, and the proceeds from the sale or redemption of, the securities shall be deposited in the fund.

(c) The balance in the revolving fund in excess of an amount the Secretary of Transportation determines is necessary for the requirements of the fund and for reasonable reserves to maintain the solvency of the fund shall be deposited at least annually in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

(d) The Secretary of Transportation shall deposit annually an amount in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts to cover the expenses the Government incurs when the Secretary of Transportation uses appropriated amounts in carrying out this chapter. The deposited amount shall equal an amount determined by multiplying the average monthly balance of appropriated amounts retained in the revolving fund by a percentage that is at least the current average rate payable on marketable obligations of the Government. The Secretary of the Treasury shall determine annually in advance the percentage applied.

(a) The Secretary of Transportation may carry out this chapter consistent with commercial practices of the aviation insurance business.

(b)(1) The Secretary may issue insurance policies to carry out this chapter. The Secretary may prescribe the forms, amounts insured under the policies, and premiums charged. The Secretary may change an amount of insurance or a premium for an existing policy only with the consent of the insured.

(2) For a claim under insurance authorized by this chapter, the Secretary may—

(A) settle and pay the claim made for or against the United States Government; and

(B) pay the amount of a judgment entered against the Government.

(c)(1) The Secretary may, and when practical shall, employ an insurance carrier or group of insurance carriers to act as an underwriting agent. The Secretary may use the agent to adjust claims under this chapter, but claims may be paid only when approved by the Secretary.

(2) The Secretary may pay reasonable compensation to an underwriting agent for servicing insurance the agent writes for the Secretary. Compensation may include payment for reasonable expenses incurred by the agent but may not include a payment by the agent for stimulation or solicitation of insurance business.

(3) Except as provided by this subsection, the Secretary may not pay an insurance broker or other person acting in a similar capacity any consideration for arranging insurance when the Secretary directly insures any part of the risk.

(d) The Secretary shall submit annually a budget program for carrying out this chapter as provided for wholly owned Government corporations under chapter 91 of title 31.

(e) The Secretary shall maintain a set of accounts. The Comptroller General shall audit those accounts under chapter 35 of title 31. Notwithstanding chapter 35, the Comptroller General shall allow credit for expenditures under this chapter made consistent with commercial practices in the aviation insurance business when shown to be necessary because of the business activities authorized by this chapter.

§ 44309. Civil actions

(a) A person may bring a civil action against the United States Government when a loss insured under this chapter is in dispute. A civil action involving the same matter (except the action authorized by this subsection) may not be brought against an agent, officer, or employee of the Government carrying out this chapter. To the extent applicable, the procedure in an action brought under section 1346(a)(2) of title 28 applies to an action under this subsection.

(b)(1) A civil action under subsection (a) of this section may be brought in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia or in the district court of the United States for the judicial district in which the plaintiff or the agent of the plaintiff resides if the plaintiff resides in the United States. If the plaintiff does not reside in the United States, the action may be brought in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia or in the district court of the United States for the judicial district in which the Attorney General agrees to accept service.

(2) An interested person may be joined as a party to a civil action brought under subsection (a) of this section initially or on motion of either party to the action.

(c) When an insurance claim is made under this chapter, the period during which, under section 2401 of title 28, a civil action must be brought under subsection (a) of this section is suspended until 60 days after the Secretary of Transportation denies the claim. The claim is deemed to be administratively denied if the Secretary does not act on the claim not later than 6 months after filing, unless the Secretary makes a different agreement with the claimant when there is good cause for an agreement.

(d)(1) If the Secretary admits the Government owes money under an insurance claim under this chapter and there is a dispute about the person that is entitled to payment, the Government may bring a civil action of interpleader against the persons that may be entitled to payment. The action may be brought in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia or in the district court of the United States for the judicial district in which any party resides.

(2) The district court may order a party not residing or found in the judicial district in which the action is brought to appear in a civil action under this subsection. The order shall be served in a reasonable manner decided by the district court. If the court decides an unknown person might assert a claim under the insurance that is the subject of the action, the court may order service on that person by publication in the Federal Register.

(3) Judgment in a civil action under this subsection discharges the Government from further liability to the parties to the action and to all other persons served by publication under paragraph (2) of this subsection.

§ 44310. End of authority

The authority of the Secretary of Transportation to provide insurance and reinsurance under this chapter is not effective after September 30, 1992.

CHAPTER 445—AVIATION FACILITIES AND RESEARCH

Sec.

44501. Plans and policy.
44502. Air navigation facilities.
44503. Reducing nonessential expenditures.
44504. Improved aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances.
44505. Systems, procedures, facilities, and devices.
44506. Air traffic controller performance research.
44507. Civil aeromedical research.
44508. Research advisory committee.
44509. Demonstration projects.

§ 44501. Plans and policy

(a) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall make long range plans and policy for the orderly development and use of the navigable airspace, and the orderly development and location of aids and facilities for air navigation, that will best meet the needs of, and serve the interests of, civil aeronautics and the national defense, except for needs of the armed forces that are peculiar to air warfare and primarily of military concern.

(b) The Administrator shall publish a national airways system plan before the beginning of each fiscal year. The plan shall set forth—

(1) for a 10-year period, the research, engineering, and development programs and the facilities and equipment the Administrator considers necessary for a system of airways, air traffic services, and navigation aids that will—

(A) meet the forecasted needs of civil aeronautics;

(B) meet the requirements the Secretary of Defense establishes for the support of the national defense; and

(C) provide the highest degree of safety in air commerce;

(2) for the first and 2d years of the plan, detailed annual estimates of—

(A) the number, type, location, and cost of acquiring, operating, and maintaining required facilities and services;

(B) the cost of research, engineering, and development required to improve safety, system capacity, and efficiency; and

(C) personnel levels required for the activities described in subclauses (A) and (B) of this clause;

(3) for the 3d, 4th, and 5th years of the plan, estimates of the total cost of each major program for the 3-year period, and additional major research programs, acquisition of systems and facilities, and changes in personnel levels that may be required to meet long range objectives and that may have significant impact on future funding requirements; and

(4) a 10-year investment plan that considers long range objectives the Administrator considers necessary to—

(A) ensure that safety is given the highest priority in providing for a safe and efficient airway system; and

(B) meet the current and projected growth of aviation and the requirements of interstate commerce, the United States Postal Service, and the national defense.

(c) Not later than April 1 of each year, the Secretary of Transportation shall report to Congress on the operations of the national airways system during the prior fiscal year. The report shall include a review of the operations of the Federal Aviation Administration, including—

(1) a detailed report on programs intended to improve the safety of flight operations and the capacity and efficiency of the national airways system;

(2) significant problems encountered in the programs;

(3) a summary of amounts committed in each major program area; and

(4) a report on amounts appropriated but not expended for the programs.

(d)(1) The Administrator shall prepare and publish annually a national aviation research plan and submit the plan to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives. The plan shall be submitted not later than the date of submission of the President's budget to Congress.

(2)(A) The plan shall describe, for a 15-year period, the research, engineering, and development the Administrator considers necessary—

(i) to ensure the continued capacity, safety, and efficiency of aviation in the United States, considering emerging technologies and forecasted needs of civil aeronautics; and

(ii) to provide the highest degree of safety in air travel.

(B) The plan shall cover all research conducted under sections 44504, 44505, 44507, and 44903 of this title and shall identify complementary and coordinated research efforts conducted by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration with amounts specifically appropriated to the Administration. For projects for which the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration anticipates requesting an appropriation, the plan shall include—

(i) for the first 2 years of the plan, detailed annual estimates of the schedule, cost, and work-force levels for each research project, including a description of the scope and content of each major contract, grant, or interagency agreement;

(ii) for the 3d, 4th, and 5th years of the plan, estimates of the total cost of each major project and any additional major research projects that may be required to meet long-term objectives and that may have significant impact on future appropriations requirements;

(iii) for the 6th and subsequent years of the plan, the long-term objectives the Administrator considers necessary to ensure that aviation safety will be given the highest priority; and

(iv) details of a program to disseminate to the private sector the results of aviation research conducted by the Administrator, including any new technologies developed.

(3) Subject to section 44903(f)(2) and (3) of this title and regulations prescribed under section 44903(f)(2), the Administrator shall submit to the committees named in paragraph (1) of this subsection an annual report on the accomplishments of the research completed during the prior fiscal year. The report shall be submitted with the plan required under paragraph (1) and be organized to allow comparison with the plan in effect for the prior fiscal year.

§ 44502. Air navigation facilities

(a)(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may—

(A) acquire, establish, improve, operate, and maintain air navigation facilities; and

(B) provide facilities and personnel to regulate and protect air traffic.

(2) The cost of site preparation work associated with acquiring, establishing, or improving an air navigation facility under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection shall be charged to amounts available for that purpose appropriated under section 47701(a) of this title. The Secretary of Transportation may make an agreement with an airport owner or sponsor (as defined in section 47102 of this title) so that the owner or sponsor will provide the work and be paid or reimbursed by the Secretary from the appropriated amounts.

(3) The Secretary may authorize a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government to carry out any duty or power under this subsection with the consent of the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality.

(b) Except for amounts of the Government expended under this part or for a military purpose, amounts may be expended to acquire, establish, build, operate, or maintain an air navigation facility only if the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration certifies in writing that the facility is reasonably necessary for use in air commerce or for the national defense. An interested person may apply for a certificate for a facility to be acquired, established, built, operated, or maintained by or for the person.

(c)(1) To ensure conformity with plans and policies for, and allocation of, airspace by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration under section 40103(b)(1) of this title, a military airport, military landing area, or missile or rocket site may be acquired, established, or built, or a runway may be changed substantially, only if the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration is given reasonable prior notice so that the Administrator may advise the appropriate committees of Congress and interested departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government on the effect of the acquisition, establishment, building, or change on the use of airspace by aircraft. A disagreement between the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration and the Secretary of Defense or the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration may be appealed to the President for a final decision.

(2) To ensure that conformity, an airport or landing area not involving the expenditure of amounts of the Government may be established or built, or a runway may be changed substantially, only if the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration is given reasonable prior notice so that the Administrator may provide advice on the effects of the establishment, building, or change on the use of airspace by aircraft.

(d)(1) The head of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government having jurisdiction over an air navigation facility owned or operated by the Government may provide, under regulations the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality prescribes, for public use of the facility.

(2) The head of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government having jurisdiction over an airport or emergency landing field owned or operated by the Government may provide, under regulations the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality prescribes, for assistance, and the sale of fuel, oil, equipment, and supplies, to an aircraft, but only when necessary, because of an emergency, to allow the aircraft to continue to the nearest airport operated by private enterprise. The head of the department, agency, or instrumentality shall provide for the assistance and sale at the prevailing local fair market value as determined by the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality. The part of the amount that the head decides is equal to the cost of the assistance provided and the fuel, oil, equipment, and supplies sold shall be credited to the appropriation from which the cost was paid. The balance shall be credited to miscellaneous receipts.

(e) Congress consents to a State making an agreement, not in conflict with a law of the United States, with another State to develop or operate an airport facility.

(f) An airport may transfer, without consideration, to the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration an instrument landing system (and associated approach lighting equipment and runway visual range equipment) if an airport improvement project grant was used to help purchase the system. The Administrator shall accept the system and operate and maintain it under criteria of the Administrator.

§ 44503. Reducing nonessential expenditures

The Secretary of Transportation shall attempt to reduce the capital, operating, maintenance, and administrative costs of the national airport and airway system to the maximum extent practicable consistent with the highest degree of aviation safety. At least annually, the Secretary shall consult with and consider the recommendations of users of the system on ways to reduce nonessential expenditures of the United States Government for aviation. The Secretary shall give particular attention to a recommendation that may reduce, with no adverse effect on safety, future personnel requirements and costs to the Government required to be recovered from user charges.

§ 44504. Improved aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances

(a) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may begin or supervise developmental work and service testing to improve aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances.

(b) The Administrator shall conduct or supervise research—

(1) to develop technologies and analyze information to predict the effects of aircraft design, maintenance, testing, wear, and fatigue on the life of aircraft and air safety;

(2) to develop methods of analyzing and improving aircraft maintenance technology and practices, including nondestructive evaluation of aircraft structures;

(3) to assess the fire and smoke resistance of aircraft materials;

(4) to develop improved fire and smoke resistant materials for aircraft interiors;

(5) to develop and improve fire and smoke containment systems for inflight aircraft fires; and

(6) to develop advanced aircraft fuels with low flammability and technologies that will contain aircraft fuels to minimize post-crash fire hazards.

(c) In carrying out this section, the Administrator may buy experimental aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances that the Administrator decides may offer special advantages to aeronautics.

§ 44505. Systems, procedures, facilities, and devices

(a)(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall—

(A) develop, change, test, and evaluate systems, procedures, facilities, and devices, and define their performance characteristics, to meet the needs for safe and efficient navigation and traffic control of civil and military aviation, except for needs of the armed forces that are peculiar to air warfare and primarily of military concern; and

(B) select systems, procedures, facilities, and devices that will best serve those needs and promote maximum coordination of air traffic control and air defense systems.

(2) The Administrator may make contracts to carry out this subsection without regard to section 3324(a) and (b) of title 31.

(3) When a substantial question exists under paragraph (1) of this subsection about whether a matter is of primary concern to the armed forces, the Administrator shall decide whether the Administrator or the Secretary of the appropriate military department has responsibility. The Administrator shall be given technical information related to each research and development project of the armed forces that potentially applies to, or potentially conflicts with, the common system to ensure that potential application to the common system is considered properly and that potential conflicts with the system are eliminated.

(b) The Administrator shall conduct or supervise research—

(1) to develop a better understanding of the relationship between human factors and aviation accidents and between human factors and air safety;

(2) to enhance air traffic controller, mechanic, and flight crew performance;

(3) to develop a human-factor analysis of the hazards associated with new technologies to be used by air traffic controllers, mechanics, and flight crews;

(4) to identify innovative and effective corrective measures for human errors that adversely affect air safety; and

(5) to develop dynamic simulation models of the air traffic control system and airport design and operating procedures that will provide analytical technology—

(A) to predict airport and air traffic control safety and capacity problems;

(B) to evaluate planned research projects; and

(C) to test proposed revisions in airport and air traffic control operations programs.

§ 44506. Air traffic controller performance research

(a) To develop the means necessary to establish appropriate selection criteria and training methodologies for the next generation of air traffic controllers, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall conduct research to study the effect of automation on the performance of the next generation of air traffic controllers and the air traffic control system. The research shall include investigating—

(1) methods for improving and accelerating future air traffic controller training through the application of advanced training techniques, including the use of simulation technology;

(2) the role of automation in the air traffic control system and its physical and psychological effects on air traffic controllers;

(3) the attributes and aptitudes needed to function well in a highly automated air traffic control system and the development of appropriate testing methods for identifying individuals with those attributes and aptitudes;

(4) innovative methods for training potential air traffic controllers to enhance the benefits of automation and maximize the effectiveness of the air traffic control system; and

(5) new technologies and procedures for exploiting automated communication systems, including Mode S Transponders, to improve information transfers between air traffic controllers and aircraft pilots.

(b) The Administrators of the Federal Aviation Administration and National Aeronautics and Space Administration may make an agreement for the use of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's unique human factor facilities and expertise in conducting research activities to study the human factor aspects of the highly automated environment for the next generation of air traffic controllers. The research activities shall include investigating—

(1) human perceptual capabilities and the effect of computer-aided decision making on the workload and performance of air traffic controllers;

(2) information management techniques for advanced air traffic control display systems; and

(3) air traffic controller workload and performance measures, including the development of predictive models.

§ 44507. Civil aeromedical research

The Civil Aeromedical Institute established by section 106(j) of this title may—

(1) conduct civil aeromedical research, including research related to—

(A) the protection and survival of aircraft occupants;

(B) medical accident investigation and airman medical certification;

(C) toxicology and the effects of drugs on human performance;

(D) the impact of disease and disability on human performance;

(E) vision and its relationship to human performance and equipment design;

(F) human factors of flight crews, air traffic controllers, mechanics, inspectors, airway facility technicians, and other individuals involved in operating and maintaining aircraft and air traffic control equipment; and

(G) agency work force optimization, including training, equipment design, reduction of errors, and identification of candidate tasks for automation;

(2) make comments to the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration on human factors aspects of proposed air safety regulations;

(3) make comments to the Administrator on human factors aspects of proposed training programs, equipment requirements, standards, and procedures for aviation personnel;

(4) advise, assist, and represent the Federal Aviation Administration in the human factors aspects of joint projects between the Administration and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government, industry, and governments of foreign countries; and

(5) provide medical consultation services to the Administrator about medical certification of airmen.

§ 44508. Research advisory committee

(a)(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall establish a research advisory committee in the Administration. The committee shall—

(A) provide advice and recommendations to the Administrator about needs, objectives, plans, approaches, content, and accomplishments of the aviation research program carried out under sections 44504, 44505, 44507, and 44903 of this title; and

(B) assist in ensuring that the research is coordinated with similar research being conducted outside the Administration.

(2) The Administrator may establish subordinate committees to provide advice on specific areas of research conducted under sections 44504, 44505, 44507, and 44903 of this title.

(b)(1) The committee is composed of not more than 20 members appointed by the Administrator from among individuals who are not employees of the Administration and who are specially qualified to serve on the committee because of their education, training, or experience. In appointing members of the committee, the Administrator shall ensure that universities, corporations, associations, consumers, and other government departments, agencies, and instrumentalities are represented.

(2) The Administrator shall designate the chairman of the committee.

(3) A member of the committee serves without pay. However, the Administrator may allow a member, when attending meetings of the committee or a subordinate committee, travel or transportation expenses as authorized under section 5703 of title 5.

(c) The Administrator shall provide support staff for the committee. On request of the committee, the Administrator shall provide information, administrative services, and supplies the Administrator considers necessary for the committee to carry out its duties and powers.

(d) Section 14 of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 App. U.S.C) does not apply to the committee.

(e)(1) Not more than .1 percent of the amounts made available to conduct research under sections 44504, 44505, 44507, and 44903 of this title for fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1988, may be used by the Administrator to carry out this section.

(2) A limitation on amounts available for obligation by or for the committee does not apply to amounts made available to carry out this section.

§ 44509. Demonstration projects

The Secretary of Transportation may carry out under this chapter demonstration projects the Secretary considers necessary for research and development activities under this chapter.

§ 44701. General requirements

(a) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall promote safe flight of civil aircraft in air commerce by prescribing—

(1) minimum standards for design, material, construction, quality of work, and performance of aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances;

(2) regulations and minimum standards for inspecting, servicing, and overhauling aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances;

(3) regulations for the reserve supply of aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, appliances, and aircraft fuel and oil, including the reserve supply of fuel and oil carried in flight;

(4) regulations for the maximum hours or periods of service of employees of air carriers; and

(5) other regulations and minimum standards the Administrator finds necessary for safety in air commerce and the security of the United States.

(b) The Administrator may prescribe minimum safety standards for—

(1) an air carrier to whom a certificate is issued under section 44705 of this title; and

(2) an airport serving air carriers operating aircraft designed for at least 31 passenger seats.

(c) The Administrator shall prescribe safety regulations and establish procedures the Administrator considers necessary to maintain the highest standard of safe and reliable air transportation in the United States.

(d) The Administrator shall carry out this chapter in a way that best tends to reduce or eliminate the possibility or recurrence of accidents in air transportation. However, the Administrator is not required to give preference to either air transportation or air commerce in carrying out this chapter.

(e) When prescribing a regulation or standard under subsection (a) or (b) of this section or section 44702–44716 of this title, the Administrator shall—

(1) consider—

(A) the duty of an air carrier to provide service with the highest possible degree of safety in the public interest; and

(B) differences between air transportation and air commerce; and

(2) classify a regulation or standard according to the differences between air transportation and air commerce.

(f) The Administrator periodically may grant an exemption from a regulation prescribed under subsection (a) or (b) of this section or section 44702–44716 of this title if the Administrator finds the exemption is in the public interest.

§ 44702. Issuance of certificates

(a) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may issue airman certificates, type certificates, production certificates, airworthiness certificates, air carrier operating certificates, airport operating certificates, air agency certificates, and air navigation facility certificates under this chapter. An application for a certificate must—

(1) be under oath when the Administrator requires; and

(2) be in the form, contain information, and be filed and served in the way the Administrator prescribes.

(b) When issuing a certificate under this chapter, the Administrator shall—

(1) consider—

(A) the duty of an air carrier to provide service with the highest possible degree of safety in the public interest; and

(B) differences between air transportation and air commerce; and

(2) classify a certificate according to the differences between air transportation and air commerce.

(c)(1) Subject to regulations, supervision, and review the Administrator prescribes, the Administrator may delegate to a qualified private person, or to an employee under the supervision of that person, a matter related to—

(A) the examination, testing, and inspection necessary to issue a certificate under this chapter; and

(B) issuing the certificate.

(2) The Administrator may establish the maximum fee a private person may charge under this subsection and may rescind a delegation under this subsection at any time for any reason the Administrator considers appropriate.

(3) A person affected by an action of a private person under this subsection may apply for reconsideration of the action by the Administrator. The Administrator may reconsider the action at any time. If the Administrator decides the action is unwarranted, the Administrator shall change or reverse the action. If the Administrator decides the action is warranted, the Administrator shall affirm the action.

§ 44703. Airman certificates

(a) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall issue an airman certificate to an individual when the Administrator finds that the individual is qualified for, and able to perform the duties related to, the position to be authorized by the certificate.

(b)(1) An airman certificate shall—

(A) be numbered and recorded by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration;

(B) contain the name, address, and description of the individual to whom the certificate is issued;

(C) contain terms the Administrator decides are necessary to ensure safety in air commerce;

(D) specify the capacity in which the holder of the certificate may serve as an airman of an aircraft; and

(E) designate the class the certificate covers.

(2) A certificate issued to a pilot serving in scheduled air transportation shall have the designation "airline transport pilot" of the appropriate class.

(c) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may—

(1) restrict or prohibit the issuance of an airman certificate to an alien; or

(2) make the issuance of the certificate to an alien dependent on a reciprocal agreement with the government of a foreign country.

(d)(1) An individual whose application for the issuance or renewal of an airman certificate has been denied may appeal the denial to the National Transportation Safety Board, except if—

(A) the certificate is suspended at the time of denial; or

(B) the certificate was revoked within one year from the date of the denial.

(2) The Board shall conduct a proceeding on the appeal at a place convenient to the place of residence or employment of the applicant. The Board is not bound by findings of fact of the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration. At the end of the proceeding, the Board shall decide whether the individual meets the applicable regulations and standards. The Administrator is bound by that decision.

(e) Except as provided in section 44710(e)(2) of this title, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may not issue an airman certificate to an individual whose certificate is revoked under section 44710 of this title. However, the Administrator may issue a certificate to the individual if the Administrator decides that issuance of the certificate will facilitate law enforcement efforts.

(f)(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall make changes in the system for issuing airman certificates necessary to make the system more effective in serving the needs of pilots and officials responsible for enforcing laws related to the regulation of controlled substances (as defined in section 102 of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 802)). The changes shall ensure positive and verifiable identification of each individual applying for or holding a certificate and shall address at least each of the following deficiencies in and abuses of the existing system:

(A) the use of fictitious names and addresses by applicants for those certificates.

(B) the use of stolen or fraudulent identification in applying for those certificate.

(C) the use by an applicant of a post office box or "mail drop" as a return address to evade identification of the applicant's address.

(D) the use of counterfeit and stolen airman certificates by pilots.

(E) the absence of information about physical characteristics of holders of those certificates.

(2) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe regulations to carry out paragraph (1) of this subsection and provide a written explanation of how the regulations address each of the deficiencies and abuses described in paragraph (1). In prescribing the regulations, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall consult with the Administrator of Drug Enforcement, the Secretary of the Treasury, other law enforcement officials of the United States Government, representatives of State and local law enforcement officials, representatives of the general aviation aircraft industry, representatives of users of general aviation aircraft, and other interested persons.

(a) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall issue a type certificate for an aircraft, aircraft engine, or propeller, or for an appliance specified under subsection (b)(1) of this section when the Administrator finds that the aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, or appliance is properly designed and manufactured and meets the regulations and minimum standards prescribed under section 44701(a) of this title. On receiving an application for a type certificate, the Administrator shall investigate the application and may provide an opportunity for a proceeding. The Administrator or applicant shall make tests, during manufacture and on completion, the Administrator considers reasonably necessary in the interests of safety.

(b) The Administrator may—

(1) specify in regulations those appliances that reasonably require a type certificate in the interest of safety;

(2) include in a type certificate terms required in the interests of safety;

(3) record on the certificate a numerical determination of the essential factors related to the performance of the aircraft, aircraft engine, or propeller for which the certificate is issued; and

(4) authorize an aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, or appliance for which a certificate has been issued authorizing the use of the aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, or appliance in air transportation to be used in air commerce without another certificate being issued.

(c) The Administrator shall issue a production certificate authorizing the production of a duplicate of an aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, or appliance for which a type certificate has been issued when the Administrator decides the duplicate will comply with the certificate. On receiving an application, the Administrator shall inspect, and may test, a duplicate to ensure that it complies with the requirements of the certificate. The Administrator may include in a production certificate terms required in the interest of safety.

(d)(1) The registered owner of an aircraft may apply to the Administrator for an airworthiness certificate for the aircraft. The Administrator shall issue an airworthiness certificate when the Administrator decides that the aircraft complies with its type certificate and is in condition for safe operation. The Administrator shall register each airworthiness certificate and may include appropriate information in the certificate. An aircraft shall display the certificate number or other individual designation the Administrator requires. The Administrator may include in an airworthiness certificate terms required in the interest of safety.

(2) A person applying for the issuance or renewal of an airworthiness certificate for an aircraft for which ownership has not been recorded under section 44107 or 44110 of this title must submit with the application information related to the ownership of the aircraft the Administrator decides is necessary to identify each person having an interest in the aircraft and the kind and extent of the interest.

§ 44705. Air carrier operating certificates

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall issue an air carrier operating certificate to a person desiring to operate as an air carrier when the Administrator decides that the person is equipped and able to operate safely under this part and regulations and standards prescribed under this part. An air carrier operating certificate shall—

(1) contain terms necessary to ensure safety in air transportation; and

(2) specify the places between which, and the airways of the United States over which, a person may operate as an air carrier.

§ 44706. Airport operating certificates

(a) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall issue an airport operating certificate to a person desiring to operate an airport—

(1) that serves an air carrier operating aircraft designed for at least 31 passenger seats;

(2) that the Administrator requires to have a certificate; and

(3) when the Administrator decides that the person is equipped and able to operate safely under this part and regulations and standards prescribed under this part.

(b) An airport operating certificate issued under this section shall contain terms necessary to ensure safety in air transportation. Unless the Administrator decides that it is not in the public interest, the terms shall include conditions related to—

(1) operating and maintaining adequate safety equipment, including firefighting and rescue equipment capable of rapid access to any part of the airport used for landing, takeoff, or surface maneuvering of an aircraft; and

(2) friction treatment for primary and secondary runways that the Secretary of Transportation decides is necessary.

(c) The Administrator may exempt from the requirements of this section, related to firefighting and rescue equipment, an operator of an airport described in subsection (a) of this section boarding each year less than .25 percent of the total number of passengers boarded at all airports described in subsection (a) when the Administrator decides that the requirements are or would be unreasonably costly, burdensome, or impractical.

§ 44707. Examining and rating air agencies

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may examine and rate the following air agencies:

(1) civilian schools giving instruction in flying or repairing and overhauling aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances, on the adequacy of instruction, the suitability and airworthiness of equipment, and the competency of instructors.

(2) repair stations and shops that repair and overhaul aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances, on the adequacy and suitability of the equipment, facilities, and materials for, and methods of, repair and overhaul, and the competency of the individuals doing the work or giving instruction in the work.

(3) other air agencies the Administrator decides are necessary in the public interest.

§ 44708. Inspecting and rating air navigation facilities

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may inspect, classify, and rate an air navigation facility on the suitability of the facility for civil aircraft use.

§ 44709. Changes, suspensions, and revocations of certificates

(a) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may reinspect at any time a civil aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, appliance, air navigation facility, or air agency, or reexamine a civil airman. The Administrator—

(1) after a reinspection, reexamination, or other investigation by the Administrator, may issue an order changing, suspending, or revoking, any part of a certificate issued under this chapter if—

(A) the Administrator decides that safety in air commerce or air transportation and the public interest require that action; or

(B) the holder of the certificate has violated an aircraft noise or sonic boom standard or regulation prescribed under section 44715(a) of this title; and

(2) may issue an order changing, suspending, or revoking an airman certificate when the holder of the certificate is convicted of violating section 13(a) of the Fish and Wildlife Act of 1956 (16 U.S.C. 742j-1(a)).

(b) Before acting under subsection (a) of this section, the Administrator shall advise the holder of the certificate of the charges or other reasons on which the Administrator is relying for the proposed action. Except in an emergency, the Administrator shall give the holder an opportunity to answer the charges.

(c)(1) A person whose certificate is affected by an order of the Administrator under this section may appeal the order to the National Transportation Safety Board. After notice and an opportunity for a proceeding, the Board may change or reverse the order when the Board finds that—

(A) safety in air transportation or air commerce and the public interest do not require affirmation of the order;

(B) control or abatement of aircraft noise or sonic boom and the public health and welfare do not require affirmation of the order; or

(C) the order, as it is related to a violation of aircraft noise or sonic boom standards and regulations, is not consistent with safety in air commerce or air transportation.

(2) In conducting the proceeding, the Board is not bound by findings of fact of the Administrator.

(d) When a person files an appeal with the Board under subsection (c) of the section, the order of the Administrator is stayed. However, if the Administrator advises the Board that an emergency exists and safety in air transportation or air commerce requires the order to be effective immediately—

(1) the order is effective; and

(2) the Board shall dispose of the appeal not later than 60 days after the Administrator advises the Board of the emergency.

(e) An order of the Board under this section may be reviewed judicially under section 46110 of this title. The Administrator shall be made a party to that judicial proceeding.

§ 44710. Revocations of airman certificates for controlled substance violations

(a) In this section, "controlled substance" has the same meaning given that term in section 102 of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 802).

(b)(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall issue an order revoking an airman certificate issued an individual under section 44703 of this title after the individual is convicted, under a law of the United States or a State related to a controlled substance (except a law related to simple possession of a controlled substance), of an offense punishable by death or imprisonment for more than one year if the Administrator finds that—

(A) an aircraft was used to commit, or facilitate the commission of, the offense; and

(B) the individual served as an airman, or was on the aircraft, in connection with committing, or facilitating the commission of, the offense.

(2) The Administrator shall issue an order revoking an airman certificate issued an individual under section 44703 of this title if the Administrator finds that—

(A) the individual knowingly carried out an activity punishable, under a law of the United States or a State related to a controlled substance (except a law related to simple possession of a controlled substance), by death or imprisonment for more than one year;

(B) an aircraft was used to carry out or facilitate the activity; and

(C) the individual served as an airman, or was on the aircraft, in connection with carrying out, or facilitating the carrying out of, the activity.

(3) The Administrator has no authority under paragraph (1) of this subsection to review whether an airman violated a law of the United States or a State related to a controlled substance.

(c) Before the Administrator revokes a certificate under subsection (b) of this section, the Administrator must—

(1) advise the holder of the certificate of the charges or reasons on which the Administrator bases the proposed revocation; and

(2) provide the holder of the certificate an opportunity to answer the charges and state why the certificate should not be revoked.

(d)(1) An individual whose certificate is revoked by the Administrator under subsection (b) of this section may appeal the revocation order to the National Transportation Safety Board. The Board shall affirm or reverse the order after providing notice and an opportunity for a hearing on the record. In conducting the hearing, the Board is not bound by findings of fact of the Administrator.

(2) When an individual files an appeal with the Board under this subsection, the order of the Administrator revoking the certificate is stayed. However, if the Administrator advises the Board that safety in air transportation or air commerce requires the immediate effectiveness of the order—

(A) the order remains effective; and

(B) the Board shall dispose of the appeal not later than 60 days after notification by the Administrator under this paragraph.

(3) An individual substantially affected by an order of the Board under this subsection may seek judicial review of the order under section 46110 of this title. The Administrator shall be made a party to that judicial proceeding.

(e)(1) The Administrator may not revoke, and the Board may not affirm a revocation of, an airman certificate under subsection (b)(2) of this section on the basis of an activity described in subsection (b)(2)(A) if the holder of the certificate is acquitted of all charges related to a controlled substance in an indictment or information arising from the activity.

(2) If the Administrator has revoked an airman certificate under this section because of an activity described in subsection (b)(2)(A) of this section, the Administrator shall reissue a certificate to the individual if—

(A) the individual otherwise satisfies the requirements for a certificate under section 44703 of this title; and

(B)(i) the individual subsequently is acquitted of all charges related to a controlled substance in an indictment or information arising from the activity; or

(ii) the judgment on which a revocation under subsection (b)(1) of this section is based is reversed.

(f) The Administrator may waive the requirement of subsection (b) of this section that an airman certificate of an individual be revoked if—

(1) a law enforcement official of the United States Government or of a State requests a waiver; and

(2) the Administrator decides that the waiver will facilitate law enforcement efforts.

§ 44711. Prohibitions and exemption

(a) A person may not—

(1) violate a term of an airman certificate, production certificate, airworthiness certificate, air carrier operating certificate, airport operating certificate, or air agency certificate;

(2) operate a civil aircraft in air commerce without an airworthiness certificate in effect;

(3) serve as an airman without an airman certificate authorizing the airman to serve in that capacity or in violation of a regulation prescribed or order issued under section 44701(a) or (b) or 44702–44716 of this title;

(4) employ an airman who does not have an airman certificate authorizing the airman to serve in the capacity for which the airman is employed;

(5) operate an air carrier without an air carrier operating certificate;

(6) operate aircraft in air commerce in violation of a regulation prescribed or certificate issued under section 44701(a) or (b) or 44702–44716 of this title;

(7) operate a seaplane or other aircraft of United States registry on the high seas in violation of a regulation under section 3 of the International Navigational Rules Act of 1977 (33 U.S.C. 1602);

(8) violate a regulation prescribed or order issued under section 44701(a) or (b) or 44702–44716 of this title related to the holder of an air agency or production certificate;

(9) operate an airport without an airport operating certificate required under section 44706 of this title; or

(10) violate a regulation prescribed under section 44714 of this title.

(b) On terms the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration prescribes as being in the public interest, the Administrator may exempt a foreign aircraft and airmen serving on the aircraft from subsection (a) of this section. However, an exemption from observing air traffic regulations may not be granted.

§ 44712. Emergency locator transmitters

(a) An emergency locator transmitter must be installed on a fixed-wing powered civil aircraft for use in air commerce when the aircraft is completed in, or imported into, the United States after January 2, 1975, or used in air commerce.

(b) Subsection (a) of this section does not apply to—

(1) turbojet-powered aircraft;

(2) aircraft when being used in scheduled flights by scheduled air carriers holding certificates issued by the Secretary of Transportation;

(3) aircraft when being used in training operations conducted entirely within a 50 mile radius of the airport from which the local flight operations begin;

(4) aircraft when being used in design and test flight operations;

(5) new aircraft when being used in manufacture, preparatory, and delivery flight operations;

(6) aircraft when being used in flight operations related to the aerial application of a substance for an agricultural purpose;

(7) aircraft holding certificates from the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration for research and development;

(8) aircraft when being used for showing compliance with regulations, crew training, exhibition, air racing, or market surveys; and

(9) aircraft equipped to carry only one individual.

(c) Subject to terms prescribed in regulations of the Administrator, subsection (a) of this section does not apply to an aircraft operated when its emergency locator transmitter is removed for inspection, repair, change, or replacement.

§ 44713. Inspection and maintenance

(a) An air carrier shall make, or have made, an inspection or overhaul of, or maintain, equipment used in air transportation as required by this part or regulations prescribed or orders issued by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration under this part. A person operating, inspecting, overhauling, or maintaining the equipment shall comply with those requirements, regulations, and orders.

(b) An inspector employed by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall—

(1) inspect aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances designed for use in air transportation, during manufacture and when in use by an air carrier in air transportation, to enable the Administrator to decide whether the aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, or appliances are safe and maintained properly; and

(2) advise and cooperate with the air carrier during inspection and maintenance of the aircraft, engines, propellers, and appliances by the carrier.

(c) When an inspector decides that an aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, or appliance is not safe, the inspector shall notify the air carrier in the form and way prescribed by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration. For 5 days after the carrier is notified, the aircraft, engine, propeller, or appliance may not be used in air transportation or in a way that endangers air transportation unless the Administrator or the inspector decides the aircraft, engine, propeller, or appliance is safe.

(d)(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall make changes in the system for processing forms for major repairs or changes to fuel tanks and fuel systems of aircraft not used to provide air transportation that are necessary to make the system more effective in serving the needs of users of the system, including officials responsible for enforcing laws related to the regulation of controlled substances (as defined in section 102 of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 802)). The changes shall address at least each of the following deficiencies in and abuses of the existing system:

(A) the lack of a special identification feature to allow the forms to be distinguished easily from other major repair and change forms.

(B) the excessive amount of time required to receive the forms at the Airmen and Aircraft Registry of the Administration.

(C) the backlog of forms waiting for processing at the Registry.

(D) the lack of ready access by law enforcement officials to information contained on the forms.

(2) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe regulations to carry out paragraph (1) of this subsection and provide a written explanation of how the regulations address each of the deficiencies and abuses described in paragraph (1). In prescribing the regulations, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall consult with the Administrator of Drug Enforcement, the Secretary of the Treasury, other law enforcement officials of the United States Government, representatives of State and local law enforcement officials, representatives of the general aviation aircraft industry, representatives of users of general aviation aircraft, and other interested persons.

§ 44714. Aviation fuel standards

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration—

(1) from time to time shall prescribe standards for the composition or chemical or physical properties of an aircraft fuel or fuel additive to control or eliminate aircraft emissions the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency decides under section 231 of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7571) are a danger to the public health or welfare; and

(2) shall enforce those standards.

§ 44715. Controlling aircraft noise and sonic boom

(a)(1) To relieve and protect the public health and welfare from aircraft noise and sonic boom, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe—

(A) standards to measure aircraft noise and sonic boom; and

(B) regulations to control and abate aircraft noise and sonic boom.

(2) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may prescribe standards and regulations under this subsection only after consulting with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. The standards and regulations shall be applied when issuing, changing, suspending, or revoking a certificate authorized under this chapter.

(3) A type certificate may be issued under section 44704(a) of this title for an aircraft for which substantial noise abatement can be achieved only after the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration prescribes standards and regulations under this section that apply to that aircraft.

(b) When prescribing a standard or regulation under this section, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall—

(1) consider information related to aircraft noise and sonic boom;

(2) consult with departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government and State and interstate authorities;

(3) consider whether the standard or regulation is consistent with the highest degree of safety in air transportation or air commerce in the public interest;

(4) consider whether the standard or regulation is economically reasonable, technologically practicable, and appropriate for the applicable aircraft, aircraft engine, appliance, or certificate; and

(5) consider the extent to which the standard or regulation will carry out this section.

(c) The Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall submit to the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration proposed regulations to control and abate aircraft noise and sonic boom (including control and abatement through the use of the authority of the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration) that the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency considers necessary to protect the public health and welfare. The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall consider those proposed regulations and shall publish them in a notice of proposed rulemaking not later than 30 days after they are received. Not later than 60 days after publication, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall begin a proceeding at which interested persons are given an opportunity for oral and written presentations. Not later than 90 days after the proceeding is completed and after consulting with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall—

(1) prescribe regulations as provided by this section—

(A) substantially the same as the proposed regulations submitted by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency; or

(B) that change the proposed regulations; or

(2) publish in the Federal Register—

(A) a notice that no regulation is being prescribed in response to the proposed regulations of the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency;

(B) a detailed analysis of, and response to, all information the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency submitted with the proposed regulations; and

(C) a detailed explanation of why no regulation is being prescribed.

(d)(1) If the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency decides that the action of the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration under subsection (c)(1)(B) or (2) of this section does not protect the public health and welfare from aircraft noise or sonic boom, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall consult with the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration and may request a report on the advisability of prescribing the regulation as originally proposed. The request, including a detailed statement of the information on which the request is based, shall be published in the Federal Register.

(2) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall report to the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency within the time specified in the request. However, the time specified must be at least 90 days after the date of the request. The report shall—

(A) be accompanied by a detailed statement of the findings of the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration and the reasons for the findings;

(B) identify any statement related to an action under subsection (c) of this section filed under section 102(2)(C) of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4332(2)(C));

(C) specify where that statement is available for public inspection; and

(D) be published in the Federal Register unless the request proposes specific action by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration and the report indicates that action will be taken.

(e) The Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency may request the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration to file a supplemental report if the report under subsection (d) of this section indicates that the proposed regulations under subsection (c) of this section, for which a statement under section 102(2)(C) of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4332(2)(C)) is not required, should not be prescribed. The supplemental report shall be published in the Federal Register within the time the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency specifies. However, the time specified must be at least 90 days after the date of the request. The supplemental report shall contain a comparison of the environmental effects, including those that cannot be avoided, of the action of the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration and the proposed regulations of the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

(f) An exemption from a standard or regulation prescribed under this section may be granted only if, before granting the exemption, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration consults with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. However, if the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration decides that safety in air transportation or air commerce requires an exemption before the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency can be consulted, the exemption may be granted. The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall consult with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency as soon as practicable after the exemption is granted.

§ 44716. Collision avoidance systems

(a) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall—

(1) complete the development of the collision avoidance system known as TCAS-II so that TCAS-II can operate under visual and instrument flight rules and can be upgraded to the performance standards applicable to the collision avoidance system known as TCAS-III;

(2) develop and carry out a schedule for developing and certifying TCAS-II that will result in certification not later than June 30, 1989; and

(3) submit to Congress monthly reports on the progress being made in developing and certifying TCAS-II.

(b) The Administrator shall require by regulation that, not later than 30 months after the date certification is made under subsection (a)(2) of this section, TCAS-II be installed and operated on each civil aircraft that has a maximum passenger capacity of at least 31 seats and is used to provide air transportation of passengers, including intrastate air transportation of passengers. The Administrator may extend the deadline in this subsection for not more than 2 years if the Administrator decides the extension is necessary to promote—

(A) a safe and orderly transition to the operation of a fleet of civil aircraft described in this subsection equipped with TCAS-II; or

(B) other safety objectives.

(c) Not later than December 30, 1990, the Administrator shall begin a one-year program for the operational evaluation of TCAS-II by collecting and assessing safety and operational information from the civil aircraft equipped with TCAS-II. The Administrator shall encourage foreign air carriers that operate civil aircraft equipped with TCAS-II to participate in the program.

(d) The Administrator shall consider the feasibility and desirability of changing the schedule for installing airborne low-altitude windshear equipment to make the schedule compatible with the schedule for installing TCAS-II.

(e)(1) The Administrator shall complete developing and certifying TCAS-III as soon as possible.

(2) Necessary amounts may be appropriated from the Airport and Airway Trust Fund established under section 9502 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 9502) to carry out this subsection.

(f) Not later than December 30, 1990, operating transponders with automatic altitude reporting capability must be installed and used in aircraft operating in designated terminal airspace for which radar service is provided for separation of aircraft. For that terminal airspace (except terminal control areas and airport radar service areas), the Administrator may provide for access to the airspace by nonequipped aircraft if the Administrator decides the access will not interfere with the normal traffic flow.

§ 44717. Structures interfering with air commerce

(a) By regulation or by order when necessary, the Secretary of Transportation shall require a person to give adequate public notice, in the form and way the Secretary prescribes, about building or changing a structure, or proposing to build or change a structure, when the notice will promote—

(1) safety in air commerce; and

(2) the efficient use and preservation of the navigable airspace and of airport traffic capacity at public-use airports.

(b)(1) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, if the Secretary decides that building or changing a structure may result in an obstruction of the navigable airspace or an interference with air navigation facilities and equipment or the navigable airspace, the Secretary shall conduct an aeronautical study to decide on the extent of any adverse impact on the safe and efficient use of the airspace, facilities, or equipment. In conducting the study, the Secretary shall consider factors relevant to the efficient and effective use of the navigable airspace, including—

(A) the impact on arrival, departure, and en route procedures for aircraft operating under visual flight rules;

(B) the impact on arrival, departure, and en route procedures for aircraft operating under instrument flight rules;

(C) the impact on existing public-use airports and aeronautical facilities;

(D) the impact on planned public-use airports and aeronautical facilities; and

(E) the cumulative impact resulting from the proposed building or change of a structure when combined with the impact of other existing or proposed structures.

(2) On completing the study, the Secretary shall issue a report disclosing completely the extent of the adverse impact on the safe and efficient use of the navigable airspace that the Secretary finds will result from building or changing the structure.

(c) In carrying out laws related to a broadcast application and conducting an aeronautical study related to broadcast towers, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration and the Federal Communications Commission shall take action necessary to coordinate efficiently—

(1) the receipt and consideration of, and action on, the application; and

(2) the completion of any associated aeronautical study.

§ 44718. Standards for navigational aids

The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations on standards for installing navigational aids, including airport control towers. For each type of facility, the regulations shall consider at a minimum traffic density (number of aircraft operations without consideration of aircraft size), terrain and other obstacles to navigation, weather characteristics, passengers served, and potential aircraft operating efficiencies.

§ 44719. Meteorological services

(a) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall make recommendations to the Secretary of Commerce on providing meteorological services necessary for the safe and efficient movement of aircraft in air commerce. In providing the services, the Secretary shall cooperate with the Administrator and give complete consideration to those recommendations.

(b) To promote safety and efficiency in air navigation to the highest possible degree, the Secretary of Commerce shall—

(1) observe, measure, investigate, and study atmospheric phenomena, and maintain meteorological stations and offices, that are necessary or best suited for finding out in advance information about probable weather conditions;

(2) provide reports to the Administrator to persons engaged in civil aeronautics that are designated by the Administrator and to other persons designated by the Secretary in a way and with a frequency that best will result in safety in, and facilitating, air navigation;

(3) cooperate with persons engaged in air commerce in meteorological services, maintain reciprocal arrangements with those persons in carrying out this clause, and collect and distribute weather reports available from aircraft in flight;

(4) maintain and coordinate international exchanges of meteorological information required for the safety and efficiency of air navigation;

(5) in cooperation with other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government, meteorological services of foreign countries, and persons engaged in air commerce, participate in developing an international basic meteorological reporting network, including the establishment, operation, and maintenance of reporting stations on the high seas, in polar regions, and in foreign countries;

(6) coordinate meteorological requirements in the United States to maintain standard observations, to promote efficient use of facilities, and to avoid duplication of services unless the duplication tends to promote the safety and efficiency of air navigation; and

(7) promote and develop meteorological science and foster and support research projects in meteorology through the use of private and governmental research facilities and provide for publishing the results of the projects unless publication would not be in the public interest.

(c)(1) The Secretary of Transportation may close, or reduce the hours of operation of, a flight service station in an area only if the service provided in the area after the closing or during the hours the station is not in operation is provided by an automated flight service station with at least model 1 equipment.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall reopen a flight service station closed after March 24, 1987, but before July 15, 1987, as soon as practicable if the service in the area in which the station is located has not been provided since the closing by an automatic flight service station with at least model 1 equipment. The hours of operation for the reopened station shall be the same as were the hours of operation for the station on March 25, 1987. After reopening the station, the Secretary may close, or reduce the hours of operation of, the station only as provided in paragraph (1) of this subsection.

§ 44720. Aeronautical maps and charts

(a) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall arrange for the publication of aeronautical maps and charts necessary for the safe and efficient movement of aircraft in air navigation, using the facilities and assistance of departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government as far as practicable.

(b) The Government shall indemnify any person that publishes an aeronautical map or chart from any part of a claim arising out of the depiction by the person on the map or chart of a defective or deficient flight procedure or airway if the flight procedure or airway was—

(1) prescribed by the Administrator;

(2) depicted accurately on the map or chart; and

(3) not obviously defective or deficient.

§ 44721. Reports

(a)(1) Not later than April 1 of each year, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit to Congress a report on the extent to which the implementation of the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978 has affected, during the prior calendar year, or will affect, in the next calendar year, the level of air safety. The report shall contain an analysis of—

(A) relevant information on accidents and incidents in air transportation, and on violations of safety regulations prescribed by the Secretary, that occurred during the year covered by the report;

(B) current and anticipated personnel requirements of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation in enforcing air safety regulations;

(C) the effect that a change or proposed change in air carrier operating practices and procedures that occurred during the year had, or will have, on current levels of air safety; and

(D) the adequacy of air safety regulations based on those changes.

(2) Based on the report, the Secretary shall act to ensure that the high standard of safety in air transportation attained in the United States on October 24, 1978, is maintained in all aspects of that transportation.

(b) Not later than January 1 of each year, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a comprehensive report on the safety enforcement activities of the Administration during the fiscal year ending the prior September 30th. The report shall include—

(1) a comparison of end-of-year staffing levels by operations, maintenance, and avionics inspector categories to staffing goals and a statement on how staffing standards were applied to make allocations between air carrier and general aviation operations, maintenance, and avionics inspectors;

(2) schedules showing the range of inspector experience by various inspector work force categories, and the number of inspectors in each of the categories who are considered fully qualified;

(3) schedules showing the number and percentage of inspectors who have received mandatory training by individual course, and the number of inspectors by work force categories, who have received all mandatory training;

(4) a description of the criteria used to set annual work programs, an explanation of how these criteria differ from criteria used in the prior fiscal year and how the annual work programs ensure compliance with appropriate regulations and safe operating practices;

(5) a comparison of actual inspections performed during the fiscal year to the annual work programs by field location and, for any field location completing less than 80 percent of its planned number of inspections, an explanation of why annual work program plans were not met;

(6) a statement of the adequacy of Administration internal management controls available to ensure that field managers comply with Administration policies and procedures, including those on inspector priorities, district office coordination, minimum inspection standards, and inspection followup;

(7) the status of efforts made by the Administration to update inspector guidance documents and regulations to include technological, management, and structural changes taking place in the aviation industry, including a listing of the backlog of all proposed regulatory changes;

(8) a list of the specific operational measures of effectiveness used to evaluate—

(A) the progress in meeting program objectives;

(B) the quality of program delivery; and

(C) the nature of emerging safety problems;

(9) a schedule showing the number of civil penalty cases closed during the 2 prior fiscal years, including the total initial and final penalties imposed, the total number of dollars collected, the range of dollar amounts collected, the average case processing time, and the range of case processing time;

(10) a schedule showing the number of enforcement actions taken (except civil penalties) during the 2 prior fiscal years, including the total number of violations cited, and the number of cited violation cases closed by certificate suspensions, certificate revocations, warnings, and no action taken; and

(11) schedules showing the safety record of the aviation industry during the fiscal year for air carriers and general aviation, including—

(A) the number of inspections performed when deficiencies were identified compared with inspections when no deficiencies were found;

(B) the frequency of safety deficiencies for each air carrier; and

(C) an analysis based on data of the general status of air carrier and general aviation compliance with aviation regulations.

(c) Not later than April 1 of each year, the Secretary shall submit to Congress recommendations on the level of surveillance necessary to enforce air safety regulations, the personnel needed to carry out the surveillance, and legislation necessary to carry out the recommendations.

CHAPTER 449—SECURITY

Sec.
44901. Screening passengers and property.
44902. Refusal to transport passengers or property.
44903. Air transportation security.
44904. Security standards in foreign air transportation.
44905. Travel advisory and suspension of foreign assistance.
44906. Agreements on aircraft sabotage, aircraft hijacking, and airport security.
44907. Explosive Detection K-9 Team Training Program.
44908. Exemptions.

§ 44901. Screening passengers and property

(a) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe regulations requiring screening of all passengers and property that will be carried in a cabin of an aircraft in air transportation or intrastate air transportation. The screening must take place before boarding and be carried out by a weapon-detecting facility or procedure used or operated by an employee or agent of an air carrier, intrastate air carrier, or foreign air carrier.

(b) Notwithstanding subsection (a) of this section, the Administrator may change a regulation prescribed under subsection (a) to require screening only to ensure security against criminal violence and aircraft piracy in air transportation and intrastate air transportation.

(c) The Administrator—

(1) may exempt from this section air transportation operations, except scheduled passenger operations of an air carrier providing air transportation under a certificate issued under section 41102 of this title or a permit issued under section 41302 of this title;

(2) every 6 months shall submit to Congress a report—

(A) on the effectiveness of procedures under this section; and

(B) that includes a summary of the assessments conducted under section 44904(a) of this title; and

(3) shall advise Congress of a regulation to be prescribed under this section at least 30 days before the effective date of the regulation, unless the Administrator decides an emergency exists requiring the regulation to become effective in fewer than 30 days and notifies Congress of that decision.

§ 44902. Refusal to transport passengers or property

(a) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe regulations requiring an air carrier, intrastate air carrier, or foreign air carrier to refuse to transport—

(1) a passenger who does not consent to a search under section 44901(a) of this title establishing whether the passenger is carrying unlawfully a dangerous weapon, explosive, or other destructive substance; or

(2) property of a passenger who does not consent to a search of the property establishing whether the property unlawfully contains a dangerous weapon, explosive, or other destructive substance.

(b) Subject to regulations of the Administrator, an air carrier, intrastate air carrier, or foreign air carrier may refuse to transport a passenger or property the carrier decides is, or might be, inimical to safety.

(c) An agreement to carry passengers or property in air transportation or intrastate air transportation by an air carrier, intrastate air carrier, or foreign air carrier is deemed to include an agreement that the passenger or property will not be carried if consent to search the passenger or property for a purpose referred to in this section is not given.

§ 44903. Air transportation security

(a) In this section, 'law enforcement personnel" means individuals—

(1) authorized to carry and use firearms;

(2) vested with the degree of the police power of arrest the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration considers necessary to carry out this section; and

(3) identifiable by appropriate indicia of authority.

(b) The Administrator shall prescribe regulations to protect passengers and property on an aircraft operating in air transportation or intrastate air transportation against an act of criminal violence or aircraft piracy. When prescribing a regulation under this subsection, the Administrator shall—

(1) consult with the Secretary of Transportation, the Attorney General, the heads of other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government, and State and local authorities;

(2) consider whether a proposed regulation is consistent with—

(A) protecting passengers; and

(B) the public interest in promoting air transportation and intrastate air transportation;

(3) to the maximum extent practicable, require a uniform procedure for searching and detaining passengers and property to ensure—

(A) their safety; and

(B) courteous and efficient treatment by an air carrier, an agent or employee of an air carrier, and Government, State, and local law enforcement personnel carrying out this section; and

(4) consider the extent to which a proposed regulation will carry out this section.

(c)(1) The Administrator shall prescribe regulations under subsection (b) of this section that require each operator of an airport regularly serving an air carrier holding a certificate issued by the Secretary to establish an air transportation security program that provides a law enforcement presence and capability at each of those airports that is adequate to ensure the safety of passengers. The regulations shall authorize the operator to use the services of qualified State, local, and private law enforcement personnel. When the Administrator decides, after being notified by an operator in the form the Administrator prescribes, that not enough qualified State, local, and private law enforcement personnel are available to carry out subsection (b), the Administrator may authorize the operator to use, on a reimbursable basis, personnel employed by the Administrator, or by another department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government with the consent of the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality, to supplement State, local, and private law enforcement personnel. When deciding whether additional personnel are needed, the Administrator shall consider the number of passengers boarded at the airport, the extent of anticipated risk of criminal violence or aircraft piracy at the airport or to the air carrier aircraft operations at the airport, and the availability of qualified State or local law enforcement personnel at the airport.

(2)(A) The Administrator may approve a security program of an airport operator, or a change in an existing program, that incorporates a security program of an airport tenant (except an air carrier separately complying with part 108 or 129 of title 14 of the Code of Federal Regulations) having access to a secured area of the airport, if the program or change—

(i) incorporates the measures the tenant will use, within the tenant's leased areas or areas designated for the tenant's exclusive use under an agreement with the airport operator, to carry out the security requirements imposed by the Administrator on the airport operator under the access control system requirements of section 107.14 of title 14 of the Code of Federal Regulations or under other requirements of part 107 of title 14; and

(ii) incorporates the methods the airport operator will use to monitor and audit the tenant's compliance with the security requirements and provides that the tenant will be required to pay monetary penalties to the airport operator if the tenant fails to carry out a security requirement under a contractual provision or requirement imposed by the airport operator.

(B) If the Administrator approves a program or change described in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, the airport operator may not be found to be in violation of a requirement of this subsection or subsection (b) of this section when the airport operator demonstrates that the tenant or an employee, permittee, or invitee of the tenant is responsible for the violation and that the airport operator has complied with all measures in its security program for securing compliance with its security program by the tenant.

(d) With the approval of the Attorney General and the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Transportation may authorize an individual who carries out air transportation security duties—

(1) to carry firearms; and

(2) to make arrests without warrant for an offense against the United States committed in the presence of the individual or for a felony under the laws of the United States, if the individual reasonably believes the individual to be arrested has committed or is committing a felony.

(e) The Administrator—

(1) may train individuals employed to carry out an air transportation security program under this section; and

(2) shall prescribe uniform training standards and uniform minimum qualifications for individuals eligible for that training.

(f)(1) The Administrator shall conduct research (including behavioral research) and development appropriate to develop, change, test, and evaluate a system, procedure, facility, or device to protect passengers and property.

(2) Notwithstanding section 552 of title 5, the Administrator shall prescribe regulations prohibiting disclosure of information obtained or developed under this subsection if the Administrator decides disclosing the information would—

(A) be an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy;

(B) reveal a trade secret or privileged or confidential commercial or financial information; or

(C) be detrimental to the safety of passengers in air transportation.

(3) Paragraph (2) of this subsection does not authorize information to be withheld from a committee of Congress authorized to have the information.

(g)(1) The Administrator has the exclusive responsibility to direct law enforcement activity related to the safety of passengers on an aircraft involved in an offense under section 46502 of this title from the moment all external doors of the aircraft are closed following boarding until those doors are opened to allow passengers to leave the aircraft. When requested by the Administrator, other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government shall provide assistance necessary to carry out this subsection.

(2) Except as otherwise provided by law, the Administrator may not transfer a duty or power under this section to another department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government.

§ 44904. Security standards in foreign air transportation

(a)(1) At intervals the Secretary of Transportation considers necessary, the Secretary shall assess the effectiveness of the security measures maintained at—

(A) a foreign airport—

(i) served by an air carrier;

(ii) from which a foreign air carrier serves the United States; or

(iii) that poses a high risk of introducing danger to international air travel; and

(B) other foreign airports the Secretary considers appropriate.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall conduct an assessment under paragraph (1) of this subsection—

(A) in consultation with appropriate aeronautic authorities of the foreign country concerned and each air carrier serving the foreign airport for which the Secretary is conducting the assessment;

(B) to establish the extent to which a foreign airport effectively maintains and carries out security measures; and

(C) by using a standard that will result in an analysis of the security measures at the airport based at least on the standards and appropriate recommended practices contained in Annex 17 to the Convention on International Civil Aviation in effect on the date of the assessment.

(3) Each report to Congress required under section 44901(c)(2) of this title shall contain a summary of the assessments conducted under this subsection.

(b) In carrying out subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall consult with the Secretary of State—

(1) on the terrorist threat that exists in each country; and

(2) to establish which foreign airports are not under the de facto control of the government of the foreign country in which they are located and pose a high risk of introducing danger to international air travel.

(c) When the Secretary of Transportation, after conducting an assessment under subsection (a) of this section, decides that an airport does not maintain and carry out effective security measures, the Secretary of Transportation, after advising the Secretary of State, shall notify the appropriate authorities of the foreign country of the decision and recommend the steps necessary to bring the security measures in use at the airport up to the standard used by the Secretary of Transportation in making the assessment.

(d)(1) When the Secretary of Transportation decides under this section that an airport does not maintain and carry out effective security measures—

(A) the Secretary of Transportation shall—

(i) publish the identity of the airport in the Federal Register;

(ii) have the identity of the airport posted and displayed prominently at all United States airports at which scheduled air carrier operations are provided regularly; and

(iii) notify the news media of the identity of the airport;

(B) each air carrier and foreign air carrier providing transportation between the United States and the airport shall provide written notice of the decision, on or with the ticket, to each passenger buying a ticket for transportation between the United States and the airport;

(C) notwithstanding section 40105(b) of this title, the Secretary of Transportation, after consulting with the appropriate aeronautic authorities of the foreign country concerned and each air carrier serving the airport and with the approval of the Secretary of State, may withhold, revoke, or prescribe conditions on the operating authority of an air carrier or foreign air carrier that uses that airport to provide foreign air transportation; and

(D) the President may prohibit an air carrier or foreign air carrier from providing transportation between the United States and any other foreign airport that is served by aircraft flying to or from the airport with respect to which a decision is made under this section.

(2)(A) Paragraph (1) of this subsection becomes effective—

(i) 90 days after the government of a foreign country is notified under subsection (c) of this section if the Secretary of Transportation finds that the government has not brought the security measures at the airport up to the standard the Secretary used in making an assessment under subsection (a) of this section; or

(ii) immediately on the decision of the Secretary of Transportation under subsection (c) of this section if the Secretary of Transportation decides, after consulting with the Secretary of State, that a condition exists that threatens the safety or security of passengers, aircraft, or crew traveling to or from the airport.

(B) The Secretary of Transportation immediately shall notify the Secretary of State of a decision under subparagraph (A)(ii) of this paragraph so that the Secretary of State may issue a travel advisory required under section 44905(a) of this title.

(3) The Secretary of Transportation promptly shall submit to Congress a report (and classified annex if necessary) on action taken under paragraph (1) or (2) of this subsection, including information on attempts made to obtain the cooperation of the government of a foreign country in meeting the standard the Secretary used in assessing the airport under subsection (a) of this section.

(4) An action required under paragraph (1)(A) and (B) of this subsection is no longer required only if the Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Secretary of State, decides that effective security measures are maintained and carried out at the airport. The Secretary of Transportation shall notify Congress when the action is no longer required to be taken.

(e) Notwithstanding sections 40105(b) and 40106(b) of this title, the Secretary of Transportation, with the approval of the Secretary of State and without notice or an opportunity for a proceeding, shall suspend the right of an air carrier or foreign air carrier to provide foreign air transportation, and the right of a person to operate aircraft in foreign air commerce, to or from a foreign airport when the Secretary of Transportation decides that—

(1) a condition exists that threatens the safety or security of passengers, aircraft, or crew traveling to or from that airport; and

(2) the public interest requires an immediate suspension of transportation between the United States and that airport.

(f) This section is a condition to authority the Secretary of Transportation grants under this part to an air carrier or foreign air carrier.

§ 44905. Travel advisory and suspension of foreign assistance

(a) On being notified by the Secretary of Transportation that the Secretary of Transportation has decided under section 44904(d)(2)(A)(ii) of this title that a condition exists that threatens the safety or security of passengers, aircraft, or crew traveling to or from a foreign airport that the Secretary of Transportation has decided under section 44904 of this title does not maintain and carry out effective security measures, the Secretary of State—

(1) immediately shall issue a travel advisory for that airport;

(2) shall publish the advisory in the Federal Register; and

(3) shall publicize the advisory widely.

(b) The President shall suspend assistance provided under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2151 et seq.) or the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2751 et seq.) to a country in which is located an airport with respect to which section 44904(d)(1) of this title becomes effective if the Secretary of State decides the country is a high terrorist threat country. The President may waive this subsection if the President decides, and reports to Congress, that the waiver is required because of national security interests or a humanitarian emergency.

(c) An action required under this section is no longer required only if the Secretary of Transportation has made a decision as provided under section 44904(d)(4) of this title. The Secretary shall notify Congress when the action is no longer required to be taken.

§ 44906. Agreements on aircraft sabotage, aircraft hijacking, and airport security

The Secretary of State shall seek multilateral and bilateral agreement on strengthening enforcement measures and standards for compliance related to aircraft sabotage, aircraft hijacking, and airport security.

§ 44907. Explosive Detection K-9 Team Training Program

The Secretary of Transportation may provide grants to continue the Explosive Detection K-9 Team Training Program to detect explosives at airports and on aircraft.

§ 44908. Exemptions

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may exempt from sections 44901 and 44903(a)-(c) and (e)-(g) of this title airports in Alaska served only by air carriers that—

(1) hold certificates issued under section 41102 of this title;

(2) operate aircraft with certificates for a maximum gross takeoff weight of less than 12,500 pounds; and

(3) board passengers, or load property intended to be carried in an aircraft cabin, that will be screened under section 44901 of this title at another airport in Alaska before the passengers board, or the property is loaded on, an aircraft for a place outside Alaska.

CHAPTER 451—FEES

Sec.
45101. Authority to impose fees.
45102. Fees involving aircraft not providing air transportation.

§ 45101. Authority to impose fees

(a) The Secretary of Transportation may impose a fee for an approval, test, authorization, certificate, permit, registration, transfer, or rating related to aviation that has not been approved by Congress only when the fee—

(1)(A) was in effect on January 1, 1973; and

(B) is not more than the fee in effect on January 1, 1973, adjusted in proportion to changes in the Consumer Price Index of All Urban Consumers published by the Secretary of Labor between January 1, 1973, and the date the fee is imposed; or

(2) is imposed under section 45102 of this title.

(b) This section does not apply to a fee for a test, authorization, certificate, permit, or rating related to an airman or repair station administered or issued outside the United States.

§ 45102. Fees involving aircraft not providing air transportation

(a) This section applies only to aircraft not used to provide air transportation.

(b) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may impose fees to pay for the costs of issuing airman certificates and certificates of registration of aircraft and processing forms for major repairs and changes to fuel tanks and fuel systems of aircraft. The following fees may not be more than the amounts specified:

(1) $12 for issuing an airman's certificate.

(2) $25 for registering an aircraft after the transfer of ownership.

(3) $15 for renewing an aircraft registration.

(4) $7.50 for processing a form for a major repair or change to a fuel tank or fuel system of an aircraft.

(c) The Administrator shall adjust the maximum fees established by subsection (b) of this section for changes in the Consumer Price Index of All Urban Consumers published by the Secretary of Labor.

(d) Amounts collected from fees imposed under this section shall be credited to the account in the Treasury from which the Administrator incurs expenses in carrying out chapter 441 and sections 44701-44716 of this title (except sections 44701(c), 44703(f)(2), and 44713(d)(2)). The amounts are available to the Administrator to pay expenses for which the fees are collected.

SUBPART IV—ENFORCEMENT AND PENALTIES

CHAPTER 461—INVESTIGATIONS AND PROCEEDINGS

Sec.
46101. General authority.
46102. Conduct of proceedings.
46103. Service of notice, process, and actions.
46104. Subpenas and depositions.
46105. Regulations and orders.
46106. Enforcement by the Secretary of Transportation and Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration.
46107. Enforcement by the Attorney General.
46108. Enforcement of certificate requirements by interested persons.
46109. Joinder and intervention.
46110. Judicial review.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation (and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) shall conduct an investigation about a person violating this part, on the initiative of the Secretary or Administrator or on complaint, when the Secretary or Administrator finds that a reason exists for investigation. After notice and an opportunity for a proceeding and subject to section 40105(b) of this title, the Secretary or Administrator shall take appropriate action to compel compliance with this part if the Secretary or Administrator finds that a person is violating this part. The Secretary or Administrator may dismiss a complaint without an opportunity for a proceeding when the Secretary or Administrator decides the complaint does not state information that warrants an investigation or action.

(b) The Secretary of Transportation or Administrator shall refer a complaint against a member of the armed forces acting in the line of duty to the Secretary of the military department concerned for action. Not later than 90 days after receiving the complaint, the Secretary of that department shall inform the Secretary of Transportation or Administrator of the action taken on the complaint, including any corrective or disciplinary action taken.

§ 46102. Conduct of proceedings

(a) A person may appear and be heard before the Secretary of Transportation (and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) in person or by an attorney. The Secretary may appear and participate as an interested party in a proceeding the Administrator conducts under section 40103(b)(1), (2), or (4), 40109(b), 40110(a), (b), or (e), 44502(a)(1) or (3), (b), (c), or (e), 44504, 44505, 44702(c), 44719(a), 44901, 44903(a), (b), (c), (e), (f), or (g), 44908, or 46104(d) of this title.

(b) Official action taken by the Secretary and Administrator under this part shall be recorded. Proceedings before the Secretary and Administrator shall be open to the public on the request of an interested person unless the Secretary or Administrator decides that secrecy is required because of national defense.

(c) The Secretary or Administrator may not participate in a proceeding in which the Secretary or Administrator has a pecuniary interest.

§ 46103. Service of notice, process, and actions

(a)(1) Each air carrier and foreign air carrier shall designate an agent on whom service of notice and process in a proceeding before, and an action of, the Secretary of Transportation (and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) may be made.

(2) The designation—

(A) shall be in writing and filed with the Secretary or Administrator; and

(B) may be changed at any time in the same way as originally made.

(b)(1) Service may be made—

(A) by personal service;

(B) on a designated agent; or

(C) by certified mail to the person to be served or the designated agent of the person.

(2) The date of mailing is the date service is made by certified mail.

(c) Service on an agent designated under this section shall be made at the office or usual place of residence of the agent. If an air carrier or foreign air carrier does not have a designated agent, service may be made by posting the notice, process, or action in the office of the Secretary or Administrator.

§ 46104. Subpenas and depositions

(a)(1) To carry out this part, the Secretary of Transportation (and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) may subpena witnesses and records related to a matter under investigation from any place in the United States to the designated place of the proceeding. If a witness disobeys a subpena, the Secretary, the Administrator, or a party to the proceeding before the Secretary or Administrator may petition a court of the United States to enforce the subpena.

(2) A judicial proceeding to enforce a subpena under this section may be brought in the jurisdiction in which the proceeding is conducted. The court may punish a refusal to obey a subpena as a contempt of court.

(b)(1) In a proceeding or investigation, the Secretary or Administrator may take the testimony of a witness by deposition and may order the witness to produce records. If a witness fails to be deposed or to produce records, the Secretary or Administrator may subpena the witness to take a deposition, produce the records, or both.

(2) A deposition may be taken before an individual designated by the Secretary or Administrator and having the power to administer oaths.

(3) Before taking a deposition, reasonable notice must be given in writing by the party or the attorney of the party proposing to take a deposition to the opposing party or the attorney of record of that party. The notice shall state the name of the witness and the time and place of taking the deposition.

(4) The testimony of a person deposed under this subsection shall be under oath. The person taking the deposition shall prepare, or have prepared, a transcript of the testimony taken. The transcript shall be subscribed by the deponent. Each deposition shall be filed promptly with the Secretary or Administrator.

(5) If the laws of a foreign country allow, the testimony of a witness in that country may be taken—

(A) by deposition by a consular officer or an individual commissioned by the Secretary or Administrator or agreed on by the parties by written stipulation filed with the Secretary or Administrator; or

(B) under letters rogatory issued by a court of competent jurisdiction at the request of the Secretary or Administrator.

(c) A witness summoned before the Secretary or Administrator or whose deposition is taken under this section and the individual taking the deposition are each entitled to the same fee and mileage that the witness and individual would have been paid for those services in a court of the United States. Under regulations of the Secretary or Administrator, the Secretary or Administrator shall pay the necessary expenses incident to executing, in another country, a commission or letter rogatory issued at the initiative of the Secretary or Administrator.

(d) When designated by the Secretary or Administrator, an employee appointed under section 3105 of title 5 may conduct a proceeding, sign and issue subpenas, administer oaths, examine witnesses, and receive evidence at a place in the United States the Secretary or Administrator designates. On request of a party to the proceeding, the Secretary or Administrator may hear or receive argument.

§ 46105. Regulations and orders

(a) Except as provided in this part, a regulation prescribed or order issued by the Secretary of Transportation (and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) takes effect within a reasonable time prescribed by the Secretary or Administrator. The regulation or order remains in effect under its own terms or until superseded. Except as provided in this part, the Secretary or Administrator may change or suspend an order in the way, and by giving the notice, the Secretary or Administrator decides.

(b) An order of the Secretary or Administrator shall include the findings of fact on which the order is based and shall be served on the parties to the proceeding and the persons affected by the order.

(c) When an emergency exists related to safety in air commerce and requires immediate action, the Administrator, on the initiative of the Administrator or on complaint, may prescribe regulations and issue orders immediately to meet the emergency without regard to this part and subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 5. The Administrator shall begin a proceeding immediately about an emergency under this subsection and give preference, when practicable, to the proceeding.

§ 46106. Enforcement by the Secretary of Transportation and Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration

The Secretary of Transportation (and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) may bring a civil action against a person to enforce this part or a requirement, regulation prescribed, or order, certificate, or permit issued under this part. The action may be brought in the district court of the United States for the judicial district in which the person does business or the violation occurred.

§ 46107. Enforcement by the Attorney General

(a) The Attorney General may bring a civil action against a person to enforce section 40106(b) of this title. The action may be brought in the district court of the United States for the judicial district in which the person does business or the violation occurred.

(b)(1) On request of the Secretary of Transportation (and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator), the Attorney General may bring a civil action—

(A) to enforce this part or a requirement or regulation prescribed, or an order, certificate, or permit issued, under this part; and

(B) to prosecute a person violating this part or a requirement or regulation prescribed, or an order, certificate, or permit issued, under this part.

(2) The costs and expenses of a civil action shall be paid out of the appropriations for the expenses of the courts of the United States.

(c) On request of the Attorney General, the Secretary or Administrator may participate in a civil action under this part.

§ 46108. Enforcement of certificate requirements by interested persons

An interested person may bring a civil action against a person to enforce section 41101(a)(1) of this title. The action may be brought in the district court of the United States for the judicial district in which the defendant does business or the violation occurred.

§ 46109. Joinder and intervention

A person interested in or affected by a matter under consideration in a proceeding before the Secretary of Transportation or civil action to enforce this part or a requirement or regulation prescribed, or an order, certificate, or permit issued, under this part may be joined as a party or permitted to intervene in the proceeding or civil action.

§ 46110. Judicial review

(a) Except for an order related to a foreign air carrier subject to disapproval by the President under section 41307 or 41509(f) of this title, a person disclosing a substantial interest in an order issued by the Secretary of Transportation (and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) under this part may apply for review of the order by filing a petition for review in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit or in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the person resides or has its principal place of business. The petition must be filed not later than 60 days after the order is issued. The court may allow the petition to be filed after the 60th day only if there was a reasonable ground for not filing by the 60th day.

(b) When a petition is filed under subsection (a) of this section, the clerk of the court immediately shall submit a copy of the petition to the Secretary or Administrator. The Secretary or Administrator shall file with the court a record of any proceeding in which the order was issued, as provided in section 2112 of title 28.

(c) When the petition is submitted to the Secretary or Administrator, the court has exclusive jurisdiction to affirm, change, or set aside any part of the order and may order the Secretary or Administrator to conduct further proceedings. After reasonable notice to the Secretary or Administrator, the court may grant interim relief by staying the order or taking other appropriate action when good cause for its action exists.

(d) In reviewing an order under this section, the court may consider an objection to an order of the Secretary or Administrator only if the objection was made in the proceeding conducted by the Secretary or Administrator or if there was a reasonable ground for not making the objection in the proceeding.

(e) A decision by a court under this section may be reviewed only by the Supreme Court under section 1254 of title 28.

§ 46301. Civil penalties

(a) (1) A person is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $1,000 for violating—

(A) chapter 401 (except sections 40103(a) and (d), 40105, and 40113) or chapter 411, section 41301-41306, 41308-41310(a), 41501, 41503, 41504, 41506, 41510, 41511, 41701, 41702, 41705-41709, 41711, 41712, or 41731-41742, chapter 419, subchapter II of chapter 421, chapter 441 (except section 44109) or chapter 445 (except section 44506), or section 44701 (a) or (b), 44702-44716, 44901, 44903 (a), (b), (c), (e), (f), or (g), or 44904(d)(1)(B) of this title;

(B) a regulation prescribed or order issued under any provision to which clause (A) of this paragraph applies;

(C) any term of a certificate or permit issued under section 41102, 41103, 41302, or 44104(2) of this title; or

(D) a regulation of the United States Postal Service under this part.

(2) A person operating an aircraft for the transportation of passengers or property for compensation (except an airman serving as an airman) is liable to the Government for a civil penalty of not more than $10,000 for violating—

(A) chapter 401 (except sections 40103(a) and (d), 40105, 40106(b), and 40113), chapter 445 (except section 44506), or section 44701(a) or (b), 44702-44716, 44901, or

44903(a), (b), (c), (e), (f), or (g) of this title; or

(B) a regulation prescribed or order issued under any provision to which clause (A) of this paragraph applies.

(3) A civil penalty of not more than $10,000 may be imposed for each violation under paragraph (1) of this subsection related to—

(A) the transportation of hazardous material; or

(B) registration or recordation under chapter 441 of this title of an aircraft not used to provide air transportation.

(4) A separate violation occurs under this subsection for each day the violation continues or, if applicable, for each flight involving the violation.

(b)(1) A passenger may not tamper with, disable, or destroy a smoke alarm device located in a lavatory on an aircraft providing air transportation or intrastate air transportation.

(2) An individual violating this subsection is liable to the Government for a civil penalty of not more than $2,000.

(c) After notice and an opportunity for a proceeding, the Secretary of Transportation may impose a civil penalty for a violation of subsection (b) of this section or chapter 411, section 41301–41306, 41308–41310(a), 41501, 41503, 41504, 41506, 41510, 41511, 41701, 41702, 41705–41709, 41711, 41712, or 41731–41742, chapter 419, subchapter II of chapter 421, or section 46301(b) of this title, a regulation prescribed or order issued under any of those provisions, or any term of a certificate or permit issued under section 41102, 41103, or 41302 of this title, or for a violation related to transporting hazardous material. The Secretary shall give written notice of the finding of a violation and the penalty.

(d)(1) After notice and an opportunity for a hearing on the record under section 554 of title 5, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may impose a civil penalty for a violation of chapter 441 of this title (except section 44109), or a regulation prescribed or order issued under chapter 441 (except section 44109), if the violation is related to the registration or recordation of an aircraft not used to provide air transportation. The Administrator shall give written notice of the finding of a violation and the penalty.

(2) The maximum penalty the Administrator may impose under this subsection in any case is $50,000.

(3) In a civil action to collect a penalty imposed under this subsection, the issues of liability and amount of the penalty may not be reexamined.

(4) Notwithstanding paragraph (1) of this subsection, the district courts of the United States have exclusive jurisdiction of a civil action the Administrator brings for a civil penalty if—

(A) the amount in controversy is more than $50,000;

(B) the action is in rem or another action in rem based on the same violation has been brought;

(C) the action involves an aircraft subject to a lien that has been seized by the Government; or

(D) another action has been brought for an injunction based on the same violation.

(5) This subsection applies only to a civil penalty initiated after November 18, 1988.

(e) In determining the amount of a civil penalty under this section, the Secretary shall consider—

(1) the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the violation;

(2) with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior violations, the ability to pay, and any effect on the ability to continue doing business; and

(3) other matters that justice requires.

(f)(1)(A) The Secretary may compromise a civil penalty imposed under chapter 401 (except sections 40103(a) and (d), 40105, and 40113), chapter 441 (except section 44109), chapter 445 (except section 44506), or section 44701(a) or (b), 44702–44716, 44901, 44903(a), (b), (c), (e), (f), or (g), or 44904(d)(1)(B) of this title or a regulation prescribed or order issued under any of those provisions (except sections 40103(a) and (d), 40105, 40113, 44109, and 44506).

(B) The Postal Service may compromise a civil penalty imposed under subsection (a)(1)(D) of this section.

(2) The Government may deduct the amount imposed or agreed on under this subsection from amounts it owes the person liable for the penalty.

(g) An order of the Secretary imposing a civil penalty may be reviewed judicially only under section 46110 of this title.

(h)(1) This section does not apply to the following when performing official duties:

(A) a member of the armed forces.

(B) a civilian employee of the Department of Defense subject to the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

(2) The appropriate military authority is responsible for taking necessary disciplinary action and submitting to the Secretary (or the Administrator with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) a timely report on action taken.

§ 46302. False information

(a) A person that, knowing the information to be false, gives, or causes to be given, under circumstances in which the information reasonably may be believed, false information about an alleged attempt being made or to be made to do an act that would violate section 46502(a), 46504, 46505, or 46506 of this title, is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $10,000 for each violation.

(b) The Secretary of Transportation may compromise a civil penalty imposed under subsection (a) of this section. The Government may deduct the amount imposed or agreed on from amounts it owes the individual liable for the penalty.

§ 46303. Carrying a weapon

(a) An individual who, when on, or attempting to board, an aircraft in, or intended for operation in, air transportation or intrastate air transportation, has on or about the individual or the property of the individual a concealed dangerous weapon that is or would be accessible to the individual in flight is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $10,000 for each violation.

(b) The Secretary of Transportation may compromise a civil penalty imposed under subsection (a) of this section. The Government may deduct the amount imposed or agreed on from amounts it owes the person liable for the penalty.

(c) This section does not apply to—

(1) a law enforcement officer of a State or political subdivision of a State, or an officer or employee of the Government, authorized to carry arms in an official capacity; or

(2) another individual the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration by regulation authorizes to carry arms in an official capacity.

§ 46304. Liens on aircraft

(a) When an aircraft is involved in a violation referred to in section 46301(a)(1)(A)–(C), (2), or (3) of this title and the violation is by the owner of, or individual commanding, the aircraft, the aircraft is subject to a lien for the civil penalty.

(b) An aircraft subject to a lien under this section may be seized summarily and placed in the custody of a person authorized to take custody of it under regulations of the Secretary of Transportation (and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator). A report on the seizure shall be submitted to the Attorney General. The Attorney General promptly shall bring a civil action in rem to enforce the lien or notify the Secretary or Administrator that the action will not be brought.

(c) An aircraft seized under subsection (b) of this section shall be released from custody when—

(1) the civil penalty is paid;

(2) a compromise amount agreed on is paid;

(3) the aircraft is seized under a civil action in rem to enforce the lien;

(4) the Attorney General gives notice that a civil action will not be brought under subsection (b) of this section; or

(5) a bond (in an amount and with a surety the Secretary or Administrator prescribes) conditioned on payment of the penalty or compromise is deposited with the Secretary.

§ 46305. Actions to recover civil penalties

A civil penalty under this chapter may be collected by bringing a civil action against the person subject to the penalty, a civil action in rem against an aircraft subject to a lien for a penalty, or both. The action shall conform as nearly as practicable to a civil action in admiralty, regardless of the place an aircraft in a civil action in rem is seized. However, a party may demand a jury trial of an issue of fact in an action involving a civil penalty under this subchapter (except a penalty imposed by the Secretary of Transportation that formerly was imposed by the Civil Aeronautics Board) if the value of the matter in controversy is more than $20. Issues of fact tried by a jury may be reexamined only under common law rules.

§ 46306. Registration violations involving aircraft not providing air transportation

(a) This section applies only to aircraft not used to provide air transportation.

(b) Except as provided by subsection (c) of this section, a person shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 3 years, or both, if the person—

(1) knowingly and willfully forges or changes a certificate authorized to be issued under this part;

(2) knowingly sells, uses, attempts to use, or possesses with the intent to use, such a certificate;

(3) knowingly and willfully displays or has displayed on an aircraft a mark that is false or misleading about the nationality or registration of the aircraft;

(4) obtains a certificate authorized to be issued under this part by knowingly and willfully falsifying or concealing a material fact, making a false, fictitious, or fraudulent statement, or making or using a false document knowing it contains a false, fictitious, or fraudulent statement or entry;

(5) owns an aircraft eligible for registration under section 44102 this title and knowingly and willfully operates, attempts to operate, or allows another person to operate the aircraft when—

(A) the aircraft is not registered under section 44103 of this title or the certificate of registration is suspended or revoked; or

(B) the owner knows or has reason to know that the other person does not have proper authorization to operate or navigate the aircraft without registration for a period of time after transfer of ownership;

(6) knowingly and willfully operates or attempts to operate an aircraft eligible for registration under section 44102 this title knowing that—

(A) the aircraft is not registered under section 44103 of this title;

(B) the certificate of registration is suspended or revoked; or

(C) the person does not have proper authorization to operate or navigate the aircraft without registration for a period of time after transfer of ownership;

(7) knowingly and willfully serves or attempts to serve in any capacity as an airman without an airman's certificate authorizing the individual to serve as an airman;

(8) knowingly and willfully employs for service or uses an airman who does not have an airman's certificate authorizing the individual to serve as an airman; or

(9) operates an aircraft with a fuel tank or fuel system that has been installed or modified knowing that the tank, system, installation, or modification does not comply with regulations and requirements of the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration.

(c)(1) In this subsection, "controlled substance" has the same meaning given that term in section 102 of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 802).

(2) A person violating subsection (b) of this section shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both, if the violation is related to transporting a controlled substance by aircraft or aiding or facilitating a controlled substance violation and the transporting, aiding, or facilitating—

(A) is punishable by death or imprisonment of more than one year under a law of the United States or a State; or

(B) provided is related to an act punishable by death or imprisonment for more than one year under a law of the United States or a State related to a controlled substance (except a law related to simple possession of a controlled substance).

(3) A term of imprisonment imposed under paragraph (2) of this subsection shall be served in addition to, and not concurrently with, any other term of imprisonment imposed on the individual.

(d)(1) The Administrator of Drug Enforcement or the Secretary of the Treasury may seize and forfeit under the customs laws an aircraft whose use is related to a violation of subsection (b) of this section, or to aid or facilitate a violation, regardless of whether a person is charged with the violation.

(2) An aircraft's use is presumed to have been related to a violation of, or to aid or facilitate a violation of—

(A) subsection (b)(1) of this section if the registration for the aircraft has been forged or changed;

(B) subsection (b)(3) of this section if there is an external display of false or misleading registration numbers or country of registration;

(C) subsection (b)(4) of this section if—

(i) the aircraft is registered to a false or fictitious person; or

(ii) the application form used to obtain the aircraft registration certificate contains a material false statement;

(D) subsection (b)(5) of this section if the aircraft was operated when it was not registered under section 44103 of this title; or

(E) subsection (b)(9) of this section if the aircraft has a fuel tank or fuel system that was installed or changed—

(i) in violation of a regulation or requirement of the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration; or

(ii) if a certificate required to be issued for the installation or change is not carried on the aircraft.

(3) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, the Administrator of Drug Enforcement, and the Secretary shall agree to a memorandum of understanding to establish procedures to carry out this subsection.

(e) This part does not prevent a State from establishing a criminal penalty, including providing for forfeiture and seizure of aircraft, for a person that—

(1) knowingly and willfully forges or changes an aircraft registration certificate;

(2) knowingly sells, uses, attempts to use, or possesses with the intent to use, a fraudulent aircraft registration certificate;

(3) knowingly and willfully displays or has displayed on an aircraft a mark that is false or misleading about the nationality or registration of the aircraft; or

(4) obtains an aircraft registration certificate from the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration by—

(A) knowingly and willfully falsifying or concealing a material fact;

(B) making a false, fictitious, or fraudulent statement; or

(C) making or using a false document knowing it contains a false, fictitious, or fraudulent statement or entry.

§ 46307. Violation of national defense airspace

A person that knowingly or willfully violates section 40103(b)(3) of this title or a regulation prescribed or order issued under section 40103(b)(3) shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

§ 46308. Interference with air navigation

A person shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both, if the person—

(1) with intent to interfere with air navigation in the United States, exhibits in the United States a light or signal at a place or in a way likely to be mistaken for a true light or signal established under this part or for a true light or signal used at an air navigation facility;

(2) after a warning from the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, continues to maintain a misleading light or signal; or

(3) knowingly interferes with the operation of a true light or signal.

§ 46309. Rate and concession violations

(a) An air carrier, foreign air carrier, ticket agent, or officer, agent, or employee of an air carrier, foreign air carrier, or ticket agent shall be fined under title 18 if the air carrier, foreign air carrier, ticket agent, officer, agent, or employee—

(1) knowingly and willfully offers, grants, or gives, or has offered, granted, or given, a rebate or other concession in violation of this part; or

(2) by any means knowingly and willfully assists, or willingly allows, a person to obtain transportation or services subject to this part at less than the rate lawfully in effect.

(b) A person shall be fined under title 18 if the person by any means—

(1) knowingly and willfully solicits, accepts, or receives a rebate of a part of a rate lawfully in effect for the foreign air transportation of property, or a service related to the foreign air transportation; or

(2) knowingly solicits, accepts, or receives a privilege or facility related to a matter the Secretary of Transportation requires be specified in a currently effective tariff applicable to the foreign air transportation of property.

§ 46310. Reporting and record keeping violations

(a) An air carrier or an officer, agent, or employee of an air carrier shall be fined under title 18 for intentionally—

(1) failing to make a report or keep a record under this part;

(2) falsifying, mutilating, or changing a report or record under this part; or

(3) filing a false report or record under this part.

(b) An air carrier or an officer, agent, or employee of an air carrier shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both, for intentionally falsifying or concealing a material fact, or inducing reliance on a false statement of material fact, in a report or record under section 44701(a) or (b) or 44702–44716 of this title.

§ 46311. Unlawful disclosure of information

(a) The Secretary of Transportation, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator, or an officer or employee of the Secretary or Administrator shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 2 years, or both, if the Secretary, Administrator, officer, or employee knowingly and willfully discloses information that—

(1) the Secretary, Administrator, officer, or employee acquires when inspecting the records of an air carrier; or

(2) is withheld from public disclosure under section 40112 of this title.

(b) Subsection (a) of this section does not apply if—

(1) the officer or employee is directed by the Secretary or Administrator to disclose information that the Secretary or Administrator had ordered withheld; or

(2) the Secretary, Administrator, officer, or employee is directed by a court to disclose the information.

(c) This section does not authorize the Secretary or Administrator to withhold information from a committee of Congress authorized to have the information.

§ 46312. Transporting hazardous material

A person shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both, if the person, in violation of a regulation o requirement related to the transportation o hazardous material prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation under this part—

(1) willfully delivers, or has delivered, property containing hazardous material t an air carrier or to an operator of a civi aircraft for transportation in air commerce or

(2) recklessly causes the transportation i air commerce of the property.

§ 46313. Refusing to appear or produce records

A person not obeying a subpena or requirement of the Secretary of Transportatio (and the Administrator of the Federal Avia tion Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) to appear and testify or produce records shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

§ 46314. Entering aircraft or airport area in violation of security requirements

(a) A person may not knowingly and willfully enter, in violation of security requirements prescribed under section 44901 or 44903(a), (b), (c), (e), (f), or (g) of this title, an aircraft or an airport area that serves an air carrier or foreign air carrier.

(b)(1) A person violating subsection (a) of this section shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

(2) A person violating subsection (a) of this section with intent to commit, in the aircraft or airport area, a felony under a law of the United States or a State shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 10 years, or both.

§ 46315. Lighting violations involving transporting controlled substances by aircraft not providing air transportation

(a) This section applies only to aircraft not used to provide air transportation.

(b) A person shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both, if—

(1) the person knowingly and willfully operates an aircraft in violation of a regulation or requirement of the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration related to the display of navigation or anticollision lights;

(2) the person is knowingly transporting a controlled substance by aircraft or aiding or facilitating a controlled substance offense; and

(3) the transporting, aiding, or facilitating—

(A) is punishable by death or imprisonment for more than one year under a law of the United States or a State; or

(B) is provided in connection with an act punishable by death or imprisonment for more than one year under a law of the United States or a State related to a controlled substance (except a law related to simple possession of a controlled substance).

§ 46316. General criminal penalty when specific penalty not provided

(a) Except as provided by subsection (b) of this section, when another criminal penalty is not provided under this chapter, a person that knowingly and willfully violates this part, a regulation prescribed or order issued by the Secretary of Transportation (and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) under this part, or any term of a certificate or permit issued under section 41102, 41103, or 41302 of this title shall be fined under title 18. A separate violation occurs for each day the violation continues.

(b) Subsection (a) of this section does not apply to chapter 401 (except sections 40103(a) and (d), 40105, and 40113), chapter 441 (except section 44109), and chapter 445 (except section 44506), and sections 44701(a) and (b), 44702–44716, 44901, and 44903(a)–(c) and (e)–(g) of this title.

§ 46317. Civil penalty assessment demonstration project

(a)(1) After notice and an opportunity for a hearing on the record under section 554 of title 5, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may impose a civil penalty for a violation of subpart III of this part or a regulation prescribed or order issued under subpart III. The Administrator shall give written notice of the finding of a violation and the penalty.

(2) The maximum penalty the Administrator may impose under this subsection in any case is $50,000.

(b) In a civil action to collect a penalty imposed under subsection (a) of this section, the issues of liability and amount of the penalty may not be reexamined.

(c) Notwithstanding subsection (a)(1) of this section, the district courts of the United States have exclusive jurisdiction of a civil action the Administrator brings for a civil penalty if—

(1) the amount in controversy is more than $50,000;

(2) the action is in rem or another action in rem based on the same violation has been brought;

(3) the action involves an aircraft subject to a lien that has been seized by the United States Government; or

(4) another action has been brought for an injunction based on the same violation.

(d) This section—

(1) applies only to a civil penalty initiated after December 30, 1987; and

(2) is effective only through August 1, 1992.

CHAPTER 465—SPECIAL AIRCRAFT JURISDICTION OF THE UNITED STATES

Sec.
46501. Definitions.
46502. Aircraft piracy.
46503. Death penalty sentencing procedure for aircraft piracy.
46504. Interference with flight crew members and attendants.
46505. Carrying a weapon or explosive on an aircraft.
46506. Application of certain criminal laws to acts on aircraft.
46507. False information and threats.

In this chapter—

(1) "aircraft in flight" means an aircraft from the moment all external doors are closed following boarding—

(A) through the moment when one external door is opened to allow passengers to leave the aircraft; or

(B) until, if a forced landing, appropriate authorities take over responsibility for the aircraft and individuals and property on the aircraft.

(2) "special aircraft jurisdiction of the United States" includes any of the following aircraft in flight:

(A) a civil aircraft of the United States.

(B) an aircraft of the armed forces.

(C) another aircraft in the United States.

(D) another aircraft outside the United States—

(i) that has its next scheduled destination or last place of departure in the United States, if the aircraft next lands in the United States;

(ii) on which an individual commits an offense (as defined in the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft) if the aircraft lands in the United States with the individual still on the aircraft; or

(iii) against which an individual commits an offense (as defined in subsection (d) or (e) of article I, section I of the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation) if the aircraft lands in the United States with the individual still on the aircraft.

(E) any other aircraft leased without crew to a lessee whose principal place of business is in the United States or, if the lessee does not have a principal place of business, whose permanent residence is in the United States.

(3) an individual commits an offense (as defined in the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft) when the individual, when on an aircraft in flight—

(A) by any form of intimidation, unlawfully seizes, exercises control of, or attempts to seize or exercise control of, the aircraft; or

(B) is an accomplice of an individual referred to in subclause (A) of this clause.

§ 46502. Aircraft piracy

(A) "aircraft piracy" means seizing or exercising control of an aircraft in the special aircraft jurisdiction of the United States by force, violence, threat of force or violence, or any form of intimidation, and with wrongful intent.

(B) an attempt to commit aircraft piracy is in the special aircraft jurisdiction of the United States although the aircraft is not in flight at the time of the attempt if the aircraft would have been in the special aircraft jurisdiction of the United States had the aircraft piracy been completed.

(2) An individual committing or attempting to commit aircraft piracy—

(A) shall be imprisoned for at least 20 years; or

(B) if the death of another individual results from the commission or attempt, shall be put to death or imprisoned for life.

(b)(1) An individual committing an offense (as defined in the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft) on an aircraft in flight outside the special aircraft jurisdiction of the United States and later found in the United States—

(A) shall be imprisoned for at least 20 years; or

(B) if the death of another individual results from the commission or attempt, shall be put to death or imprisoned for life.

(2) This subsection applies only if the place of takeoff or landing of the aircraft on which the individual commits the offense is located outside the territory of the country of registration of the aircraft.

§ 46503. Death penalty sentencing procedure for aircraft piracy

(a) An individual convicted of violating section 46502 of this title may not be sentenced to death if the United States Government stipulates that at least one of the mitigating factors specified in subsection (c)(1) of this section exists or none of the aggravating factors specified in subsection (c)(2) of this section exists. If the Government does not stipulate, the judge presiding at the trial or accepting the guilty plea of the individual shall hold a separate hearing to decide on the punishment to be imposed.

(b)(1) The hearing under this section shall be conducted—

(A) before the jury that found the defendant guilty;

(B) before a jury impaneled for the hearing when—

(i) the defendant was convicted by a guilty plea;

(ii) the defendant was convicted by a judge without a jury; or

(iii) the jury finding the defendant guilty was discharged by the judge for good cause; or

(C) before the judge, on motion of the defendant and with the approval of the judge and the Government.

(2) At the hearing, the judge shall disclose to the defendant or counsel for the defendant all material contained in any presentence report, except material the judge decides is required to be withheld to protect human life or national security. Presentence information withheld from the defendant may not be considered in deciding whether the factors specified in subsection (c) of this section exist.

(3) Information relevant to the mitigating factors specified in subsection (c)(1) of this section may be presented by the Government or the defendant without regard to the rules governing the admissibility of evidence at criminal trials. The burden of establishing the existence of a mitigating factor specified in subsection (c)(1) is on the defendant.

(4) Information relevant to the aggravating factors specified in subsection (c)(2) of this section is admissible only under rules governing the admissibility of evidence at criminal trials. The burden of establishing the existence of an aggravating factor specified in subsection (c)(2) is on the Government.

(5) The Government and the defendant may rebut information presented at the hearing. They shall be given an opportunity to present arguments on the adequacy of the information to establish the existence of the factors specified in subsection (c) of this section.

(c)(1) The judge may not impose the death penalty on a defendant if the jury or, if there is no jury, the judge finds under this section that at the time of the violation of section 46502 of this title—

(A) the defendant was not yet 18 years of age;

(B) the capacity of the defendant to appreciate the wrongfulness of the defendant's conduct or to conform the defendant's conduct to the requirements of law was impaired significantly, but the capacity was not impaired sufficiently to be a defense to prosecution;

(C) the defendant was under unusual and substantial duress, but the duress was not sufficient to be a defense to prosecution;

(D) the defendant was a principal (as defined in section 2(a) of title 18) in a violation committed by another individual, but the participation of the defendant was relatively minor, although not sufficiently minor to be a defense to prosecution; or

(E) the defendant reasonably could not have foreseen that the conduct of the defendant in the violation would cause or create a grave risk of causing death to another individual.

(2) If none of the factors specified in paragraph (1) of this subsection exists, the judge may impose the death penalty on the defendant only if the jury or, if there is no jury, the judge finds under this section that—

(A) the death of another individual resulted from the violation after the defendant had seized or exercised control of the aircraft; or

(B) the death of another individual resulted from the violation and—

(i) the defendant has been convicted of another United States or State offense (committed before or at the time of the violation) for which punishment of life imprisonment or death could be imposed;

(ii) the defendant has been convicted of at least 2 United States or State offenses with a penalty of more than one year of imprisonment (committed on different occasions before the time of the violation) that involved inflicting serious bodily injury on another individual;

(iii) in committing the violation, the defendant knowingly created a grave risk of death to an individual in addition to the individual whose death resulted from the violation; or

(iv) the defendant committed the violation in an especially heinous, cruel, or depraved manner.

(d)(1) If the jury or, if there is no jury, the judge finds by a preponderance of the information that none of the mitigating factors specified in subsection (c)(1) of this section exists and that at least one of the aggravating factors specified in subsection (c)(2) of this section exists, the judge shall impose the death penalty on the defendant. If the jury or judge finds that at least one of the mitigating factors specified in subsection (c)(1) exists, or that none of the aggravating factors specified in subsection (c)(2) exists, the judge may not impose the death penalty on the defendant but shall impose another penalty provided for the defendant's violation of section 46502 of this title.

(2) The jury or, if there is no jury, the judge shall return a special verdict containing findings on whether each of the factors specified in subsection (c) of this section exists.

§ 46504. Interference with flight crew members and attendants

An individual on an aircraft in the special aircraft jurisdiction of the United States who, by assaulting or intimidating a flight crew member or flight attendant of the aircraft, interferes with the performance of the duties of the member or attendant or lessens the ability of the member or attendant to perform those duties, shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 20 years, or both. However, if a dangerous weapon is used in assaulting or intimidating the member or attendant, the individual shall be imprisoned for any term of years or for life.

§ 46505. Carrying a weapon or explosive on an aircraft

(a) In this section, "loaded firearm" means a starter gun or a weapon designed or converted to expel a projectile through an explosive, that has a cartridge, a detonator, or powder in the chamber, magazine, cylinder, or clip.

(b) An individual shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than one year, or both, if the individual—

(1) when on, or attempting to board, an aircraft in, or intended for operation in, air transportation or intrastate air transportation, has on or about the individual or the property of the individual a concealed dangerous weapon that is or would be accessible to the individual in flight;

(2) has placed, attempted to place, or attempted to have placed a loaded firearm on that aircraft in property not accessible to passengers in flight; or

(3) has on or about the individual, or has placed, attempted to place, or attempted to have placed on that aircraft, an explosive or incendiary device.

(c) An individual who willfully and without regard for the safety of human life, or with reckless disregard for the safety of human life, violates subsection (b) of this section, shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both.

(d) Subsection (b)(1) of this section does not apply to—

(1) a law enforcement officer of a State or political subdivision of a State, or an officer or employee of the United States Government, authorized to carry arms in an official capacity;

(2) another individual the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration by regulation authorizes to carry a dangerous weapon in air transportation or intrastate air transportation; or

(3) an individual transporting a weapon (except a loaded firearm) in baggage not accessible to a passenger in flight if the air carrier was informed of the presence of the weapon.

§ 46506. Application of certain criminal laws to acts on aircraft

An individual on an aircraft in the special aircraft jurisdiction of the United States who commits an act that—

(1) if committed in the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States (as defined in section 7 of title 18 would violate section 113, 114, 661, 662, 1111, 1112, 1113, or 2111 or chapter 109A o title 18, shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned under that section or chapter, or both or

(2) if committed in the District of Columbia would violate section 9 of the Act of July 29, 1892 (D.C. Code § 22-1112), shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned under section 9 o that Act, or both.

§ 46507. False information and threats

An individual shall be fined under title 18 imprisoned for not more than 5 years, o both, if the individual—

(1) knowing the information to be false willfully and maliciously or with reckles disregard for the safety of human life, gives or causes to be given, under circumstance in which the information reasonably may b believed, false information about an allege attempt being made or to be made to do a act that would violate section 46502(a 46504, 46505, or 46506 of this title; or

(2)(A) threatens to violate sectio 46502(a), 46504, 46505, or 46506 of this title or causes a threat to violate any of those sections to be made; and

(B) appears ready and willing to carry ou the threat.

SUBCHAPTER I—AIRPORT IMPROVEMENT

§ 47101. Policies

(a) It is the policy of the United States Government—

(1) that the safe operation of the airport and airway system is the highest aviation priority;

(2) that aviation facilities be constructed and operated to minimize current and projected noise impact on nearby communities;

(3) to give special emphasis to developing reliever airports;

(4) that appropriate provisions should be made to make the development and enhancement of cargo hub airports easier;

(5) to encourage the development of transportation systems that use various modes of transportation in a way that will serve the States and local communities efficiently and effectively;

(6) that airport development projects under this subchapter provide for the protection and enhancement of natural resources and the quality of the environment of the United States;

(7) that airport construction and improvement projects that increase the capacity of facilities to accommodate passenger and property traffic, so that safety and efficiency increase and delays decrease, be undertaken to the maximum feasible extent;

(8) to ensure that nonaviation usage of the navigable airspace be accommodated but not allowed to decrease the safety and capacity of the airspace and airport system; and

(9) that artificial restrictions on airport capacity should be imposed to alleviate air traffic delays only after other reasonably available and less burdensome alternatives have been tried.

(b) Each airport and airway program should be carried out consistently with section 40101(a), (b), and (d) of this title to foster competition, prevent unfair methods of competition in air transportation, maintain essential air transportation, and prevent unjust and discriminatory practices.

(c) This subchapter should be carried out to provide adequate navigation aids and airport facilities for places at which scheduled commercial air service is provided. The facilities provided may include—

(1) reliever airports; and

(2) heliports designated by the Secretary of Transportation to relieve congestion at commercial service airports by diverting aircraft passengers from fixed-wing aircraft to helicopter carriers.

(d) This subchapter should be carried out consistently with a comprehensive airspace system plan, giving highest priority to commercial service airports, to maximize the use of safety facilities with the objective of installing, operating, and maintaining, to the extent possible with available money and considering other safety needs—

(1) electronic or visual vertical guidance on each runway;

(2) grooving or friction treatment of each primary and secondary runway;

(3) a precision approach system, a vertical visual guidance system, and a full approach light system for each primary runway;

(4) a nonprecision instrument approach for each secondary runway;

(5) runway end identifier lights on each runway that does not have an approach light system;

(6) distance-to-go signs for each primary and secondary runway;

(7) a surface movement radar system at each category III airport;

(8) a taxiway lighting and sign system; and

(9) runway edge lighting and marking and radar approach coverage for each airport terminal area.

(e) To carry out the policy of subsection (a)(5) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall cooperate with State and local officials in developing airport plans and programs that are based on overall transportation needs. The airport plans and programs shall be developed in coordination with other transportation planning and with consideration given to comprehensive long-range land-use plans and overall social, economic, environmental, system performance, and energy conservation objectives. The process of developing airport plans and programs shall be continuing, cooperative, and comprehensive to the degree appropriate considering the complexity of the transportation problems.

(f) To carry out the policy of subsection (a)(6) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall consult with the Secretary of the Interior and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency about any project included in a project grant application involving a major runway extension or the location of an airport or runway that may have a significant effect on—

(1) natural resources, including fish and wildlife;

(2) natural, scenic, and recreation assets;

(3) water and air quality; or

(4) another factor affecting the environment.

§ 47102. Definitions

In this subchapter—

(1) "air carrier airport" means a public airport regularly served by—

(A) an air carrier certificated by the Secretary of Transportation under section 41102 of this title (except a charter air carrier); or

(B) at least one air carrier—

(i) operating under an exemption from section 41101(a)(1) of this title granted by the Secretary; and

(ii) having at least 2,500 passenger boardings at the airport during the prior calendar year.

(2) "airport"—

(A) means—

(i) an area of land or water used or intended to be used for the landing and taking off of aircraft;

(ii) an appurtenant area used or intended to be used for airport buildings or other airport facilities or rights of way; and

(iii) airport buildings and facilities located in any of those areas; and

(B) includes a heliport.

(3) "airport development" means the following activities, if undertaken by the sponsor, owner, or operator of a public-use airport:

(A) constructing, repairing, or improving a public-use airport, including—

(i) removing, relocating, marking, lighting, and otherwise mitigating an airport hazard; and

(ii) preparing a plan or specification, including carrying out a field investigation.

(B) acquiring for, or installing at, a public-use airport—

(i) a navigation aid or another aid (including a precision approach system) used by aircraft for landing at or taking off from the airport, including preparing the site as required by the acquisition or installation;

(ii) safety or security equipment the Secretary requires by regulation for, or approves as contributing significantly to, the safety or security of individuals and property at the airport;

(iii) equipment to remove snow, to measure runway surface friction, or for aviation-related weather reporting; and

(iv) fire fighting and rescue equipment at an airport that serves scheduled passenger operations of air carrier aircraft designed for more than 20 passenger seats.

(C) acquiring a property interest in land or airspace, including land for future airport development, that is needed—

(i) to carry out airport development described in subclause (A) or (B) of this clause; or

(ii) to remove or mitigate an existing airport hazard or prevent or limit the creation of a new airport hazard.

(4) "airport hazard" means a structure or object of natural growth located on or near a public-use airport, or a use of land near the airport, that obstructs or is hazardous to the landing or taking off of aircraft at or from the airport.

(5) "airport planning" means planning as defined by regulations the Secretary prescribes and includes integrated airport system planning.

(6) "amount made available under section 47703 of this title" means the amount authorized for grants under section 47703 of this title as reduced by any law enacted after September 3, 1982.

(7) "commercial service airport" means a public airport in a State that, as determined by the Secretary, has at least 2,500 passenger boardings each year and is receiving scheduled passenger aircraft service.

(8) "integrated airport system planning" means developing for planning purposes information and guidance to decide the extent, kind, location, and timing of airport development needed in a specific area to establish a viable, balanced, and integrated system of public-use airports, including—

(A) identifying system needs;

(B) developing an estimate of systemwide development costs;

(C) conducting studies, surveys, and other planning actions, including those related to airport access, needed to decide which aeronautical needs should be met by a system of airports; and

(D) prescribing State standards, except standards for safety of approaches, for airport development at nonprimary public-use airports.

(9) "landed weight" means the weight of aircraft transporting only property (including mail) in intrastate, interstate, and foreign air transportation, as determined by the Secretary under regulations the Secretary prescribes.

(10) "passenger boardings"—

(A) means revenue passenger boardings on an aircraft in service in air commerce as determined by the Secretary under regulations the Secretary prescribes; and

(B) includes passengers who continue on an aircraft in international flight stopping at an airport in the 48 contiguous States for a nontraffic purpose.

(11) "primary airport" means a commercial service airport determined by the Secretary to have more than 10,000 passenger boardings each year.

(12) "project" means a project (or separate projects included in one project grant application or all projects to be undertaken at an airport in a fiscal year) to achieve airport development or airport planning.

(13) "project cost" means a cost involved in carrying out a project.

(14) "project grant" means a grant of money by the Secretary to a grant applicant to carry out at least one project.

(15) "public agency" means—

(A) a State or political subdivision of a State;

(B) a tax-supported organization; or

(C) an Indian tribe or pueblo.

(16) "public airport" means an airport—

(A) used or intended to be used for public purposes;

(B) under the control of a public agency; and

(C) for which the area used or intended to be used for the landing, taking off, or surface maneuvering of aircraft is publicly owned.

(17) "public-use airport" means an airport used or to be used for public purposes that is—

(A) a public airport;

(B) a privately-owned reliever airport; or

(C) a privately-owned airport in a State that, as determined by the Secretary, has at least 2,500 passenger boardings each year and is receiving scheduled passenger aircraft service.

(18) "reliever airport" means an airport designated by the Secretary to relieve congestion at a commercial service airport and to provide more general aviation access to the overall community.

(19) "sponsor" means—

(A) a public agency that submits to the Secretary under this subchapter an application for financial assistance; and

(B) a private owner of a public-use airport that submits to the Secretary under this subchapter an application for financial assistance for the airport.

(20) "State" means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and Guam.

§ 47103. National plan of integrated airport systems

(a) The Secretary of Transportation shall maintain the plan for developing public-use airports in the United States named "the national plan of integrated airport systems". The plan shall include the kind and estimated cost of eligible airport development the Secretary of Transportation considers necessary to provide a safe, efficient, and integrated system of public-use airports adequate to anticipate and meet the needs of civil aeronautics, to meet the national defense requirements of the Secretary of Defense, and to meet identified needs of the United States Postal Service. Airport development included in the plan may not be limited to meeting the needs of any particular classes or categories of public-use airports. In maintaining the plan, the Secretary of Transportation shall consider the needs of each segment of civil aviation and the relationship of each airport to—

(1) the rest of the transportation system in the particular area;

(2) forecasted technological developments in aeronautics; and

(3) forecasted developments in other modes of intercity transportation.

(b) In maintaining the plan, the Secretary of Transportation shall—

(1) to the extent possible and as appropriate, consult with departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government, with public agencies, and with the aviation community;

(2) consider tall structures that reduce safety or airport capacity; and

(3) make every reasonable effort to address the needs of air cargo operations, STOL/VSTOL aircraft operations, and rotary wing aircraft operations.

(c) To the extent possible, the Secretary of Defense shall make domestic military airports available for civil use. In advising the Secretary of Transportation under subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary of Defense shall indicate the extent to which domestic military airports are available for civil use.

(d) The Secretary of Transportation shall publish the status of the plan every 2 years.

§ 47104. Project grants authorized

(a) To maintain a safe and efficient nationwide system of public-use airports that meets the present and future needs of civil aeronautics, the Secretary of Transportation may make project grants under this subchapter from the Airport and Airway Trust Fund.

(b) The Secretary may incur obligations to make grants from amounts made available under section 47703 of this title as soon as the amounts are apportioned under section 47114(c) and (d)(2) of this title.

(c) After September 30, 1987, the Secretary may not incur obligations under subsection (b) of this section, except for obligations of amounts remaining available after that date under section 47116(b) of this title.

§ 47105. Applying for project grants

(a)(1) An application for a project grant under this subchapter may be submitted to the Secretary of Transportation by—

(A) a public agency or at least 2 public agencies acting jointly;

(B) a private owner of a public-use airport or at least 2 private owners of a public-use airport acting jointly;

(C) a private owner of a public-use airport and a public agency sponsoring the airport acting jointly; or

(D) a State, as the only applicant, for a project benefitting at least 2 airports in the State or for airport planning for similar projects at at least 2 airports in the State if—

(i) each airport owner and operator gives written consent that the State be the applicant;

(ii) the Secretary is satisfied there is administrative merit and aeronautical benefit in the State being the applicant; and

(iii) an acceptable agreement exists that ensures the State will comply with appropriate grant conditions and other assurances the Secretary requires.

(2) Before deciding to undertake an airport development project at an airport under this subchapter, a public agency or a private owner of a public-use airport shall consult with the airport users that will b affected by the project.

(3) This subsection does not authorize public agency that is subject to the laws of State to apply for a project grant in viola tion of a law of the State.

(b) An application for a project gran
under this subchapter—

(1) shall describe the project proposed t be undertaken;

(2) may propose a project only for public-use airport included in the curren national plan of integrated airport system

(3) may propose airport development onl if the development complies with standard prescribed or approved by the Secretary, in cluding standards for site location, airpor layout, site preparation, paving, lighting and safety of approaches; and

(4) shall be in the form and contain othe information the Secretary prescribes.

(c) The Secretary may approve standard (except standards for safety of approaches prescribed by a State for airport develop ment at nonprimary public-use airports i the State. On approval under this subsec tion, a State's standards apply to the non primary public-use airports in the State in stead of the comparable standards pr scribed by the Secretary under subsectio
(b)(3) of this section. The Secretary or th State (with the approval of the Secretary may revise standards approved under thi subsection.

(d) The Secretary may require an appl cant for a project grant to certify that th applicant will comply with this subchapte in carrying out the project. If the Secretar accepts the certification, the Secretary ma rescind the acceptance at any time. Th subsection does not affect an obligation o responsibility of the Secretary under a other law of the United States.

(e) The sponsor of an airport for which a amount is apportioned under sectio
47114(c) of this title shall give notice to th
Secretary of the fiscal year in which, b project grant application, the sponsor in tends to apply for the amount. The notic shall be given by the time and contain th
information the Secretary prescribes.

§ 47106. Project grant application approval cond tioned on satisfaction of project requirements

(a) The Secretary of Transportation ma approve an application under this subcha ter for a project grant for an airport only the Secretary is satisfied that—

(1) the project is consistent with plans (e isting at the time the project is approved) public agencies authorized by the State which the airport is located to plan for t development of the area surrounding t
airport;

(2) the project will contribute to carryin out this subchapter;

(3) enough money is available to pay t share of the project costs that will not paid by the United States Governme
under this subchapter;

(4) the project will be completed witho unreasonable delay; and

(5) the applicant has authority to car out the project as proposed.

(b) The Secretary may approve an applic tion under this subchapter for an airport d velopment project grant for an airport on if the Secretary is satisfied that—

(1) the applicant, a public agency, or t
Government holds good title to the areas the airport used or intended to be used the landing, taking off, or surface maneuv ing of aircraft, or that good title will be quired;

(2) the interests of the community in or near which the project may be located have been given fair consideration; and

(3) the application provides touchdown zone and centerline runway lighting, high intensity runway lighting, or land necessary for installing approach light systems that the Secretary, considering the category of the airport and the kind and volume of traffic using it, decides is necessary for safe and efficient use of the airport by aircraft.

(c) The Secretary may approve an application under this subchapter for a grant for an airport development project involving a major runway extension or the location of an airport or runway, found to have a significant adverse effect on natural resources, including fish and wildlife, natural, scenic, and recreation assets, water and air quality, or another factor affecting the environment, only after deciding that a possible and prudent alternative to the project does not exist and that every reasonable step has been taken to minimize the adverse effect. The Secretary may make that decision only after completely reviewing the matter. The review and decision must be made a matter of public record.

(d) The Secretary may approve an application under this subchapter for a grant for an airport development project involving the location of an airport, airport runway, or major runway extension only if the applicant certifies to the Secretary that an opportunity for a public hearing was given to consider the economic, social, and environmental effects of the location and its consistency with the objectives of any planning that has been carried out by the community. At the Secretary's request, the applicant shall give the Secretary a copy of the transcript of any hearing held.

(e)(1) The Secretary may approve an application under this subchapter for an airport development project involving a major runway extension or the location of an airport or runway only if the chief executive officer of the State in which the project will be located certifies in writing to the Secretary that there is reasonable assurance that the project will be located, designed, constructed, and operated in compliance with applicable air and water quality standards. However, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall make the certification instead of the chief executive officer if—

(A) the State has not approved any applicable standards; and

(B) the Administrator has prescribed applicable standards.

(2) Notice of certification or of refusal to certify shall be provided to the Secretary not later than 60 days after the Secretary receives the application.

(3) The Secretary shall condition approval of the application on compliance with the applicable standards during construction and operation.

(f) The Secretary may approve an application under this subchapter for an airport development project (except a project involving a major runway extension or the location of an airport or runway) at an existing airport without requiring an environmental impact statement related to noise for the project if—

(1) completing the project would allow an aircraft complying with the noise standards prescribed for "stage 2" aircraft in section 36.1 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, to replace an aircraft that does not comply with those standards in operations at the airport; and

(2) the project meets the other requirements under this subchapter.

(g)(1) In this subsection, "general aviation airport" means a public airport that is not an air carrier airport.

(2) The Secretary may approve an application under this subchapter for a grant for an airport development project involving the construction or extension of a runway at a general aviation airport located on both sides of a boundary line separating 2 counties within a State only if, before the application is submitted to the Secretary, the project is approved by the governing body of each village incorporated under the laws of the State and located entirely within 5 miles of the airport.

(h)(1) The Secretary may withhold approval of an application under this subchapter for amounts apportioned under section 47114(c) and (e) of this title for violating an assurance or requirement of this subchapter only if—

(A) the Secretary provides the applicant an opportunity for a proceeding; and

(B) not later than 180 days after the later of the date of the application or the date the Secretary discovers the noncompliance, the Secretary decides a violation has occurred.

(2) The 180-day period may be extended by—

(A) agreement between the Secretary and the applicant; or

(B) the hearing officer if the officer decides an extension is necessary because the applicant did not follow the schedule the officer established.

(3) A person adversely affected by an order of the Secretary withholding approval may apply for review of the order by filing a petition in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit or in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the project is located. The action must be brought not later than 60 days after the order is served on the petitioner.

§ 47107. Project grant application approval conditioned on assurances about airport operations

(a) The Secretary of Transportation may approve an application under this subchapter for an airport development project grant for an airport only if the Secretary receives written assurances, satisfactory to the Secretary, that—

(1) the airport will be available for public use on reasonable conditions and without unreasonable discrimination;

(2) air carriers making similar use of the airport will be subject to substantially similar charges for facilities directly and substantially related to providing air transportation, regulations, and conditions, except for differences based on reasonable classifications such as—

(A) tenants or nontenants; and

(B) signatory and nonsignatory carriers;

(3) the airport operator will not withhold unreasonably the classification or status of tenant or signatory from an air carrier that assumes obligations substantially similar to those already imposed on air carriers of that classification or status;

(4) fixed-base operators similarly using the airport will be subject to the same charges;

(5) an air carrier using the airport may service itself or use any fixed-base operator allowed by the airport operator to service air carriers at the airport;

(6) a person providing, or intending to provide, aeronautical services to the public will not be given an exclusive right to use the airport, except as provided in subsection (f) of this section;

(7) the airport will be operated and maintained suitably, with consideration given to climatic and flood conditions;

(8) a proposal to close the airport temporarily for a nonaeronautical purpose must first be approved by the Secretary;

(9) appropriate action will be taken to ensure that terminal airspace required to protect instrument and visual operations to the airport (including established minimum flight altitudes) will be cleared and protected by mitigating existing airport hazards and by preventing the establishment of new airport hazards;

(10) appropriate action, including the adoption of zoning laws, has been or will be taken to restrict the use of land next to or near the airport to uses that are compatible with normal airport operations;

(11) each of the airport's facilities developed with financial assistance from the United States Government and each of the airport's facilities usable for the landing and taking off of aircraft always will be available without charge for use by Government aircraft, except that if the use is substantial, the Government may be charged a reasonable share, proportionate to the use, of the cost of operating and maintaining the facility;

(12) the airport owner or operator will provide, without charge to the Government, property interests of the applicant in land or water areas or buildings that the Secretary decides are desirable for, and that will be used for, constructing at Government expense, facilities for carrying out activities related to air traffic control and navigation;

(13) the airport owner or operator will maintain a schedule of charges for use of facilities and services at the airport—

(A) that will make the airport as self-sustaining as possible under the circumstances existing at the airport, including volume of traffic and economy of collection; and

(B) without including in the rate base used for the charges the Government's share of costs for any project for which a grant is made under this subchapter;

(14) the project accounts and records will be kept using a standard system of accounting that the Secretary, after consulting with appropriate public agencies, prescribes;

(15) the airport owner or operator will submit any annual and special airport financial and operations reports to the Secretary that the Secretary reasonably requests;

(16) the airport owner or operator will maintain a layout plan of the airport that meets the following requirements:

(A) the plan will be in a form the Secretary prescribes;

(B) the Secretary will approve the plan and any change before the plan or change takes effect;

(C) the owner or operator will not make or allow any change in the airport or any of its facilities if the change does not comply with the plan as approved by the Secretary, and the Secretary believes the change may affect adversely the safety, use, or efficiency of the airport; and

(D) when a change in the airport or facility is made that the Secretary decides does not comply with the plan and adversely affects the safety, use, or efficiency of any property on or off the airport and owned, leased, or financed by the Government, the owner or operator, if requested by the Secretary, will—

(i) eliminate the adverse effect in a way the Secretary approves; or

(ii) bear all cost of relocating the property (or its replacement) to a site acceptable to the Secretary and of restoring the property (or its replacement) to the level of safety, use, efficiency, and cost of operation that existed before the change was made;

(17) each contract and subcontract for program manangement, construction management, planning studies, feasibility studies, architectural services, preliminary engineering, design, engineering, surveying, mapping, and related services will be awarded in the same way that a contract for architectural and engineering services is negotiated under title IX of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 541 et seq.) or an equivalent qualifications-based requirement prescribed for or by the applicant; and

(18) the airport and each airport record will be available for inspection by the Secretary on reasonable request.

(b)(1) The Secretary of Transportation may approve an application under this subchapter for an airport development project grant for a public airport only if the Secretary receives written assurances, satisfactory to the Secretary, that the revenues generated by the airport and local taxes on aviation fuel (except taxes in effect on December 30, 1987) will be expended for the capital or operating costs of—

(A) the airport;

(B) the local airport system; or

(C) other local facilities owned or operated by the airport owner or operator and directly and substantially related to transporting passengers or property by air.

(2) Paragraph (1) of this subsection does not apply if a provision enacted not later than September 2, 1982, in a law controlling the financing of the airport owner or operator, or a covenant or assurance in a debt obligation issued not later than September 2, 1982, by the owner or operator, provides that the revenues from any of the facilities of the owner or operator, including the airport, be used to support not only the airport but also the general debt obligations or other facilities of the owner or operator.

(3) This subsection does not prevent the use of a State tax on aviation fuel to support a State aviation program or the use of airport revenue on or off the airport for a noise mitigation purpose.

(c)(1) In this subsection, land is needed for an airport purpose (except a noise compatibility purpose) if—

(A)(i) the land may be needed for an aeronautical purpose (including runway protection zone) or serves as noise buffer land; and

(ii) revenue from interim uses of the land contributes to the financial self-sufficiency of the airport; and

(B) for land purchased with a grant the owner or operator received not later than December 30, 1987, the Secretary of Transportation or the department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government that made the grant was notified by the owner or operator of the use of the land and did not object to the use and the land is still being used for that purpose.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation may approve an application under this subchapter for an airport development project grant only if the Secretary receives written assurances, satisfactory to the Secretary, that if an airport owner or operator has received or will receive a grant for acquiring land and—

(A) if the land was or is acquired for a noise compatibility purpose—

(i) the owner or operator will dispose of the land at fair market value at the earliest practicable time after the land no longer is needed for a noise compatibility purpose;

(ii) the disposition will be subject to retaining or reserving an interest in the land necessary to ensure that the land will be used in a way that is compatible with noise levels associated with operating the airport; and

(iii) the part of the proceeds from disposing of the land that is proportionate to the Government share of the cost of acquiring the land will be paid to the Secretary for deposit in the Airport and Airway Trust Fund established under section 9502 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 9502) or, as the Secretary prescribes, reinvested in an approved noise compatibility project; or

(B) if the land was or is acquired for an airport purpose (except a noise compatibility purpose)—

(i) the owner or operator, when the land no longer is needed for an airport purpose, will dispose of the land at fair market value or make available to the Secretary an amount equal to the Government's proportionate share of the fair market value;

(ii) the disposition will be subject to retaining or reserving an interest in the land necessary to ensure that the land will be used in a way that is compatible with noise levels associated with operating the airport; and

(iii) the part of the proceeds from disposing of the land that is proportionate to the Government share of the cost of acquiring the land will be reinvested, on application to the Secretary, in another eligible airport development project the Secretary approves under this subchapter or paid to the Secretary for deposit in the Fund if another eligible project does not exist.

(d) The Secretary of Transportation may approve an application under this subchapter for an airport development project grant for a privately owned public-use airport only if the Secretary receives appropriate assurances that the airport will continue to function as a public-use airport during the economic life (that must be at least 10 years) of any facility at the airport that was developed with Government financial assistance under this subchapter.

(e) The Secretary of Transportation may approve an application under this subchapter for an airport development project grant for an airport only if the Secretary receives written assurances, satisfactory to the Secretary, that the airport owner or operator will take necessary action to ensure, to the maximum extent practicable, that at least 10 percent of all businesses at the airport selling consumer products to the public are small business concerns (as defined by the Secretary by regulation) owned and controlled by a socially and economically disadvantaged individual (as defined in section 47113(a) of this title).

(f) In subsection (a)(6) of this section, a right given to only one fixed-base operator to provide services at an airport is deemed not to be an exclusive right if—

(1) the right would be unreasonably costly, burdensome, or impractical for more than one fixed-base operator to provide the services; and

(2) allowing more than one fixed-base operator to provide the services would require reducing the space leased under an existing agreement between the one fixed-base operator and the airport owner or operator.

(g) An amount deposited in the Fund under—

(1) subsection (c)(2)(C)(i) of this section is available to the Secretary of Transportation to make a grant for airport development and airport planning under section 47104 of this title;

(2) subsection (c)(2)(C)(ii) of this sectio is available to the Secretary of Transporta tion—
(A) to make a grant for a purpose de scribed in section 47115(b) of this title; an
(B) for use under section 47114(d)(2) o this title at another airport in the State i which the land was disposed of under sul section (c)(2)(A)(ii) of this section; and
(3) subsection (c)(3)(C) of this section is i addition to an amount made available t the Secretary of Transportation under se tion 47703 of this title and not subject to a portionment under section 47114 of th title.
(h)(1) To ensure compliance with this se tion, the Secretary of Transportation—
(A) shall prescribe requirements for proje grant applicants that the Secretary consi ers necessary; and
(B) may make a contract with a publ agency.
(2) The Secretary of Transportation ma approve an application for a project gra only if the Secretary is satisfied that the r quirements prescribed under paragrap
(1)(A) of this subsection will be met.
(i) Before proposing to change an assu ance required of a person receiving a gra under this subchapter and in effect after D cember 29, 1987, or to require complian with an additional assurance from t person, the Secretary of Transportatio must—
(1) publish notice of the proposal in t
Federal Register; and
(2) provide an opportunity for comme on the proposal.
(j) When an applicant provides a proper interest in a land or water area or a buil ing that the Secretary of Transportati uses to construct a facility at Governme expense, the Secretary may relieve the app cant from an obligation in a contract ma under this chapter, the Airport and Airw Development Act of 1970, or the Federal A port Act to provide free space to the Gover ment in an airport building. The Secreta may relieve the applicant from the oblig tion to the extent the Secretary decides th the free space no longer is needed to car out activities related to air traffic cont and navigation.
(k)(1) In this subsection—
(A) "duty-free merchandise" and "du free sales enterprise" have the same mea ings given those terms in section 555(b)(8) the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1555(b)(8
(B) "highway" and "Federal-aid syste have the same meanings given those ter in section 101(a) of title 23.
(2) Notwithstanding subsection (b)(1)
this section, Hawaii may use, for a proj for construction or reconstruction of a hi way on a Federal-aid system that is more than 10 miles by road from an airp and that will facilitate access to the airp revenue from the sales at off-airport lo tions in Hawaii of duty-free merchand under a contract between Hawaii and duty-free sales enterprise. However, the re nue resulting during a Hawaiian fiscal y may be used only if the amount of the re ital projects for the airports (including terest and amortization of principal cos is more than 150 percent of the projec costs for the fiscal year.

(3)(A) Revenue from sales referred to paragraph (2) of this subsection in a Hau ian fiscal year that Hawaii may use n not be more than the amount that is greater than 150 percent as determined under paragraph (2).

(B) The maximum amount of revenue Hawaii may use under paragraph (2) of this subsection is $250,000,000.

(4) If a fee imposed or collected for rent, landing, or service from an aircraft operator by an airport Hawaii operates is increased during the period from May 4, 1990, through December 31, 1994, by more than the percentage change in the Consumer Price Index of All Urban Consumers for Honolulu, Hawaii, that the Secretary of Labor publishes during that period and if revenue derived from the fee increases because the fee increased, the amount under paragraph (3)(B) of this subsection shall be reduced by the amount of the projected revenue increase in the period less the part of the increase attributable to changes in the Index in the period.

(5) Hawaii shall determine costs, revenue, and projected revenue increases referred to in this subsection and shall submit the determinations to the Secretary of Transportation. A determination is approved unless the Secretary disapproves it not later than 30 days after it is submitted.

(6) Hawaii is not eligible for a grant under section 47115 of this title in a fiscal year in which Hawaii uses under paragraph (2) of this subsection revenue from sales referred to in paragraph (2). Hawaii shall repay amounts it receives in a fiscal year under a grant it is not eligible to receive because of this paragraph to the Secretary of Transportation for deposit in the discretionary fund established under section 47115.

(7)(A) This subsection applies only to revenue from sales referred to in paragraph (2) of this subsection from May 5, 1990, through December 30, 1994, and to amounts in the Airport Revenue Fund of Hawaii that are attributable to revenue before May 4, 1990, on sales referred to in paragraph (2).

(B) Revenue from sales referred to in paragraph (2) of this subsection from May 5, 1990, through December 30, 1994, may be used under paragraph (2) in any Hawaiian fiscal year, including a Hawaiian fiscal year beginning after December 31, 1994.

§ 47108. Project grant agreements

(a) On approving a project grant application under this subchapter, the Secretary of Transportation shall offer the applicant a grant to pay the United States Government's share of the project costs allowable under section 47109 of this title. The Secretary may impose terms on the offer that the Secretary considers necessary to carry out this subchapter and regulations prescribed under this subchapter. An offer shall state the obligations to be assumed by the applicant and the maximum amount the Government will pay for the project from the amounts authorized under chapter 477 of this title (except section 47706). At the request of the applicant, an offer of a grant for an airport project that will not be completed in one fiscal year shall obligate amounts apportioned or to be apportioned to a sponsor under section 47114(c) of this title for the fiscal years necessary to pay the Government share of the cost of the project. An offer that is accepted in writing by the applicant is a binding agreement between the Government and the applicant. The Government may pay or be obligated to pay a project cost only after a grant agreement for the project is signed.

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, when an offer has been accepted, the amount stated in the offer as the maximum amount the Government will pay for an airport development project receiving assistance under a grant approved under this subchapter or chapter 475 of this title may be increased by not more than 15 percent.

(2)(A) For a project receiving assistance under a grant approved under this subchapter before October 1, 1987, the amount may be increased—

(i) by not more than 10 percent for an airport development project, except a project for acquiring land; and

(ii) by not more than 50 percent of the total increase in allowable project costs attributable to acquiring an interest in land, based on current creditable appraisals.

(B) An increase under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph may be paid only from amounts the Government recovers from other grants made under this subchapter.

(c) For a project receiving assistance under a grant made under the Airport and Airway Development Act of 1970, the maximum amount the Government will pay may be increased by not more than 10 percent. An increase under this subsection may be paid only from amounts the Government recovers from other grants made under that Act.

(d) With the consent of the grant recipient, the Secretary may change the workscope of a project financed under a grant approved under this subchapter if the change does not result in an increase in the maximum amount the Government may pay under subsection (b) of this section.

§ 47109. Allowable project costs

(a) Except as provided in section 47111 of this title, the United States Government may pay or be obligated to pay, from amounts appropriated to carry out this subchapter, a cost incurred in carrying out a project under this subchapter only if the Secretary of Transportation decides the cost is allowable.

(b)(1) The Secretary shall decide that a project cost is allowable—

(A) if the cost necessarily is incurred in carrying out the project in compliance with the grant agreement made for the project under this subchapter;

(B) if the cost is incurred—

(i) after the grant agreement is executed and is for airport development or airport planning carried out after the grant agreement is executed; or

(ii) after June 1, 1989, by the airport operator (regardless of when the grant agreement is executed) as part of a Government-approved noise compatibility program (including project formulation costs) and consistent with all applicable statutory and administrative requirements;

(C) to the extent the cost is reasonable in amount;

(D) if the cost is not incurred in a project for airport development or airport planning for which other Government assistance has been granted; and

(E) if the total costs allowed for the project are not more than the amount stated in the grant agreement as the maximum the Government will pay (except as provided in section 47108(b) of this title).

(2) A cost incurred by a grant recipient related to an audit required by the Secretary under section 47119(b) or (d) of this title may be considered under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection a cost necessarily incurred in carrying out a project.

(c) The Secretary may decide that a project cost under section (b)(1)(B)(i) of this section incurred after May 13, 1946, and before the date the grant agreement is executed is allowable if it is—

(1) necessarily incurred in formulating an airport development project, including a cost incurred for field surveys, plans and specifications, property interests in land or airspace, or administration or other incidental items that would not have been incurred except for the project; or

(2) necessarily and directly incurred in developing the work scope of an airport planning project.

(d) The Secretary may decide that the cost of terminal development (including multimodal terminal development) in a nonrevenue-producing public-use area of a commercial service airport is allowable for an airport development project at the airport—

(1) if the applicant for a grant for the project certifies that the airport, on the date the grant application is submitted to the Secretary, has—

(A) all the safety equipment required for certification of the airport under section 44706 of this title;

(B) all the security equipment required by regulation; and

(C) provided access for passengers getting on and off aircraft, except air carrier aircraft, to the area of the airport for passengers to get on and off aircraft;

(2) if the cost is directly related to moving passengers and baggage in air commerce within the airport, including vehicles for moving passengers between terminal facilities and between terminal facilities and aircraft; and

(3) under terms necessary to protect the interests of the Government.

(e)(1) The Secretary may issue a letter of intent to an applicant stating an intention to obligate from future budget authority an amount, not more than the Government share of allowable project costs, for an airport development project (including costs of formulating the project) at a primary or reliever airport. The letter shall establish a schedule under which the Secretary, as amounts become available, will reimburse the applicant for the Government share of allowable project costs if the applicant, after the Secretary issues the letter, carries out the project without receiving amounts under this subchapter.

(2) Paragraph (1) of this subsection applies to a project—

(A) about which the applicant, before the project begins, notifies the Secretary of the applicant's intent to carry out the project;

(B) that will comply with all statutory and administrative requirements that would apply to the project if it were carried out with amounts made available under this subchapter; and

(C) the Secretary decides will enhance system-wide airport capacity significantly and meets the criteria of section 47115(c) of this title.

(3) Issuance of a letter under paragraph (1) of this subsection is not an obligation of the Government under section 1501 of title 31, and the letter is not deemed to be an administrative commitment for financing. An obligation or administrative commitment may be made only as amounts are provided in authorization and appropriation laws.

(4) The total estimated amount of future Government obligations covered by all outstanding letters of intent under paragraph (1) of this subsection may not be more than the amount authorized to carry out section 47703 of this title, less an amount reasonably estimated by the Secretary to be needed for grants under section 47703 that are not covered by a letter.

(f) Except as provided in subsection (d) of this section, a cost is not an allowable airport development project cost if it is for—

(1) constructing a public parking facility for passenger automobiles;

(2) constructing, altering, or repairing part of an airport building, except to the extent the building will be used for facilities or activities directly related to the safety of individuals at the airport;

(3) decorative landscaping; or

(4) providing or installing sculpture or art works.

§ 47110. United States Government share of project costs

(a) Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c) of this section, the United States Government share of allowable project costs is—

(1) 75 percent for a project at a primary airport having at least .25 percent of the total number of passenger boardings each year at all commercial service airports; and

(2) 90 percent for a project at any other airport.

(b) If, under subsection (a) of this section, the Government share of allowable costs of a project in a State containing unappropriated and unreserved public lands and nontaxable Indian lands (individual and tribal) of more than 5 percent of the total area of all lands in the State, is less than the share applied on June 30, 1975, under section 17(b) of the Airport and Airway Development Act of 1970, the Government share under subsection (a) of this section shall be increased by the lesser of—

(1) 25 percent;

(2) one-half of the percentage that the area of unappropriated and unreserved public lands and nontaxable Indian lands in the State is of the total area of the State; or

(3) the percentage necessary to increase the Government share to the percentage that applied on June 30, 1975, under section 17(b) of the Airport and Airway Development Act of 1970.

(c) Notwithstanding subsections (a) and (b) of this section, the Government share of project costs allowable under section 47109(d) of this title may not be more than 75 percent.

§ 47111. Payments under project grant agreements

(a) After making a project grant agreement under this subchapter, the Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the grant recipient, may decide when and in what amounts payments under the agreement will be made. Payments totaling not more than 90 percent of the United States Government share of the project's estimated allowable costs may be made before the project is completed if the grant recipient certifies to the Secretary that the total amount expended from the advance payments at any time will not be more than the cost of the airport development work completed on the project at that time.

(b) If the Secretary decides that the total amount of payments made under a grant agreement under this subchapter is more than the Government share of the total allowable project costs, the Government may recover the excess amount. If the Secretary decides that a project for which an advance payment was made has not been completed within a reasonable time, the Government may recover any part of the advance payment for which the Government received no benefit.

(c) A payment under a project grant agreement under this subchapter may be made only to an officer or depository designated by the grant recipient and authorized by law to receive public money.

(d)(1) The Secretary may withhold a payment under a grant agreement under this subchapter for more than 180 days after the payment is due only if the Secretary—

(A) decides the recipient has violated the agreement; and

(B) notifies the recipient and provides an opportunity for a proceeding.

(2) The 180-day period may be extended by—

(A) agreement of the Secretary and the recipient; or

(B) the hearing officer if the officer decides an extension is necessary because the recipient did not follow the schedule the officer established.

(3) A person adversely affected by an order of the Secretary withholding a payment may apply for review of the order by filing a petition in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit or in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the project is located. The petition must be filed not later than 60 days after the order is served on the petitioner.

§ 47112. Carrying out airport development projects

(a) Construction work for an airport development project carried out under a grant agreement under this subchapter is subject to inspection and approval by the Secretary of Transportation. The construction work must be carried out in compliance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary. The regulations shall require the project grant recipient to make necessary cost and progress reports on the project. The regulations may change a contract related to the project only if the contract was made with actual notice of the regulations.

(b) A contract for more than $2,000 involving labor for an airport development project carried out under a grant agreement under this subchapter must require contractors to pay labor minimum wage rates as determined by the Secretary of Labor under the Act of March 3, 1931 (known as the Davis-Bacon Act) (40 U.S.C. 276a—276a-5). The minimum rates must be included in the bids for the work and in the invitation for those bids.

(c)(1) In this subsection—

(A) "disabled veteran" has the same meaning given that term in section 2108 of title 5.

(B) "Vietnam-era veteran" means an individual who served on active duty (as defined in section 101 of title 38) in the armed forces for more than 180 consecutive days any part of which occurred after August 4, 1964, and before May 8, 1975, and who was separated from the armed forces under honorable conditions.

(2) A contract involving labor for carrying out an airport development project under a grant agreement under this subchapter must require that preference in the employment of labor (except in executive, administrative, and supervisory positions) be given to Vietnam-era veterans and disabled veterans when they are available and qualified for the employment.

§ 47113. Minority and disadvantaged business participation

(a) In this section—

(1) "small business concern"—

(A) has the same meaning given that term in section 3 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 632); but

(B) does not include a concern, or group of concerns controlled by the same socially and economically disadvantaged individual that has average annual gross receipts ove the prior 3 fiscal years of more tha
$14,000,000, as adjusted by the Secretary o
Transportation for inflation.

(2) "socially and economically disadvan taged individual" has the same meanin given that term in section 8(d) of the Act (1 U.S.C. 637(d)) and relevant subcontractin regulations prescribed under section 8(d).

(3) women are presumed to be socially an economically disadvantaged.

(b) Except to the extent the Secretary de cides otherwise, at least 10 percent o amounts available in a fiscal year unde section 47703 of this title shall be expende with small business concerns owned an controlled by socially and economically dis advantaged individuals.

(c) The Secretary shall establish minimu uniform criteria for State governments an airport sponsors to use in certifying whethe a small business concern qualifies unde this section. The criteria shall include o site visits, personal interviews, license analyses of stock ownership and bonding c pacity, listings of equipment and work com pleted, resumes of principal owners, fina cial capacity, and type of work preferred.

(d) Each State or airport sponsor annuall shall survey and compile a list of small bus ness concerns referred to in subsection (b) this section and the location of each co cern.

§ 47114. Apportionments

(a) In this section, "amount subject to a portionment" means the amount ma available under section 47703 of this title f a fiscal year and not previously appo tioned.

(b) On the first day of each fiscal year, t
Secretary of Transportation shall apporti the amount subject to apportionment f that fiscal year as provided in this sectio

(c)(1)(A) The Secretary shall apportion the sponsor of each primary airport for ea fiscal year an amount equal to—

(i) $7.80 for each of the first 50,000 passe ger boardings at the airport during the pri calendar year;

(ii) $5.20 for each of the next 50,000 pa senger boardings at the airport during t
prior calendar year;

(iii) $2.60 for each of the next 400,000 pa senger boardings at the airport during t
prior calendar year; and

(iv) $.65 for each additional passeng boarding at the airport during the prior c endar year.

(B) Not less than $300,000 nor more th
$16,000,000 may be apportioned under su paragraph (A) of this paragraph to an a port sponsor for a primary airport for ea fiscal year.

(2)(A) The Secretary shall apportion to t sponsors of airports served by aircraft p viding air transportation of only prope
(including mail) with a total annual land weight of more than 100,000,000 pounds each fiscal year an amount equal to 3 p cent of the amount subject to apportionme each year (but not more than $50,000,000) follows: among those airports, in the prop tion that the total annual landed weight those aircraft landing at each of those a ports bears to the total annual lan weight of those aircraft landing at all th airports. However, not more than 8 perc of the amount apportioned under this pa graph may be apportioned for any one a port.

(B) Landed weight under subparagra
(A) of this paragraph is the landed weigh aircraft landing at each of those airports and all those airports during the prior calendar year.

(3) The total of all amounts apportioned under paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection may not be more than 49.5 percent of the amount subject to apportionment for a fiscal year. If this paragraph requires reduction of an amount that otherwise would be apportioned under this subsection, the Secretary shall ratably reduce the amount apportioned to each sponsor of an airport under paragraphs (1) and (2) until the 49.5 percent limit is achieved.

(d)(1) In this subsection—

(A) "area" includes land and water.

(B) "population" means the population stated in the latest decennial census of the United States.

(2) The Secretary shall apportion to the States 12 percent of the amount subject to apportionment for each fiscal year as follows:

(A) one percent of the apportioned amount to Guam, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Virgin Islands.

(B) except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection, 49.5 percent of the apportioned amount among airports, except primary airports and airports described in section 47116(e)(1)(C) of this title, in States not included in clause (A) of this paragraph in the proportion that the population of each of those States bears to the total population of all of those States.

(C) except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection, 49.5 percent of the apportioned amount among airports, except primary airports and airports described in section 47116(e)(1)(C) of this title, in States not included in clause (A) of this paragraph in the proportion that the area of each of those States bears to the total area of all of those States.

(3) An amount apportioned under paragraph (2) of this subsection for an airport in—

(A) Alaska may be made available by the Secretary for a public airport described in section 47116(e)(1)(C)(ii) of this title to which section 15(a)(3)(A)(II) of the Airport and Airway Development Act of 1970 applied during the fiscal year that ended September 30, 1981; and

(B) Puerto Rico may be made available by the Secretary for a primary airport and an airport described in section 47116(e)(1)(C) of this title.

(e)(1) Instead of apportioning amounts for airports in Alaska under subsections (c) and (d) of this section, the Secretary may apportion amounts for those airports in the way in which amounts were apportioned in fiscal year 1980 under section 15(a) of the Airport and Airway Development Act of 1970. However, in apportioning amounts for a fiscal year under this subsection, the Secretary shall apportion—

(A) for each primary airport at least as much as would be apportioned for the airport under subsection (c)(1) of this section; and

(B) a total amount at least equal to the minimum amount required to be apportioned to airports in Alaska in fiscal year 1980 under section 15(a)(3)(A) of that Act.

(2) This subsection does not prohibit the Secretary from making project grants for airports in Alaska from the discretionary fund under section 47115 of this title.

§ 47115. Discretionary fund

(a) The Secretary of Transportation has a discretionary fund. The fund consists of amounts subject to apportionment for a fiscal year that are not apportioned under section 47114 of this title. Subject to subsection (b) of this section and section 47116(e) of this title, the fund is available for making grants for any purpose for which amounts are made available under section 47703 of this title that the Secretary considers most appropriate to carry out this subchapter.

(b) At least 75 percent of the amount in the fund and distributed by the Secretary in a fiscal year shall be used for making grants—

(1) to preserve and enhance capacity, safety, and security at primary and reliever airports; and

(2) to carry out airport noise compatibility planning and programs at primary and reliever airports.

(c) In selecting a project for a grant to preserve and enhance capacity as described in subsection (b)(1) of this section, the Secretary shall consider—

(1) the effect the project will have on the overall national air transportation system capacity;

(2) the benefit and cost of the project; and

(3) the financial commitment from non-United States Government sources to preserve or enhance airport capacity.

(d) If the Secretary decides the Secretary cannot comply with the percentage requirements of subsection (b) of this section in a fiscal year because the number of qualified applicants is not enough to meet the percentage, the amount the Secretary determines will not be distributed as required by subsection (b) is available for obligation during the fiscal year without regard to the requirement.

§ 47116. Use of apportioned amounts

(a) Except as provided in this section, an amount apportioned under section 47114(c)(1) or (d)(2) of this title is available for making grants for any purpose for which amounts are made available under section 47703 of this title.

(b) An amount apportioned under section 47114 of this title is available to be obligated for grants under the apportionment only during the fiscal year for which the amount was first authorized to be obligated for grants and the 2 fiscal years immediately after that year. If the amount is not obligated under the apportionment within that time, it is added to the discretionary fund.

(c)(1) An amount apportioned to a sponsor of a primary airport under section 47114(c)(1) of this title is available for grants for any public-use airport of the sponsor included in the national plan of integrated airport systems.

(2) A sponsor of a primary airport may make an agreement with the Secretary of Transportation waiving a part of the amount apportioned for the airport under section 47114(c)(1) of this title if the Secretary makes the waived amount available for grants for another public-use airport in the same State or geographical area as the primary airport.

(d) An amount apportioned for a State under—

(1) section 47114(d)(2)(A) of this title is available for grants for airports located in the State; and

(2) section 47114(d)(2)(B) or (C) of this title is available for grants for airports located in the State, except—

(A) primary airports;

(B) commercial service airports; or

(C) public airports that were eligible for United States Government assistance from amounts apportioned under section 15(a)(3) of the Airport and Airway Development Act of 1970 and to which section 15(a)(3)(A)(I) or (II) of that Act applied during the fiscal year that ended September 30, 1981.

(e)(1) During each fiscal year, the Secretary shall use—

(A) at least 10 percent of the amount made available under section 47703 of this title for grants for reliever airports;

(B) at least 10 percent of that amount for grants for airport noise compatibility planning under section 47505(a)(2) of this title and for carrying out noise compatibility programs under section 47504(c)(1) of this title;

(C) at least 2.5 percent of that amount for grants for—

(i) nonprimary commercial service airports; and

(ii) public airports (except commercial service airports) that were eligible for Government assistance from amounts apportioned under section 15(a)(3) of the Airport and Airway Development Act of 1970, and to which section 15(a)(3)(A)(I) or (II) of that Act applied during the fiscal year that ended September 30, 1981; and

(D) at least .5 percent of that amount for integrated airport system planning grants to planning agencies designated by the Secretary and authorized by the laws of a State or political subdivision of a State to do planning for an area of the State or subdivision in which a grant under this chapter is to be used.

(2) A grant from the amount apportioned under section 47114(e) of this title may not be included as part of the 2.5 percent required to be used for grants under paragraph (1)(C) of this subsection.

(3) If the Secretary decides that an amount required to be used for grants under paragraph (1) of this subsection cannot be used for a fiscal year because there are not enough qualified grant applications submitted under this subchapter, the amount the Secretary determines cannot be used is available during the fiscal year for grants for other airports or for other purposes for which amounts are authorized for grants under section 47703 of this title.

(f) The Secretary may not make a grant for a commercial service airport in Alaska of more than 110 percent of the amount apportioned for the airport for a fiscal year under section 47114(e) of this title.

(g)(1) Subject to paragraph (2) of this subsection, if the Secretary decides, based on the notices provided under section 47105(e) of this title or otherwise, that an amount apportioned under section 47114 of this title will not be used for grants during a fiscal year, the Secretary may use an equal amount for grants during the fiscal year for any of the purposes for which amounts are authorized for grants under section 47703 of this title.

(2) The Secretary may make a grant under paragraph (1) of this subsection only if the Secretary decides that—

(A) the total amount used for grants for the fiscal year under section 47703 of this title will not be more than the amount authorized for grants under section 47703 for that fiscal year; and

(B) the amounts authorized for grants under section 47703 of this title for later fiscal years are sufficient for grants of the apportioned amounts that were not used for grants during the fiscal year and that remain available under subsection (b) of this section.

(h) The authority of the Secretary to make grants during a fiscal year from amounts that were apportioned for a prior fiscal year and remain available for approved airport development project grants under subsection (b) of this section may be impaired only by a law enacted after September 3, 1982, that expressly limits that authority.

§ 47117. Terminal development costs

(a) An amount apportioned under section 47114 of this title and made available to the sponsor of an air carrier airport at which terminal development was carried out after June 30, 1970, and before July 12, 1976, is available to repay immediately money borrowed and used to pay the costs for terminal development at the airport, if those costs would be allowable project costs under section 47109(d) of this title if they had been incurred after September 3, 1982. An amount is available for a grant under this subsection—

(1) only if—

(A) the grant applicant submits the certification required under section 47109(d) of this title;

(B) the Secretary of Transportation decides that using the amount to repay the borrowed money will not defer a project of airport development at the airport outside the terminal area; and

(C) amounts available for airport development under this subchapter will not be used for additional terminal development projects at the airport for at least 3 years beginning on the date the grant is used to repay the borrowed money; and

(2) subject to the limitations in subsection (b)(1) and (2) of this section.

(b) In a fiscal year, the Secretary may make available—

(1) to a sponsor of a primary airport, any part of amounts apportioned to the sponsor for the fiscal year under section 47114(c)(1) of this title to pay project costs allowable under section 47109(d) of this title;

(2) to a sponsor of a nonprimary commercial service airport, not more than $200,000 of the amount that may be distributed for the fiscal year from the discretionary fund to pay project costs allowable under section 47109(d) of this title; or

(3) not more than $25,000,000 to pay project costs allowable for the fiscal year under section 47109(d) of this title for projects at commercial service airports that were not eligible for assistance for terminal development during the fiscal year ending September 30, 1980, under section 20(b) of the Airport and Airway Development Act of 1970.

§ 47118. Grant priority

In making a grant under this subchapter, the Secretary of Transportation may give priority to a project that is consistent with an integrated airport system plan.

§ 47119. Records and audits

(a) The recipient of a grant under this subchapter shall keep the records the Secretary of Transportation requires. The Secretary may require records—

(1) that disclose—

(A) the amount and disposition by the recipient of the proceeds of the grant;

(B) the total cost of the plan or program for which the grant is given or used; and

(C) the amounts and kinds of costs of the plan or program provided by other sources; and

(2) that make it easier to carry out an audit.

(b) The Secretary and the Comptroller General may audit and examine records of a recipient of a grant under this subchapter related to the grant.

(c) When an independent audit is made of the accounts of a recipient of a grant under this subchapter related to the disposition of the proceeds of the grant or related to the plan or program for which the grant was given or used, the recipient shall submit a certified copy of the audit to the Comptroller General not more than 6 months after the end of the fiscal year for which the audit was made. Not later than April 15 of each year, the Comptroller General shall report to Congress describing the results of each audit conducted or reviewed by the Comptroller General under this section during the prior fiscal year. The Comptroller General shall prescribe regulations necessary to carry out this subsection.

(d) The Secretary may require a person to conduct an appropriate audit as a condition for receiving a grant under this subchapter.

(e) The Secretary shall review annually the reporting and recordkeeping requirements under this subchapter to ensure that they are the minimum necessary to carry out this chapter.

(f) This section does not authorize the Secretary or the Comptroller General to withhold information from a committee of Congress authorized to have the information.

§ 47120. Investigations and hearings

The Secretary of Transportation may take action the Secretary considers necessary to carry out this subchapter, including conducting investigations and public hearings, prescribing regulations and procedures, and issuing orders.

§ 47121. Nondiscrimination

The Secretary of Transportation shall take affirmative action to ensure that an individual is not excluded because of race, creed, color, national origin, or sex from participating in an activity carried out with money received from a grant under this subchapter. The Secretary shall prescribe regulations necessary to carry out this section. The regulations shall be similar to those in effect under title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000d et seq.). This section is in addition to title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

§ 47122. Agreements for State and local operation of airport facilities

(a) When the Secretary of Transportation makes an agreement under this subchapter with a State or a political subdivision of a State to allow the State or subdivision to operate an airport facility in the State or subdivision, the Secretary shall ensure that the agreement relieves the United States Government from any liability arising out of, or related to, acts or omissions of employees of the State or subdivision in operating the airport facility.

(b) The Secretary shall—

(1) continue, for contract towers existing on December 30, 1987, the low activity (VFR) level I air traffic control contract program established under subsection (a) of this section; and

(2) extend the program to other towers as practicable.

§ 47123. Conveyance of United States Government land

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, when necessary to carry out a project under this subchapter at a public airport, to operate a public airport, or for the future development of an airport under the national plan of integrated airport systems, the Secretary of Transportation shall request the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government owning or controlling land or airspace to convey property interests in the land or airspace to the public agency sponsoring the project or owning or controlling the airport. Not later than 4 months after receiving the request, the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality shall decide whether the requested conveyance is consistent with the needs of the department, agency, or instrumentality and shall notify the Secretary of that decision. If the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality decides that the requested conveyance is consistent with its needs, the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality, with the approval of the Attorney General and without cost to the Government, shall make the conveyance. A conveyance may be made only on the condition that the property interests conveyed revert to the Government, at the option of the Secretary, to the extent they are not developed for an airport purpose or used consistently with the conveyance.

(b) Except as specifically provided by law, subsection (a) of this section does not apply to land or airspace owned or controlled by the Government within—

(1) a national park, national monument, national recreation area, or similar area under the administration of the National Park Service;

(2) a unit of the National Wildlife Refuge System or similar area under the jurisdiction of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service; or

(3) a national forest or Indian reservation.

§ 47124. Annual report

Not later than April 1 of each year, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit t Congress a report on activities carried ou under this subchapter during the prior fisca year. The report shall include—

(1) a detailed statement of airport develop ment completed;

(2) the status of each project undertaken;

(3) the allocation of appropriations; and

(4) an itemized statement of expenditure and receipts.

§ 47125. Criminal penalties for false statements

A person shall be fined under title 18, im prisoned for not more than 5 years, or both if the person, with intent to defraud th United States Government, knowingl makes—

(1) a false statement about the kind, quan tity, quality, or cost of the material used o to be used, or the quantity, quality, or cos of work performed or to be performed, i connection with the submission of a pla map, specification, contract, or estimate c project cost for a project included in a gran application submitted to the Secretary c Transportation for approval under this su chapter;

(2) a false statement or claim for work c materials for a project included in a gran application approved by the Secretary unde this subchapter; or

(3) a false statement in a report or certif cation required under this subchapter.

§ 47126. Ground transportation demonstratic projects

(a) To improve the airport and airwa system of the United States consistent wit regional airport system plans finance under section 13(b) of the Airport an Airway Development Act of 1970, the Secr tary of Transportation may carry o ground transportation demonstratic projects to improve ground access to air ca rier airport terminals. The Secretary ma carry out a demonstration project independently or by grant or contract, including a contract with another department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government.

(b) In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall give priority to a demonstration project that—

(1) affects an airport in an area with an operating regional rapid transit system with existing facilities reasonably near the airport;

(2) includes connection of the airport terminal to that system;

(3) is consistent with and supports a regional airport system plan adopted by the planning agency for the region and submitted to the Secretary; and

(4) improves access to air transportation for individuals residing or working in the region by encouraging the optimal balance of use of airports in the region.

§ 47127. Restriction on projects using products or services of foreign countries denying fair market opportunities

(a) In this section—

(1) each foreign instrumentality and each territory and possession of a foreign country administered separately for customs purposes is a separate foreign country.

(2) an article substantially produced or manufactured in a foreign country is a product of the country.

(3) a service provided by a person that is a national of a foreign country or that is controlled by a national of a foreign country is a service of the country.

(b)(1) An amount made available under this subchapter may not be used for a project that uses a product or service of a foreign country during any period the country is on the list maintained by the United States Trade Representative under subsection (d)(1) of this section.

(2) Paragraph (1) of this subsection does not apply when the Secretary of Transportation decides that—

(A) applying paragraph (1) to the product, service, or project is not in the public interest;

(B) a product or service of the same class or type and of a satisfactory quality is not produced or offered in the United States, or in a foreign country not listed under subsection (d)(1) of this section, in a sufficient and reasonably available amount; and

(C) the cost of the project will increase by more than 20 percent if the product or service is excluded.

(c) Not later than 30 days after a report is submitted to Congress under section 181(b) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2241(b)), the Trade Representative, for a construction project of more than $500,000 for which the government of a foreign country supplies any part of the amount, shall decide whether the foreign country denies fair market opportunities for products and suppliers of the United States in procurement or for United States bidders. In making the decision, the Trade Representative shall consider information obtained in preparing the report and other information the Trade Representative considers relevant.

(d)(1) The Trade Representative shall maintain a list of each foreign country the Trade Representative finds under subsection (c) of this section is denying fair market opportunities. The country shall remain on the list until the Trade Representative decides the country provides fair market opportunities.

(2) The Trade Representative shall publish in the Federal Register—

(A) annually the list required under paragraph (1) of this subsection; and

(B) any change made before the next list is published.

§ 47128. State block grant pilot program

(a) The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations to carry out a State block grant pilot program. The regulations shall provide that the Secretary may designate not more than 3 qualified States to assume administrative responsibility for all airport grant amounts available under this subchapter, except for amounts designated for use at primary airports.

(b) A State wishing to participate in the program must submit an application to the Secretary. The Secretary shall select a State only after deciding the State—

(1) has an authority or organization capable of effectively administering a block grant made under this section;

(2) uses a satisfactory airport system planning process;

(3) uses a programming process acceptable to the Secretary;

(4) has agreed to comply with United States Government standard requirements for administering the block grant; and

(5) has agreed to provide the Secretary with program information the Secretary requires.

(c) Before deciding a planning process is satisfactory or a programming process is acceptable under subsection (b)(2) or (3) of this section, the Secretary shall ensure that the process provides for meeting critical safety and security needs and that the programming process ensures that the needs of the national airport system will be addressed in deciding which projects will receive money from the Government.

(d)(1) This section is effective only through September 30, 1991.

(2) The Secretary shall conduct an ongoing review of the program and not later than 90 days before the program ends shall submit to Congress a report on the results of the review and recommendations for further action.

SUBCHAPTER II—SURPLUS PROPERTY FOR PUBLIC AIRPORTS

§ 47141. Authority to transfer an interest in surplus property

(a) Subject to sections 47142 and 47143 of this title, a department, agency, or instrumentality of the executive branch of the United States Government or a wholly owned Government corporation may give a State, political subdivision of a State, or tax-supported organization any interest in surplus property—

(1) that the Secretary of Transportation decides is—

(A) desirable for developing, improving, operating, or maintaining a public airport (as defined in section 47102 of this title);

(B) reasonably necessary to fulfill the immediate and foreseeable future requirements for developing, improving, operating, or maintaining a public airport; or

(C) needed for developing sources of revenue from nonaviation businesses at a public airport; and

(2) if the Administrator of General Services approves the gift and decides the interest is not best suited for industrial use.

(b) Only the Secretary may ensure compliance with an instrument giving an interest in surplus property under this subchapter. The Secretary may change the instrument to correct the instrument or to make the gift comply with law.

(c) The giving of surplus property under this subchapter that the Secretary decides is available for the purposes described in subsection (a) of this section has priority.

(d) An interest in surplus property that could be used at a public airport but that is not given under this subchapter shall be disposed of under other applicable law.

§ 47142. Terms of gifts

Except as provided in section 47143 of this title, the following terms apply to a gift of an interest in surplus property under this subchapter:

(1) A State, political subdivision of a State, or tax-supported organization receiving the interest may use, lease, salvage, or dispose of the interest for other than airport purposes only after the Secretary of Transportation gives written consent that the interest can be used, leased, salvaged, or disposed of without materially and adversely affecting the development, improvement, operation, or maintenance of the airport at which the property is located.

(2) The interest shall be used and maintained for the use and benefit of the public without unreasonable discrimination.

(3) A right may not be vested in a person excluding others in the same class from using the airport—

(A) to conduct an aeronautical activity requiring the operation of aircraft; or

(B) to sell or supply aircraft, aircraft accessories, equipment, or supplies (except gasoline and oil), or aircraft services necessary to operate aircraft (including maintaining and repairing aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances).

(4) The State, political subdivision, or tax-supported organization shall clear and protect the aerial approaches to the airport by mitigating existing, and preventing future, airport hazards.

(5) During a national emergency declared by the President or Congress, the United States Government is entitled to use, control, or possess, without charge, any part of the public airport at which the property is located or used. However, the Government shall—

(A) pay the entire cost of maintaining the part of the airport it exclusively uses, controls, or possesses during the national emergency;

(B) contribute a share, equal to the use made by the Government, of the cost of maintaining the property over which the Government has nonexclusive use, control, or possession during the national emergency; and

(C) pay a fair rental for use, control, or possession of improvements to the airport made without assistance from the Government.

(6) The Government is entitled to the nonexclusive use, without charge, of the landing area of an airport at which the property is located or used. The Secretary may limit the use of the landing area if necessary to prevent unreasonable interference with use by other authorized aircraft. However, the Government—

(A) shall pay for damages caused by its use of the landing area; and

(B) if its use of the landing area is substantial, shall contribute a share, equal to the use made by the Government, of the cost of maintaining and operating the landing area.

(7) The State, political subdivision, or tax-supported organization accepting the interest shall release the Government from all liability for damages arising under an agreement that provides for Government use of a part of the airport owned, controlled, or operated by the State, political subdivision, or tax-supported organization on which, adjacent to which, or in connection with which, the property is located or used.

(8) Any part of the interest in the property reverts to the Government, at the option of the Government, as the property exists when a term under this section is not satisfied.

§ 47143. Waiving and adding terms

(a) The Secretary of Transportation may waive, without charge, a term required by section 47142 of this title of a gift of an interest in property under this subchapter—

(1) if the Secretary decides that the property no longer serves the purpose for which it was given; or

(2) under terms the Secretary considers necessary to advance the interests of the United States in civil aviation if the Secretary decides that the waiver will not prevent carrying out the purpose for which the property was given and is necessary to protect or advance those interests.

(b) On request of the Secretary of Transportation or the Secretary of a military department, a department, agency, or instrumentality of the executive branch of the United States Government or a wholly owned Government agency may waive a term required by section 47142 of this title or include an additional term if the appropriate Secretary decides it is necessary to protect or advance the interests of the United States in civil aviation or for national defense.

CHAPTER 473—INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT FACILITIES

Sec.
47301. Definitions.
47302. Providing airport and airway property in foreign territories.
47303. Training foreign citizens.
47304. Transfer of airport and airway property.
47305. Administrative.
47306. Criminal penalty.

§ 47301. Definitions

In this chapter—

(1) "airport property" means an interest in property used or useful in operating and maintaining an airport.

(2) "airway property" means an interest in property used or useful in operating and maintaining a ground installation, facility, or equipment desirable for the orderly and safe operation of air traffic, including air navigation, air traffic control, airway communication, and meteorological facilities.

(3) "foreign territory" means an area—

(A) over which no government or a government of a foreign country has sovereignty;

(B) temporarily under military occupation by the United States Government; or

(C) occupied or administered by the United States Government or a government of a foreign country under an international agreement.

(4) "territory outside the continental United States" means territory outside the 48 contiguous States and the District of Columbia.

§ 47302. Providing airport and airway property in foreign territories

(a) Subject to the concurrence of the Secretary of State and the consideration of objectives of the International Civil Aviation Organization—

(1) the Secretary of Transportation may acquire, establish, and construct airport property and airway property (except meteorological facilities) in foreign territory; and

(2) the Secretary of Commerce may acquire, establish, and construct meteorological facilities in foreign territory.

(b) Except for airport property transferred under section 47304(b) of this title, an airport (as defined in section 40102(a) of this title) may be acquired, established, or constructed under subsection (a) of this section only if amounts have been appropriated specifically for the airport.

(c) The Secretary of Transportation or Commerce, as appropriate, may accept payment from a government of a foreign country or international organization for facilities or services sold or provided the government or organization under this chapter. The amount received may be credited to the appropriation current when the expenditures are or were paid, the appropriation current when the amount is received, or both.

§ 47303. Training foreign citizens

Subject to the concurrence of the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Transportation or Commerce, as appropriate, may train a foreign citizen in a subject related to aeronautics and essential to the orderly and safe operation of civil aircraft. The training may be provided—

(1) directly by the appropriate Secretary or jointly with another department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government;

(2) through a public or private agency of the United States (including a State or municipal educational institution); or

(3) through an international organization.

§ 47304. Transfer of airport and airway property

(a) When requested by the government of a foreign country or an international organization, the Secretary of Transportation or Commerce, as appropriate, may transfer to the government or organization airport property and airway property operated and maintained under this chapter by the Secretary in foreign territory. The transfer shall be on terms the Secretary considers proper, including consideration agreed on through negotiations with the government or organization.

(b) Subject to terms to which the parties agree, the Secretary of a military department may transfer without charge to the Secretary of Transportation airport property and airway property (except meteorological facilities), and to the Secretary of Commerce meteorological facilities, that the Secretary of the military department installed or controls in territory outside the continental United States. The transfer may be made if consistent with the needs of national defense and—

(1) the Secretary of the military department finds that the property or facility is no longer required exclusively for military purposes; and

(2) the Secretary of Transportation or Commerce, as appropriate, decides that the transfer is or may be necessary to carry out this chapter.

(c)(1) The Secretary of Transportation may provide, operate, and maintain facilities and services for air navigation, airway communications, and air traffic control in the Canal Zone and the Republic of Panama subject to—

(A) the approval of the Secretary of Defense; and

(B) each obligation assumed by the United States Government under an agreement between the Government and the Republic of Panama.

(2) The Secretary of a military department may transfer without charge to the Secretary of Transportation property located in the Canal Zone or the Republic of Panama when the Secretary of Transportation decides that the transfer may be useful in carrying out this chapter.

(3) Subsection (b) of this section (related to the Secretary of Transportation) and section 47302(a) and (b) of this title do not apply in carrying out this subsection.

(d)(1) When necessary for a military requirement, the Secretary of a military department immediately may retake property (with any improvements to it) transferred by the Secretary under subsection (b) or (c) of this section. The Secretary shall pay reasonable compensation to each person (or its successor in interest) that made an improvement to the property that was not made at the expense of the Government. The Secretary or a delegate of the Secretary shall decide on the amount of compensation.

(2) On the recommendation of the Secretary of Transportation or Commerce, as appropriate, the Secretary of a military department may decide not to act under paragraph (1) of this subsection.

§ 47305. Administrative

(a) The Secretary of Transportation shall consolidate, operate, protect, maintain, and improve airport property and airway property (except meteorological facilities), and the Secretary of Commerce may consolidate, operate, protect, maintain, and improve meteorological facilities, that the appropriate Secretary has acquired and that are located in territory outside the continental United States. In carrying out this section, the appropriate Secretary may—

(1) adapt the property or facility to the needs of civil aeronautics;

(2) lease the property or facility for not more than 20 years;

(3) make a contract, or provide directly, for facilities and services;

(4) make reasonable charges for aeronautical services; and

(5) acquire an interest in property.

(b) The amount received from the direc sale or charge that the Secretary of Transportation or Commerce, as appropriate, decides is equivalent to the cost of facilitie and services sold or provided under subsection (a)(3) and (4) of this section is credite to the appropriation from which the cos was paid. The balance shall be deposited i the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

(c) To carry out this chapter and to us personnel and facilities of the United State Government most advantageously and without unnecessary duplication, the Secretar of Transportation or Commerce, as appropriate, shall request, when practicable, t use a facility or service of an appropriat department, agency, or instrumentality o the Government on a reimbursable basis. department, agency, or instrumentality receiving a request under this section ma provide the facility or service.

(d) Section 3709 of the Revised Statute (41 U.S.C. 5) does not apply to a lease o contract made by the Secretary of Transpo tation or Commerce under this chapter.

§ 47306. Criminal penalty

A person that knowingly and willfully violates a regulation prescribed by the Secr tary of Transportation to carry out th chapter shall be fined under title 18, impri oned for not more than 6 months, or both.

47504. Noise compatibility program.
47505. Airport noise compatibility planning grants.
47506. Noise standards for air carriers and foreign air carriers providing foreign air transportation.

§ 47501. Definitions

In this chapter—

(1) "airport" means a public-use airport as defined in section 47102 of this title.

(2) "airport operator" means—

(A) for an airport serving air carriers that have certificates from the Secretary of Transportation, the person holding an airport operating certificate issued under section 44706 of this title; and

(B) for any other airport, the person operating the airport.

§ 47502. Noise measurement and exposure systems and identifying land use compatible with noise exposure

The Secretary of Transportation shall establish by regulation—

(1) a single system of measuring noise that—

(A) has a highly reliable relationship between projected noise exposure and surveyed reactions of individuals to noise; and

(B) is applied uniformly in measuring noise at airports and the surrounding area;

(2) a single system for establishing the exposure of individuals to noise resulting from airport operations, including noise intensity, duration, frequency, and time of occurrence; and

(3) a way to identify land use normally compatible with various exposures of individuals to noise.

§ 47503. Submission, legal effect, and use of a noise exposure map

(a) An airport operator may submit to the Secretary of Transportation a noise exposure map showing the noncompatible uses in each area of the map on the date the map is submitted, a description of estimated aircraft operations during 1985, and how those operations will affect the map. The map shall—

(1) be prepared in consultation with public agencies and planning authorities in the area surrounding the airport; and

(2) comply with regulations prescribed under section 47502 of this title.

(b) An airport operator shall submit a revised noise exposure map to the Secretary if a change in the operation of the airport will establish a substantial new noncompatible use in an area surrounding the airport.

(c)(1) A person acquiring an interest in property in an area surrounding an airport for which a noise exposure map has been submitted and having actual or constructive knowledge of the existence of the map may recover damages for noise attributable to the airport only if the person shows that—

(A) after acquiring the interest, there was a significant—

(i) change in the type or frequency of aircraft operations at the airport;

(ii) change in the airport layout;

(iii) change in flight patterns; or

(iv) increase in nighttime operations; and

(B) the damages resulted from the change or increase.

(2)(A) A person has constructive knowledge of the existence of a map under paragraph (1) of this subsection if—

(i) before acquiring the interest, notice of the existence of the map was published at least 3 times in a newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the property is located; or

(ii) the person is given a copy of the map when acquiring the interest.

(B) A person may have constructive knowledge of the existence of the map by other means.

(d) No part of a noise exposure map or related information described in subsection (a) or (b) of this section that is submitted to, or prepared by, the Secretary and no part of a list of land use the Secretary identifies as normally compatible with various exposures of individuals to noise may be admitted into evidence or used in a civil action asking for relief for noise resulting from the operation of an airport.

§ 47504. Noise compatibility program

(a)(1) An airport operator that submitted a noise exposure map and related information under section 47503(a) of this title may submit a noise compatibility program to the Secretary of Transportation after—

(A) consulting with public agencies and planning authorities in the area surrounding an airport, United States Government officials having local responsibility for the airport, and air carriers using the airport; and

(B) notice and an opportunity for a public hearing.

(2) A program submitted under pararaph (1) of this subsection shall state the measures the operator has taken or proposes to take to reduce existing noncompatible uses and prevent introducing additional noncompatible uses in the area covered by the map, including—

(A) establishing a preferential runway system;

(B) restricting the use of the airport by a type or class of aircraft because of the noise characteristics of the aircraft;

(C) constructing barriers and acoustical shielding and soundproofing public buildings;

(D) using flight procedures to control the operation of aircraft to reduce exposure of individuals to noise in the area surrounding the airport; and

(E) acquiring land, air rights, easements, development rights, and other interests to ensure that the property will be used in ways compatible with airport operations.

(b)(1) The Secretary shall approve a program submitted under subsection (a) of this section (except for flight procedures) not later than 180 days after receiving it if the program—

(A) does not place an unreasonable burden on interstate or foreign commerce;

(B) is reasonably consistent with achieving the goal of reducing noncompatible uses and preventing the introduction of additional noncompatible uses; and

(C) provides for necessary revisions because of a revised map submitted under section 47503(b) of this title.

(2) A program is deemed to be approved if the Secretary does not act within the 180-day period.

(c)(1) The Secretary may make grants from amounts available under section 47703 of this title to carry out a project under a part of a noise compatibility program approved under subsection (b) of this section. A grant may be made to—

(A) an airport operator submitting the program;

(B) a unit of general local government in the area surrounding the airport, if the Secretary decides the unit is able to carry out the project;

(C) an airport operator or unit of general local government referred to in clause (A) or (B) of this paragraph to carry out any part of a program developed before February 18, 1980, or regulations prescribed to carry out the program, if the Secretary decides the program is substantially consistent with reducing existing noncompatible uses and preventing the introduction of additional noncompatible uses and the purposes of this chapter will be furthered by promptly carrying out the program; and

(D) an airport operator or unit of general local government referred to in clause (A) or (B) of this paragraph to soundproof a public building in the noise impact area surrounding the airport that is used primarily for educational or medical purposes and that the Secretary decides is adversely affected by airport noise.

(2) An airport operator may agree to make a grant made under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection available to a public agency in the area surrounding the airport if the Secretary decides the agency is able to carry out the project.

(3) The Government share of a project for which a grant is made under paragraph (1) of this subsection is the greater of—

(A) 80 percent of the cost of the project; or

(B) the Government share that would apply if the amounts available for the project were made available under subchapter I of chapter 471 of this title for a project at the airport.

(4) The provisions of subchapter I of chapter 471 of this title related to grants apply to a grant made under this chapter, except—

(A) section 47110(a) and (b) of this title; and

(B) any provision that the Secretary decides is inconsistent with, or unnecessary to carry out, this chapter.

(d) The Government is not liable for damages from aviation noise because of action taken under this section.

§ 47505. Airport noise compatibility planning grants

(a) The Secretary of Transportation may make a grant to a sponsor of an airport to develop, for planning purposes, information necessary to prepare and submit—

(1) a noise exposure map and related information under section 47503(a) of this title, including the cost of obtaining the information; or

(2) a noise compatibility program under section 47504 of this title.

(b) A grant under subsection (a) of this section may be made from amounts available under section 47703 of this title. The United States Government share for the grant is the percent for which a project for airport development at an airport is eligible under section 47110(a) and (b) of this title.

§ 47506. Noise standards for air carriers and foreign air carriers providing foreign air transportation

(a)(1) The Secretary of Transportation shall require each air carrier and foreign air carrier providing foreign air transportation to comply with noise standards—

(A) the Secretary prescribes for new subsonic aircraft under regulations of the Secretary in effect on January 1, 1977; or

(B) of the International Civil Aviation Organization that are substantially compatible with standards of the Secretary for new subsonic aircraft under regulations of the Secretary prescribed between January 2, 1977, and January 1, 1982.

(2) Each carrier shall comply with the standards at a phased rate similar to the rate for aircraft registered in the United States.

(b) The requirement for air carriers providing foreign air transportation may not be more stringent than the requirement for foreign air carriers.

47701. Air navigation facilities.
47702. Research and development.
47703. Airport planning and development and noise compatibility planning and programs.
47704. Certain direct costs and joint air navigation services.
47705. Weather reporting services.
47706. Availability and uses of amounts.
47707. Submission of budget information and legislative recommendations and comments.

§ 47701. Air navigation facilities

(a) For the fiscal years ending September 30, 1982–1990, not more than $11,625,200,000 may be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation out of the Airport and Airway Trust Fund established under section 9502 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 9502) to acquire, establish, and improve air navigation facilities under section 44502(a)(1)(A) of this title.

(b) Of amounts available under subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary shall obligate not less than $35,000,000 in the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, to buy and install instrument landing systems at airports under section 44502(a)(1)(A) of this title. Of the amounts obligated under this subsection in a fiscal year—

(1) 75 percent is available for primary and reliever airports; and

(2) 25 percent is available for other airports.

(c) Amounts appropriated under this section remain available until expended.

§ 47702. Research and development

(a) For the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, the following amounts may be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation out of the Airport and Airway Trust Fund established under section 9502 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 9502) to carry out sections 44504, 44505, and 44507 of this title:

(1) $25,000,000 for human factors research projects and activities.

(2) $221,530,000 for all other research projects and activities.

(b) At least 15 percent of the amount appropriated under subsection (a) of this section is for long-term research projects, each of which is—

(1) identified as a discrete project in the aviation research plan required under section 44501(d) of this title; and

(2) unlikely to result in a final rulemaking action within 5 years, or in initial installation of operational equipment within 10 years, after the project begins.

(c)(1) Not more than 10 percent of the amount authorized for a category of projects and activities in a fiscal year under subsection (a) of this section may be transferred to or from that category in that fiscal year.

(2) The Secretary may transfer more than 10 percent of an authorized amount to or from a category only after—

(A) submitting a written explanation of the transfer to the Committees on Science, Space, and Technology and Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Committees on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and Appropriations of the Senate; and

(B) 30 days have passed after the explanation is submitted or each Committee notifies the Secretary in writing that it does not object to the transfer.

(d)(1) Of the amounts made available under subsection (a) of this section, at least $25,000,000 may be appropriated each fiscal year for research and development under sections 44504 and 44505(a) of this title on preserving and enhancing airport capacity, including research and development on improvements to airport design standards, maintenance, safety, operations, and environmental concerns.

(2) The Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Science, Space, and Technology and Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, on expenditures made under paragraph (1) of this subsection for the fiscal year. The report shall be submitted not later than 60 days after the end of the fiscal year.

(e) Necessary amounts may be appropriated to the Secretary out of amounts in the Fund available for research and development to conduct research under section 44506 of this title.

(f) Amounts appropriated under subsection (a) of this section remain available until expended.

§ 47703. Airport planning and development and noise compatibility planning and programs

Not more than the following amounts are available to the Secretary of Transportation out of the Airport and Airway Trust Fund established under section 9502 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 9502) to make grants for airport planning and airport development under section 47104 of this title, airport noise compatibility planning under section 47505(a)(2) of this title, and carrying out noise compatibility programs under section 47504(c)(1) of this title:

(1) $10,216,700,000 for the fiscal years ending September 30, 1982–1990.

(2) $12,016,700,000 for the fiscal years ending September 30, 1982–1991.

(3) $13,816,700,000 for the fiscal years ending September 30, 1982–1992.

§ 47704. Certain direct costs and joint air navigation services

(a) Except as provided in this section, the balance of the money available in the Airport and Airway Trust Fund established under section 9502 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 9502) may be appropriated out of the Fund for—

(1) direct costs the Secretary of Transportation incurs to flight check, operate, and maintain air navigation facilities referred to in section 44502(a)(1)(A) of this title safely and efficiently; and

(2) the costs of services provided under international agreements related to the joint financing of air navigation services assessed against the United States Government.

(b) Subject to subsections (c)–(e) of this section, the maximum amount that may be appropriated out of the Fund for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, may not be more than an amount equal to 50 percent of the amount made available under sections 47701–47703 of this title for that fiscal year.

(c) The maximum amount that may be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section, as limited by subsection (b) of this section, shall be reduced by an amount equal to 2 times any excess of—

(1) $3,863,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, $3,770,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1991, and $3,778,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1992; over

(2) the amount made available under sections 47701–47703 of this title for the fiscal year.

(d) The amount that may be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section, as limited and reduced by subsections (b) and (c) of this section, shall be increased by an amount equal to 2 times any excess of—

(1) the amount made available under sections 47701–47703 of this title for the fiscal year; over

(2) the part of the amount authorized under sections 47701–47703 of this title for the fiscal year that was not authorized for a prior fiscal year.

(e) The total amount of the increase under subsection (d) of this section may not be more than the total amount of the reduction under subsection (c) of this section.

§ 47705. Weather reporting services

The Secretary of Transportation may expend from amounts available under section 47704 of this title in the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, not more than $30,000,000 to reimburse the Secretary of Commerce for the cost of providing weather reporting services.

§ 47706. Availability and uses of amounts

(a) Amounts equal to the amounts authorized under sections 47701–47705 of this title remain in the Airport and Airway Trust Fund established under section 9502 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 9502) until appropriated.

(b)(1) Amounts in the Fund may not be appropriated to carry out a program or activity under part A of subtitle VII of this title, except a program or activity referred to in sections 47701–47705 of this title.

(2) Except to the extent authorized by section 47704 of this title, amounts in the Fund may not be appropriated for administrative expenses of the Department of Transportation.

(c) In a fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1992, the Secretary of Transportation may obligate or expend an amount appropriated out of the Fund under section 47704 of this title only if a law expressly changes the provisions of, and formula in, section 47704.

§ 47707. Submission of budget information and legislative recommendations and comments

When the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration submits to the Secretary of Transportation, the President, or the Director of the Office of Management and Budget any budget information, legislative recommendation, or comment on legislation about amounts authorized in section 47701 or 47702 of this title, the Administrator concurrently shall submit a copy of the information, recommendation, or comment to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Committees on Public Works and Transportation and Appropriations of the House, the President of the Senate, and the Committees on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and Appropriations of the Senate.

§ 50101. Definitions

In this chapter—

(1) "existing liquefied natural gas facility"—

(A) means a liquefied natural gas facility for which an application to approve the site, construction, or operation of the facility was filed before March 1, 1978, with—

(i) the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (or any predecessor); or

(ii) the appropriate State or local authority, if the facility is not subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission under the Natural Gas Act (15 U.S.C. 717 et seq.); but

(B) does not include a facility on which construction is begun after November 29, 1979, without the approval.

(2) "gas" means natural gas, flammable gas, or toxic or corrosive gas.

(3) "gas pipeline facility" includes a pipeline, a right of way, a facility, a building, or equipment used in transporting gas or treating gas during its transportation.

(4) "hazardous liquid" means—

(A) petroleum or a petroleum product; and

(B) a substance the Secretary of Transportation decides may pose an unreasonable risk to life or property when transported by a hazardous liquid pipeline facility in a liquid state (except for liquefied natural gas).

(5) "hazardous liquid pipeline facility" includes a pipeline, a right of way, a facility, a building, or equipment used or intended to be used in transporting hazardous liquid.

(6) "interstate gas pipeline facility"—

(A) means a gas pipeline facility—

(i) used to transport gas; and

(ii) subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission under the Natural Gas Act (15 U.S.C. 717 et seq.); but

(B) does not include a gas pipeline facility transporting gas from an interstate gas pipeline in a State to a direct sales customer in that State buying gas for its own consumption.

(7) "interstate hazardous liquid pipeline facility" means a hazardous liquid pipeline facility used to transport hazardous liquid in interstate or foreign commerce.

(8) "interstate or foreign commerce"—

(A) related to gas, means commerce—

(i) between a place in a State and a place outside that State; or

(ii) that affects any commerce described in subclause (A)(i) of this clause; and

(B) related to hazardous liquid, means commerce between—

(i) a place in a State and a place outside that State; or

(ii) places in the same State through a place outside the State.

(9) "intrastate gas pipeline facility" means—

(A) a gas pipeline facility and transportation of gas within a State not subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission under the Natural Gas Act (15 U.S.C. 717 et seq.); and

(B) a gas pipeline facility transporting gas from an interstate gas pipeline in a State to a direct sales customer in that State buying gas for its own consumption.

(10) "intrastate hazardous liquid pipeline facility" means a hazardous liquid pipeline facility that is not an interstate hazardous liquid pipeline facility.

(11) "liquefied natural gas" means natural gas in a liquid or semisolid state.

(12) "liquefied natural gas accident" means a release, burning, or explosion of liquefied natural gas from any cause, except a release, burning, or explosion that, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, does not pose a threat to public health or safety, property, or the environment.

(13) "liquefied natural gas conversion" means changing natural gas into liquefied natural gas or changing liquefied natural gas into natural gas.

(14) "liquefied natural gas pipeline facility"—

(A) means a gas pipeline facility used for transporting or storing liquefied natural gas, or for liquefied natural gas conversion, in interstate or foreign commerce; but

(B) does not include any part of a structure or equipment located in navigable waters (as defined in section 3 of the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 796)).

(15) "municipality" means a political subdivision of a State.

(16) "new liquefied natural gas pipeline facility" means a liquefied natural gas pipeline facility except an existing liquefied natural gas pipeline facility.

(17) "person", in addition to its meaning under section 1 of title 1 (except as to societies), includes a State, a municipality, and a trustee, receiver, assignee, or personal representative of a person.

(18) "pipeline facility" means a gas pipeline facility and a hazardous liquid pipeline facility.

(19) "pipeline transportation" means transporting gas and transporting hazardous liquid.

(20) "State" means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico.

(21) "transporting gas"—

(A) means the gathering, transmission, or distribution of gas by pipeline, or the storage of gas, in interstate or foreign commerce; but

(B) does not include gathering gas in a rural area outside a populated area designated by the Secretary as a nonrural area.

(22) "transporting hazardous liquid"—

(A) means the movement of hazardous liquid by pipeline, or the storage of hazardous liquid incidental to the movement of hazardous liquid by pipeline, in or affecting interstate or foreign commerce; but

(B) does not include moving hazardous liquid through—

(i) gathering lines in a rural area;

(ii) onshore production, refining, or manufacturing facilities; or

(iii) storage or in-plant piping systems associated with onshore production, refining, or manufacturing facilities.

§ 50102. General authority

(a) The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe minimum safety standards for pipeline transportation and for pipeline facilities. The standards—

(1) apply to transporters of gas and hazardous liquid and to owners and operators of pipeline facilities;

(2) may apply to the design, installation, inspection, emergency plans and procedures, testing, construction, extension, operation, replacement, and maintenance of pipeline facilities; and

(3) may include a requirement that all individuals responsible for the operation and maintenance of pipeline facilities be tested for qualifications and certified to operate and maintain those facilities.

(b) A standard prescribed under subsection (a) of this section shall be practicable and designed to meet the need for gas pipeline safety and for safely transporting hazardous liquid. Except as provided in section 50103 of this title, when prescribing the standard the Secretary shall consider—

(1) relevant available—

(A) gas pipeline safety information; or

(B) hazardous liquid pipeline information;

(2) the appropriateness of the standard for the particular type of pipeline transportation or facility;

(3) the reasonableness of the standard; and

(4) the extent to which the standard will contribute to public safety.

(c)(1) The Secretary shall include in the standards prescribed under subsection (a) of this section a requirement that an operator of a gas pipeline facility participate in a public safety program that—

(A) notifies an operator of proposed demolition, excavation, tunneling, or construction near or affecting the facility;

(B) requires an operator to identify a pipeline facility that may be affected by the proposed demolition, excavation, tunneling, or construction, to prevent damaging the facility; and

(C) the Secretary decides will protect a facility adequately against a hazard caused by demolition, excavation, tunneling, or construction.

(2) To the extent a public safety program referred to in paragraph (1) of this subsection is not available, the Secretary shall prescribe standards requiring an operator to take action the Secretary prescribes to provide services comparable to services that would be available under a public safety program.

(3) The Secretary may include in the standards prescribed under subsection (a) of this section a requirement that an operator of a hazardous liquid pipeline facility participate in a public safety program meeting the requirements of paragraph (1) of this subsection or maintain and carry out a damage prevention program that provides services comparable to services that would be available under a public safety program.

(d) The Secretary shall prescribe minimum standards requiring an operator of a pipeline facility to which this chapter applies to maintain, to the extent practicable, information related to operating the facility and, when requested, to provide the information to the Secretary and an appropriate State official. The information shall include—

(1) the business name, address, and telephone number, including an operations emergency telephone number, of the operator;

(2) an accurate map and a supplementary geographic description that show the location in the State of—

(A) major gas pipeline facilities of the operator, including transmission lines and significant distribution lines; and

(B) major hazardous liquid pipeline facilities of the operator;

(3) a description of—

(A) the characteristics of the operator's pipelines in the State; and

(B) products transported through the operator's pipelines in the State;

(4) the manual that governs operating and maintaining pipeline facilities in the State;

(5) an emergency response plan describing the operator's procedures for responding to and containing releases, including—

(A) identifying specific action the operator will take on discovering a release;

(B) liaison procedures with State and local authorities for emergency response; and

(C) communication and alert procedures for immediately notifying State and local officials at the time of a release; and

(6) other information the Secretary considers useful to inform a State of the presence of pipeline facilities and operations in the State.

(e) The Secretary shall prescribe minimum standards requiring an operator of a pipeline facility to which this chapter applies to maintain for the Secretary, to the extent practicable, an inventory with appropriate information about the types of pipe used for the transmission of gas or hazardous liquid, as appropriate, in the operator's system and additional information, including the material's history and the leak history of the pipe. The inventory—

(1) for a gas pipeline facility, shall exclude equipment used with the compression of gas; and

(2) for a hazardous liquid pipeline facility, shall exclude equipment associated only with the pipeline pumps or storage facilities.

(f) The Secretary shall prescribe minimum safety standards requiring that the design and construction of a new gas pipeline transmission facility or hazardous liquid pipeline facility, and the required replacement of an existing gas pipeline transmission facility, hazardous liquid pipeline facility, or equipment, be carried out, to the extent practicable, in a way that accommodates the passage through the facility of an instrumented internal inspection device (commonly referred to as a "smart pig").

(g) A standard prescribed under this section is effective on the 30th day after the Secretary prescribes the standard. However, the Secretary for good cause may prescribe a different effective date when required because of the time reasonably necessary to comply with the standard. The different date must be specified in the regulation prescribing the standard.

(h)(1) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations requiring each operator of a pipeline facility (except a master meter) to submit to the Secretary a written report on any—

(A) condition that is a hazard to life or property; and

(B) safety-related condition that causes or has caused a significant change or restriction in the operation of a pipeline facility.

(2) The Secretary must receive the report not later than 5 working days after a representative of a person to which this section applies first establishes that the condition exists. Notice of the condition shall be given concurrently to appropriate State authorities.

(i) The Secretary shall regulate carbon dioxide transported by a hazardous liquid pipeline facility. The Secretary shall prescribe regulations related to hazardous liquid to ensure the safe transportation of carbon dioxide by such a facility.

§ 50103. Standards for liquefied natural gas pipeline facilities

(a) The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe minimum safety standards for deciding on the location of a new liquefied natural gas pipeline facility. In prescribing a standard, the Secretary shall consider the—

(1) kind and use of the facility;

(2) existing and projected population and demographic characteristics of the location;

(3) existing and proposed land use near the location;

(4) natural physical aspects of the location;

(5) medical, law enforcement, and fire prevention capabilities near the location that can cope with a risk caused by the facility; and

(6) need to encourage remote siting.

(b) The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe minimum safety standards for designing, installing, constructing, initially inspecting, and initially testing a new liquefied natural gas pipeline facility. When prescribing a standard, the Secretary shall consider—

(1) the characteristics of materials to be used in constructing the facility and of alternative materials;

(2) design factors;

(3) the characteristics of the liquefied natural gas to be stored or converted at, or transported by, the facility; and

(4) the public safety factors of the design and of alternative designs, particularly the ability to prevent and contain a liquefied natural gas spill.

(c)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, a design, location, installation, construction, initial inspection, or initial testing standard prescribed under this chapter after March 1, 1978, does not apply to an existing liquefied natural gas pipeline facility if the standard is to be applied because of authority given—

(A) under this chapter; or

(B) under another law, and the standard is not prescribed at the time the authority is applied.

(2)(A) Any design, installation, construction, initial inspection, or initial testing standard prescribed under this chapter after March 1, 1978, may provide that the standard applies to any part of a replacement component of a liquefied natural gas pipeline facility if the component or part is placed in service after the standard is prescribed and application of the standard—

(i) does not make the component or part incompatible with other components or parts; or

(ii) is not impracticable otherwise.

(B) Any location standard prescribed under this chapter after March 1, 1978, does not apply to any part of a replacement component of an existing liquefied natural gas pipeline facility.

(3) A design, installation, construction, initial inspection, or initial testing standard does not apply to a liquefied natural gas pipeline facility existing when the standard is adopted.

(d) The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe minimum operating and maintenance standards for a liquefied natural gas pipeline facility. In prescribing a standard, the Secretary shall consider—

(1) the conditions, features, and type of equipment and structures that make up or are used in connection with the facility;

(2) the fire prevention and containment equipment at the facility;

(3) security measures to prevent an intentional act that could cause a liquefied natural gas accident;

(4) maintenance procedures and equipment;

(5) the training of personnel in matters specified by this subsection; and

(6) other factors and conditions related to the safe handling of liquefied natural gas.

(e) A standard prescribed under this section is effective on the 30th day after the Secretary of Transportation prescribes the standard. However, the Secretary for good cause may prescribe a different effective date when required because of the time reasonably necessary to comply with the standard. The different date must be specified in the regulation prescribing the standard.

(f) A new liquefied natural gas pipeline facility may be operated only after the operator submits an adequate contingency plan that states the action to be taken if a liquefied natural gas accident occurs. The Secretary of Energy or appropriate State or local authority shall decide if the plan is adequate.

(g) This section does not preclude applying a standard prescribed under section 50102 of this title to a gas pipeline facility (except a liquefied natural gas pipeline facility) associated with a liquefied natural gas pipeline facility.

§ 50104. Requirements and limitations

(a) The Secretary of Transportation shall give an interested person an opportunity to make oral and written presentations of information, views, and arguments when prescribing a standard under this chapter.

(b) A design, installation, construction, initial inspection, or initial testing standard does not apply to a pipeline facility existing when the standard is adopted.

(c) A State authority may adopt additional or more stringent safety standards for intrastate pipeline facilities and intrastate pipeline transportation only if those standards are compatible with the minimum standards prescribed under this chapter. A State authority may not adopt or continue in force safety standards for interstate pipeline facilities or interstate pipeline transportation.

(d)(1) When continuity of gas service is affected by prescribing a standard or waiving compliance with standards under this chapter, the Secretary of Transportation shall consult with and advise the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission or a State authority having jurisdiction over the affected gas pipeline facility before prescribing the standard or waiving compliance. The Secretary shall delay the effective date of the standard or waiver until the Commission or State authority has a reasonable opportunity to grant an authorization it considers necessary.

(2) In a proceeding under section 3 or 7 of the Natural Gas Act (15 U.S.C. 717b or 717f), each applicant for authority to import natural gas or to establish, construct, operate, or extend a gas pipeline facility subject to an applicable safety standard shall certify that it will design, install, inspect, test, construct, operate, replace, and maintain a gas pipeline facility under those standards and plans for inspection and maintenance under section 50108 of this title. The certification is binding on the Secretary of Energy and the Commission except when an appropriate enforcement agency has given timely written notice to the Commission that the applicant has violated a standard prescribed under this chapter.

(e) This chapter does not authorize the Secretary of Transportation to prescribe the location or routing of a pipeline facility.

§ 50105. State certifications

(a) Except as provided in this section and sections 50111 and 50118 of this title, the Secretary of Transportation may not prescribe or enforce safety standards and practices for an intrastate pipeline facility or intrastate pipeline transportation if the safety standards and practices are regulated by a State authority (including a municipality if the standards and practices apply to intrastate gas pipeline transportation), and the authority submits to the Secretary annually a certification for the facilities and transportation that complies with subsections (b) and (c) of this section.

(b) Each certification submitted under subsection (a) of this section shall state that the State authority—

(1) has regulatory jurisdiction over the standards and practices to which the certification applies;

(2) has adopted, by the date of certification, each applicable standard prescribed under this chapter or, if a standard under this chapter was prescribed not later than 120 days before certification, is taking steps to adopt that standard;

(3) is enforcing each adopted standard through ways that include inspections conducted by State employees meeting the qualifications the Secretary prescribes under section 50107(d)(1)(C) of this title;

(4) is encouraging and promoting programs designed to prevent damage by demolition, excavation, tunneling, or construction activity to the pipeline facilities to which the certification applies;

(5) may require record maintenance, reporting, and inspection substantially the same as provided under section 50114 of this title;

(6) may require that plans for inspection and maintenance under section 50108 of this title be filed for approval; and

(7) may enforce safety standards of the authority under a law of the State by injunctive relief and civil penalties substantially the same as provided under sections 50117 and 50119(a)(1) and (b)-(f) of this title.

(c)(1) Each certification submitted under subsection (a) of this section shall include a report that contains—

(A) the name and address of each person to whom the certification applies that is subject to the safety jurisdiction of the State authority;

(B) each accident or incident reported during the prior 12 months by that person involving a fatality, personal injury requiring hospitalization, or property damage or loss of more than $5,000 (even if the person sustaining the fatality, personal injury, or property damage or loss is not subject to the safety jurisdiction of the authority), any other accident the authority considers significant, and a summary of the investigation by the authority of the cause and circumstances surrounding the accident or incident;

(C) the record maintenance, reporting, and inspection practices conducted by the authority to enforce compliance with safety standards prescribed under this chapter to which the certification applies, including the number of inspections of pipeline facilities the authority made during the prior 12 months; and

(D) any other information the Secretary requires.

(2) The report included in the first certification submitted under subsection (a) of this section is only required to state information available at the time of certification.

(d) A certification in effect under this section does not apply to safety standards prescribed under this chapter after the date of certification. This chapter applies to each applicable safety standard prescribed after the date of certification until the State authority adopts the standard and submits the appropriate certification to the Secretary under subsection (a) of this section.

(e) The Secretary may monitor a safety program established under this section to ensure that the program complies with the certification. A State authority shall cooperate with the Secretary under this subsection.

(f) If after receiving a certification the Secretary decides the State authority is not enforcing satisfactorily compliance with applicable safety standards prescribed under this chapter, the Secretary may reject the certification, assert United States Government jurisdiction, or take other appropriate action to achieve adequate enforcement. The Secretary shall give the authority notice and an opportunity for a proceeding before taking final action under this subsection. When notice is given, the burden of proof is on the authority to demonstrate that it is enforcing satisfactorily compliance with the prescribed standards.

§ 50106. State agreements

(a) If the Secretary of Transportation does not receive a certification under section 50105 of this title, the Secretary may make an agreement with a State authority (including a municipality if the agreement applies to intrastate gas pipeline transportation) authorizing it to take necessary action. Each agreement shall—

(1) establish an adequate program for record maintenance, reporting, and inspection designed to assist compliance with applicable safety standards prescribed under this chapter; and

(2) prescribe procedures for approval of plans of inspection and maintenance substantially the same as required under section 50108 of this title.

(b) Each agreement shall require the State authority to notify the Secretary promptly of a violation or probable violation of an applicable safety standard discovered as a result of action taken in carrying out an agreement under this section.

(c) The Secretary may monitor a safety program established under this section to ensure that the program complies with the agreement. A State authority shall cooperate with the Secretary under this subsection.

(d) The Secretary may end an agreement made under this section when the Secretary finds that the State authority has not complied with any provision of the agreement. The Secretary shall give the authority notice and an opportunity for a proceeding before ending an agreement. The finding and decision to end the agreement shall be published in the Federal Register and may not become effective for at least 15 days after the date of publication.

§ 50107. State grants

(a) If a State authority files an application not later than September 30 of a calendar year, the Secretary of Transportation shall pay not more than 50 percent of the cost of the personnel, equipment, and activities the authority reasonably requires during the next calendar year—

(1) to carry out a safety program under a certification under section 50105 of this title or an agreement under section 50106 of this title; or

(2) to act as an agent of the Secretary on interstate gas pipeline transmission facilities or interstate hazardous liquid pipeline facilities.

(b) After notifying and consulting with a State authority, the Secretary may withhold any part of a payment when the Secretary decides that the authority is not carrying out satisfactorily a safety program or not acting satisfactorily as an agent. The Secretary may pay an authority under this section only when the authority ensures the Secretary that it will provide the remaining costs of a safety program and that the total State amount spent for a safety program (excluding grants of the United States Government) will at least equal the average amount spent—

(1) for a gas safety program, for the fiscal years that ended June 30, 1967, and June 30, 1968; and

(2) for a hazardous liquid safety program, for the fiscal years that ended September 30, 1978, and September 30, 1979.

(c) The Secretary shall apportion the amount appropriated to carry out this section among the States. A payment may be made under this section in installments, in advance, or on a reimbursable basis.

(d)(1) The Secretary may prescribe—

(A) the form of, and way of filing, an application under this section;

(B) reporting and fiscal procedures the Secretary considers necessary to ensure the proper accounting of money of the Government; and

(C) qualifications for a State to meet to receive a payment under this section, including qualifications for State employees who perform inspection activities under section 50105 or 50106 of this title.

(2) The qualifications prescribed under paragraph (1)(C) of this subsection may—

(A) consider the experience and training of the employee;

(B) order training or other requirements; and

(C) provide for approval of qualifications on a conditional basis until specified requirements are met.

§ 50108. Inspection and maintenance plans

(a)(1) Each person transporting gas or hazardous liquid or owning or operating an intrastate gas pipeline facility or hazardous liquid pipeline facility shall carry out a current written plan (including any changes) for inspection and maintenance of each facility used in the transportation and owned or operated by the person. A copy of the plan shall be kept at any office of the person the Secretary of Transportation considers appropriate. The Secretary also may require a person transporting gas or hazardous liquid or owning or operating a pipeline facility to which this chapter applies to file a plan for inspection and maintenance for approval.

(2) If the Secretary or a State authority responsible for enforcing standards prescribed under this chapter decides that a plan required under paragraph (1) of this subsection is inadequate for safe operation, the Secretary or authority shall require the person to revise the plan. Revision may be required only after giving notice and an opportunity for a proceeding. A plan required under paragraph (1) must be practicable and designed to meet the need for pipeline safety and must include terms designed to enhance the ability to discover safety-related conditions described in section 50102(h)(1) of this title. In deciding on the adequacy of a plan, the Secretary or authority shall consider—

(A) relevant available pipeline safety information;

(B) the appropriateness of the plan for the particular kind of pipeline transportation or facility;

(C) the reasonableness of the plan; and

(D) the extent to which the plan will contribute to public safety.

(3) A plan required under this subsection shall be made available to the Secretary or State authority on request under section 50114 of this title.

(b)(1) The Secretary shall inspect and require appropriate testing of a pipeline facility to which this chapter applies that is not covered by a certification under section 50105 of this title or an agreement under section 50106 of this title. The Secretary shall decide on the frequency and type of inspection and testing under this subsection on a case-by-case basis after considering the following:

(A) the location of the pipeline facility.

(B) the type, size, age, manufacturer, method of construction, and condition of the facility.

(C) the nature and volume of material transported through the facility.

(D) the pressure at which that material is transported.

(E) climatic, geologic, and seismic characteristics (including soil characteristics) and conditions of the area in which the facility is located.

(F) existing and projected population and demographic characteristics of the area in which the facility is located.

(G) the frequency of leaks.

(H) other factors the Secretary decides are relevant to the safety of pipeline facilities.

(2) To the extent and in amounts provided in advance in an appropriation law, the Secretary shall decide on the frequency of inspection under paragraph (1) of this subsection. However, an inspection must occur at least once every 2 years. The Secretary may reduce the frequency of an inspection of a master meter system.

(3) Testing under this subsection shall use the most appropriate technology practicable.

§ 50109. Financial responsibility for liquefied natural gas facilities

(a) When the Secretary of Transportation believes that an operator of a liquefied natural gas facility does not have adequate financial responsibility for the facility, the Secretary may issue a notice to the operator about the inadequacy and the amount of financial responsibility the Secretary considers adequate.

(b) An operator receiving a notice under subsection (a) of this section may have a hearing on the record under section 554 of title 5 not later than 30 days after receiving the notice. The operator may show why the Secretary should not issue an order requiring the operator to demonstrate and maintain financial responsibility in at least the amount the Secretary considers adequate.

(c) After an opportunity for a hearing on the record, the Secretary may issue the order if the Secretary decides it is justified in the public interest.

§ 50110. Pipeline facilities hazardous to life or property

(a) After notice and an opportunity for a proceeding, the Secretary of Transportation may decide a pipeline facility is hazardous if the Secretary decides the facility is—

(1) hazardous to life or property; or

(2) constructed or operated, or a component of the facility is constructed or operated, with equipment, material, or a technique the Secretary decides is hazardous to life or property.

(b) In making a decision under subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary shall consider, if relevant—

(1) the characteristics of equipment used in the facility, including the age, manufacture, physical properties, and method of manufacturing, constructing, or assembling the equipment;

(2) the nature of the materials the facility transports, the corrosive and deteriorative qualities of the materials, the sequence in which the materials are transported, and the pressure required for transporting the materials;

(3) the aspects of the area in which the facility is located, including climatic and geologic conditions and soil characteristics;

(4) the population density and population and growth patterns of the area;

(5) any recommendation of the National Transportation Safety Board made under another law; and

(6) other factors the Secretary considers appropriate.

(c) If the Secretary decides under subsection (a) of this section that a pipeline facility is hazardous, the Secretary shall order the operator of the facility to take necessary corrective action.

(d) The Secretary may waive the requirements for notice and an opportunity for a proceeding under this section and issue expeditiously an order under this section if the Secretary decides failure to issue the order expeditiously will result in likely serious harm to life or property. An order under this subsection shall provide an opportunity for a proceeding as soon as practicable after the order is issued.

§ 50111. One-call notification systems

(a) The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations providing minimum requirements for establishing and operating a one-call notification system for a State to adopt that will notify an operator of a pipeline facility of activity in the vicinity of the facility that could threaten the safety of the facility. The regulations shall include the following:

(1) a requirement that the system apply to all areas of the State containing underground pipeline facilities.

(2) a requirement that a person intending to engage in an activity the Secretary decides could cause physical damage to an underground facility must contact the appropriate system to establish if there are underground facilities present in the area of the intended activity.

(3) a requirement that all operators of underground pipeline facilities participate in an appropriate one-call notification system.

(4) qualifications for an operator of a facility, a private contractor, or a State or local authority to operate a system.

(5) procedures for advertisement and notice of the availability of a system.

(6) a requirement about the information to be provided by a person contacting the system under clause (2) of this subsection.

(7) a requirement for the response of the operator of the system and of the facility after they are contacted by an individual under this subsection.

(8) a requirement that each State decide whether the system will be toll free.

(9) a requirement for sanctions substantially the same as provided under sections 50117, 50119, and 50120 of this title.

(b) The Secretary may make a grant to a State under this section to develop and establish a one-call notification system consistent with subsection (a) of this section.

(c) When apportioning the amount appropriated to carry out section 50107 of this title among the States, the Secretary—

(1) shall consider whether a State has adopted or is seeking adoption of a one-call notification system under this section; and

(2) shall withhold part of a payment under section 50107 of this title when the Secretary decides a State has not adopted, or is not seeking adoption of, a one-call notification system.

(d) This section and regulations prescribed under this section do not affect the liability established under a law of the United States or a State for damage caused by an activity described in subsection (a)(2) of this section.

§ 50112. Technical safety standards committees

(a) The Technical Pipeline Safety Standards Committee and the Technical Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Standards Committee are committees in the Department of Transportation.

(b)(1) The Technical Pipeline Safety Standards Committee is composed of 15 members appointed by the Secretary of Transportation after consulting with public and private agencies concerned with the technical aspect of transporting gas or operating a gas pipeline facility. Each member must be experienced in the safety regulation of transporting gas and of gas pipeline facilities or technically qualified, by training, experience, or knowledge in at least one field of engineering applicable to transporting gas or operating a gas pipeline facility, to evaluate gas pipeline safety standards.

(2) The Technical Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Standards Committee is composed of 15 members appointed by the Secretary after consulting with public and private agencies concerned with the technical aspect of transporting hazardous liquid or operating a hazardous liquid pipeline facility. Each member must be experienced in the safety regulation of transporting hazardous liquid and of hazardous liquid pipeline facilities or technically qualified, by training, experience, or knowledge in at least one field of engineering applicable to transporting hazardous liquid or operating a hazardous liquid pipeline facility, to evaluate hazardous liquid pipeline safety standards.

(c)(1) The members of each committee are appointed as follows:

(A) 5 individuals selected from departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government and of the States.

(B) 4 individuals selected from the natural gas or hazardous liquid industry, as appropriate, after consulting with industry representatives, at least 3 of whom must be currently in the active operation of natural gas pipelines or hazardous liquid pipeline facilities, as appropriate.

(C) 6 individuals selected from the general public.

(2) Two of the individuals selected for each committee under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection must be State commissioners. The Secretary shall consult with the national organization of State commissions (referred to in section 10344(f) of this title) before selecting those 2 individuals.

(d)(1) The Secretary shall give to—

(A) the Technical Pipeline Safety Standards Committee each standard proposed under this chapter for transporting gas and for gas pipeline facilities; and

(B) the Technical Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Standards Committee each standard proposed under this chapter for transporting hazardous liquid and for hazardous liquid pipeline facilities.

(2) Not later than 90 days after receiving the proposed standard, the appropriate committee shall prepare a report on the technical feasibility, reasonableness, and practicability of the proposed standard. The Secretary shall publish each report, including minority views. The report if timely made is part of the proceeding for prescribing the standard. The Secretary is not bound by the conclusions of the committee. However, if the Secretary rejects the conclusions of the committee, the Secretary shall publish the reasons.

(3) The Secretary may prescribe a standard after the end of the 90-day period.

(e) The Technical Pipeline Safety Standards Committee may propose to the Secretary a safety standard for transporting gas and for gas pipeline facilities. The Technical Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Standards Committee may propose to the Secretary a safety standard for transporting hazardous liquid and for hazardous liquid pipeline facilities.

(f) Each committee shall meet with the Secretary at least twice annually. Each committee proceeding shall be recorded. The record of the proceeding shall be available to the public.

(g) The Secretary may establish the pay for each member of a committee when performing duties of the committee. However, a member may not be paid more than the daily equivalent of the rate for GS-18. A member is entitled to reimbursement for expenses under section 5703 of title 5. This subsection does not apply to members regularly employed by the Government. A payment under this subsection does not make a member an officer or employee of the Government.

§ 50113. Public education programs

Under regulations the Secretary of Transportation prescribes, each person transporting gas shall carry out a program to educate the public on the possible hazards associated with gas leaks and the importance of reporting gas odors and leaks to the appropriate authority. The Secretary may develop materials suitable for use in the program.

§ 50114. Administrative

(a) To carry out this chapter, the Secretary of Transportation may conduct investigations, make reports, issue subpenas, conduct proceedings, require the production of records, take depositions, and conduct research, testing, development, demonstration, and training activities. The Secretary may not charge a tuition-type fee for training State or local government personnel in the enforcement of regulations prescribed under this chapter.

(b) To enable the Secretary to decide whether a person transporting gas or hazardous liquid or operating a pipeline facility is complying with this chapter and standards prescribed or orders issued under this chapter, the person shall—

(1) maintain records, make reports, and provide information the Secretary requires; and

(2) make the records, reports, and information available when the Secretary requests.

(c) An officer, employee, or agent of the Secretary, on display of proper credentials to the individual in charge, may enter premises to inspect the records and property of a person at a reasonable time and in a reasonable way to decide whether a person is complying with this chapter and standards prescribed or orders issued under this chapter.

(d) Information related to a confidential matter referred to in section 1905 of title 18 that is obtained by the Secretary or an officer, employee, or agent of the Secretary in carrying out this section may be disclosed only to another officer or employee concerned with carrying out this chapter or in a proceeding under this chapter.

(e)(1) Each accident report made by an officer, employee, or agent of the Secretary may be used in a judicial proceeding resulting from the accident. The officer, employee, or agent may be required to testify in the proceeding about the facts developed in investigating the accident. The report shall be made available to the public in a way that does not identify an individual.

(2) Each report related to research and demonstration projects and related activities is public information.

(f) The Secretary may require testing of a part of a pipeline facility subject to this chapter that has been involved in or affected by an accident only after—

(1) notifying the appropriate State official in the State in which the facility is located; and

(2) attempting to negotiate a mutually acceptable plan for testing with the owner of the facility and, when the Secretary considers appropriate, the National Transportation Safety Board.

(g) On request, the Secretary shall provide the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission or appropriate State authority with information the Secretary has on the safety of materials, operations, devices, or processes related to pipeline transportation or operating a pipeline facility.

(h) The Secretary may—

(1) advise, assist, and cooperate with other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government, the States, and public and private agencies and persons in planning and developing safety standards and ways to inspect and test to decide whether those standards have been complied with;

(2) consult with and make recommendations to other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government, State and local governments, and public and private agencies and persons to develop and encourage activities, including the enactment of legislation, that will assist in carrying out this chapter and improve State and local pipeline safety programs; and

(3) participate in a proceeding involving safety requirements related to a liquefied natural gas facility before the Commission or a State authority.

(i) After consulting with appropriate State officials, the Secretary shall establish procedures to promote more effective coordination between departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government and State authorities with regulatory authority over pipeline facilities about responses to a pipeline accident.

(j) This section does not authorize information to be withheld from a committee of Congress authorized to have the information.

§ 50115. Compliance and waivers

(a) A person transporting gas or hazardous liquid or owning or operating a pipeline facility shall—

(1) comply with applicable safety standards prescribed under this chapter, except as provided in this section;

(2) prepare and carry out a plan for inspection and maintenance required under section 50108 of this title; and

(3) allow access to or copying of records, make reports and provide information, and allow entry or inspection required under section 50114(a)-(d) of this title.

(b) The Secretary of Transportation may issue orders directing compliance with this chapter or a regulation prescribed under this chapter. An order shall state clearly the action a person must take to comply.

(c) On application of a person transporting gas or hazardous liquid or operating a pipeline facility, the Secretary by order may waive compliance with any part of an applicable standard prescribed under this chapter on terms the Secretary considers appropriate, if the waiver is not inconsistent with pipeline safety. The Secretary shall state the reasons for granting a waiver under this subsection. The Secretary may act on a waiver only after notice and an opportunity for a proceeding.

(d) If a certification under section 50105 of this title or an agreement under section 50106 of this title is in effect, the State authority may waive compliance with a safety standard to which the certification or agreement applies in the same way and to the same extent the Secretary may waive compliance under subsection (c) of this section. However, the authority must give the Secretary written notice of the waiver at least 60 days before its effective date. If the Secretary makes a written objection before the effective date of the waiver, the waiver is stayed. After notifying the authority of the objection, the Secretary shall provide a prompt opportunity for a proceeding. The Secretary shall make the final decision on granting the waiver.

§ 50116. Judicial review

(a)(1) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, a person adversely affected by a regulation prescribed under this chapter or an order issued about an application for a waiver under section 50115(c) or (d) of this title may apply for review of the regulation or order by filing a petition for review in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit or in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the person resides or has its principal place of business. The petition must be filed not later than 89 days after the regulation is prescribed or order is issued. The clerk of the court immediately shall send a copy of the petition to the Secretary of Transportation.

(2) A judgment of a court under paragraph (1) of this subsection may be reviewed only by the Supreme Court under section 1254 of title 28. A remedy under paragraph (1) is in addition to any other remedies provided by law.

(b)(1) A person adversely affected by an order issued under section 50109 of this title may apply for review of the order by filing a petition for review in the appropriate court of appeals of the United States. The petition must be filed not later than 60 days after the order is issued. Findings of fact the Secretary makes are conclusive if supported by substantial evidence.

(2) A judgment of a court under paragraph (1) of this subsection may be reviewed only by the Supreme Court under section 1254(1) of title 28.

§ 50117. Enforcement

(a) On the request of the Secretary of Transportation, the Attorney General may bring a civil action to enforce this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter. The court may award appropriate relief, including punitive damages.

(b) In a trial for criminal contempt for violating an injunction issued under this section, the violation of which is also a violation of this chapter, the defendant may demand a jury trial. The defendant shall be tried as provided in rule 42(b) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (18 App. U.S.C.).

(c) This chapter does not affect the tort liability of any person.

§ 50118. Actions by private persons

(a)(1) A person may bring a civil action for an injunction against another person (including the United States Government and other governmental authorities to the extent permitted under the 11th amendment to the Constitution) for a violation of this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter. However, the person—

(A) may bring the action only after 60 days after the person has given notice of the violation to the Secretary of Transportation or to the appropriate State authority (when the violation is alleged to have occurred in a State certified under section 50105 of this title) and to the person alleged to have committed the violation;

(B) may not bring the action if the Secretary or authority has begun and diligently is pursuing an administrative proceeding for the violation; and

(C) may not bring the action if the Attorney General of the United States, or the chief law enforcement officer of a State, has begun and diligently is pursuing a judicial proceeding for the violation.

(2) The Secretary shall prescribe the way in which notice is given under this subsection.

(3) The Secretary, with the approval of the Attorney General, or the Attorney General may intervene in an action under paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(b) The court may award costs, reasonable expert witness fees, and a reasonable attorney's fee to a prevailing plaintiff in a civil action under this section. The court may award costs to a prevailing defendant when the action is unreasonable, frivolous, or meritless. In this subsection, a reasonable attorney's fee is a fee—

(1) based on the actual time spent and the reasonable expenses of the attorney for legal services provided to a person under this section; and

(2) computed at the rate prevailing for providing similar services for actions brought in the court awarding the fee.

(c) In this section, a violation of a safety standard or practice of a State is deemed to be a violation of this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter only to the extent the standard or practice is not more stringent than a comparable minimum safety standard prescribed under this chapter.

(d) A remedy under this section is in addition to any other remedies provided by law. This section does not restrict a right to relief that a person or a class of persons may have under another law or at common law.

§ 50119. Civil penalties

(a)(1) A person that the Secretary of Transportation decides, after written notice and an opportunity for a proceeding, has violated section 50115(a) of this title or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $10,000 for each violation. A separate violation occurs for each day the violation continues. A person is liable for a penalty under this paragraph of not more than $500,000 for a related series of violations.

(2) A person violating a standard or order under section 50103 or 50109 of this title is liable to the Government for a civil penalty of not more than $50,000 for each violation. A penalty under this paragraph may be imposed in addition to penalties imposed under paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(b) In deciding on a civil penalty under this section, the Secretary shall consider—

(1) the nature, circumstances, and gravity of the violation;

(2) with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior violations, the ability to pay, and any effect on ability to continue doing business;

(3) good faith in attempting to comply; and

(4) other matters that justice requires.

(c)(1) The Secretary may request the Attorney General to bring a civil action to collect a civil penalty imposed under this section.

(2) The Secretary may compromise a civil penalty imposed under this section. A compromise may be made only before the Secretary requests the Attorney General to bring a civil action to collect the penalty.

(d) The Government may deduct the amount imposed or agreed on under this section from amounts it owes the person liable for the penalty.

(e) Amounts collected under this section shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

(f) Separate penalties for violating a regulation prescribed under this chapter and for violating an order under section 50110 or 50115(b) of this title may not be imposed under this chapter if both violations are based on the same act.

§ 50120. Criminal penalties

(a) A person willfully and knowingly violating section 50115(a) of this title or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both.

(b) A person willfully and knowingly damaging or destroying, or attempting to damage or destroy, an interstate transmission facility or interstate hazardous liquid pipeline facility shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 15 years, or both.

(c) A person willfully and knowingly defacing, damaging, removing, or destroying a pipeline sign or right-of-way marker required by a law or regulation of the United States shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

§ 50121. Annual reports

(a) The Secretary of Transportation shall submit to Congress not later than April 15 of each year a report on carrying out this chapter for the prior calendar year for gas and a report on carrying out this chapter for the prior calendar year for hazardous liquid. Each report shall include the following information about the prior year for gas or hazardous liquid, as appropriate:

(1) a thorough compilation of the leak repairs, accidents, and casualties and a statement of cause when investigated and established by the National Transportation Safety Board.

(2) a list of applicable pipeline safety standards prescribed under this chapter including identification of standards prescribed during the year.

(3) a summary of the reasons for each waiver granted under section 50115(c) and (d) of this title.

(4) an evaluation of the degree of compliance with applicable safety standards, including a list of enforcement actions and compromises of alleged violations by location and company name.

(5) a summary of outstanding problems in carrying out this chapter, in order of priority.

(6) an analysis and evaluation of—

(A) research activities, including their policy implications, completed as a result of the United States Government and private sponsorship; and

(B) technological progress in safety achieved.

(7) a list, with a brief statement of the issues, of completed or pending judicial actions under this chapter.

(8) the extent to which technical information was distributed to the scientific community and consumer-oriented information was made available to the public.

(9) a compilation of certifications filed under section 50105 of this title that were—

(A) in effect; or

(B) rejected in any part by the Secretary and a summary of the reasons for each rejection.

(10) a compilation of agreements made under section 50106 of this title that were—

(A) in effect; or

(B) ended in any part by the Secretary and a summary of the reasons for ending each agreement.

(11) a description of the number and qualifications of State pipeline safety inspectors in each State for which a certification under section 50105 of this title or an agreement under section 50106 of this title is in effect and the number and qualifications of inspectors the Secretary recommends for that State.

(12) recommendations for legislation the Secretary considers necessary—

(A) to promote cooperation among the States in improving—

(i) gas pipeline safety; or

(ii) hazardous liquid pipeline safety programs; and

(B) to strengthen the national gas pipeline safety program.

(b) The Secretary may submit one report to carry out subsection (a) of this section.

§ 50122. Authorization of appropriations

(a) Not more than the following amounts may be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation to carry out this chapter (except sections 50107, 50108(b), and 50111(b)) related to gas:

(1) $4,086,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990.

(2) $4,270,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1991.

(b) Not more than the following amounts may be appropriated to the Secretary to carry out this chapter (except sections 50107, 50108(b), and 50111(b)) related to hazardous liquid:

(1) $1,021,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990.

(2) $1,067,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1991.

(c)(1) Not more than $5,500,000 may be appropriated to the Secretary for each of the fiscal years ending September 30, 1990, and 1991, to carry out section 50107 of this title.

(2) At least 5 percent of amounts appropriated to carry out United States Government grants-in-aid programs for a fiscal year are available only to carry out section 50107 of this title related to hazardous liquid.

(3) Not more than 20 percent of a pipeline safety program grant under section 50107 of this title may be allocated to indirect expenses.

(d) Not more than the following amounts may be appropriated to the Secretary:

(1) $1,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, to retain the 8 additional inspectors hired in the prior fiscal year and to hire 8 additional inspectors to carry out inspections under section 50108(b) of this title and necessary support staff.

(2) $1,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1991, to retain the 16 inspectors referred to in clause (1) of this paragraph.

(e) Not more than $1,000,000 may be appropriated to the Secretary for each of the fiscal years ending September 30, 1990, and 1991, to carry out section 50111(b) of this title. Amounts under this paragraph remain available until expended.

(f)(1) The Secretary may credit to an appropriation authorized under subsection (a) or (b) of this section amounts received from sources other than the Government for reimbursement for expenses incurred by the Secretary in providing training.

(2) The Secretary may expend in the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, not more than $50,000 appropriated under subsection (a) of this section for that fiscal year to establish a training program for persons that install, operate, and maintain a system of providing natural gas for more than one unit in a definable area (including a building, a mobile home park, a housing project, or an apartment complex) through a master metering system instead of separate meters.

(g)(1) The Secretary shall make available for grants to States amounts appropriated for each of the fiscal years that ended September 30, 1986, and 1987, that have not been expended in making grants under section 50107 of this title.

(2) A grant under this subsection is available to a State that after December 31, 1987—

(A) undertakes a new responsibility under section 50105 of this title; or

(B) implements a one-call damage prevention program established under State law.

(3) This subsection does not authorize a State to receive more than 50 percent of its allowable pipeline safety costs from a grant under this chapter.

(4) A State may receive not more than $75,000 under this subsection.

(5) Amounts under this subsection remain available until expended.

CHAPTER 503—USER FEES

Sec.
50301. User fees.

§ 50301. User fees

(a) The Secretary of Transportation shall establish a schedule of fees for all natural gas and hazardous liquids transported by pipelines subject to chapter 501 of this title. The fees shall be based on usage (in reasonable relationship to volume-miles, miles, revenues, or a combination of volume-miles, miles, and revenues) of the pipelines. The Secretary shall consider the allocation of resources of the Department of Transportation when establishing the schedule.

(b) A fee shall be imposed on each person operating a gas pipeline transmission facility, a liquefied natural gas pipeline facility, or a hazardous liquid pipeline facility to which chapter 501 of this title applies. The fee shall be collected before the end of the fiscal year to which it applies.

(c) The Secretary shall establish procedures to collect fees under this section. The Secretary may use a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government or of a State or local government to collect the fee and may reimburse the department, agency, or instrumentality a reasonable amount for its services.

(d) To the extent provided for in advance in an appropriation law, a fee collected under this section—

(1) related to a gas pipeline facility may be used only for an activity related to gas under chapter 501 of this title; and

(2) related to a hazardous liquid pipeline facility may be used only for an activity related to hazardous liquid under chapter 501 of this title.

(e) Fees established under subsection (a) of this section shall be sufficient to pay for the costs of activities described in subsection (d) of this section. However, the total amount collected for a fiscal year may not be more than 105 percent of the total amount of the appropriations made for the fiscal year for activities to be financed by the fees.

CHAPTER 505—INTERSTATE COMMERCE REGULATION

Sec.
50501. Secretary of Energy.
50502. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.
50503. Effect of enactment.

§ 50501. Secretary of Energy

Except as provided in section 50502 of this title, the Secretary of Energy has the duties and powers related to the transportation of oil by pipeline that were vested on October 1, 1977, in the Interstate Commerce Commission or the chairman or a member of the Commission.

§ 50502. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission has the duties and powers related to the establishment of a rate for the transportation of oil by pipeline or the valuation of that pipeline that were vested on October 1, 1977, in the Interstate Commerce Commission or an officer or component of the Commission.

§ 50503. Effect of enactment

The enactment of the Act of October 17, 1978 (Public Law 95-473, 92 Stat. 1337), the Act of January 12, 1983 (Public Law 97-449, 96 Stat. 2413), and the Act enacting this section does not repeal, and has no substantive effect on, any right, obligation, liability, or remedy of an oil pipeline, including a right, obligation, liability, or remedy arising under the Interstate Commerce Act or the Act of August 29, 1916 (known as the Pomerene Bills of Lading Act), before any department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government, an officer or employee of the Government, or a court of competent jurisdiction.

SUBTITLE IX—COMMERCIAL SPACE TRANSPORTATION

Chapter	Sec.
601. COMMERCIAL SPACE LAUNCH ACTIVITIES	60101

CHAPTER 601—COMMERCIAL SPACE LAUNCH ACTIVITIES

Sec.
60101. Purposes.
60102. Definitions.
60103. General authority.
60104. Restrictions on launches and operations.
60105. License application and requirements.
60106. Monitoring activities.
60107. Effective periods, and changes, suspensions, and revocations, of licenses.
60108. Prohibition, suspension, and end of launch or operation of launch site.
60109. Preemption of scheduled launch.
60110. Administrative and judicial review.
60111. Acquiring United States Government property and services.
60112. Liability insurance and financial responsibility requirements.
60113. Paying claims exceeding liability insurance and financial responsibility requirements.
60114. Disclosing information.
60115. Enforcement and penalty.
60116. Consultation.
60117. Relationship to other executive agencies, laws, and international obligations.
60118. Authorization of appropriations.

§ 60101. Purposes

It is the purpose of this chapter—

(1) to promote economic growth and entrepreneurial activity through use of the space environment for peaceful purposes; and

(2) to encourage the United States private sector to provide launch vehicles and associated launch services by—

(A) simplifying and expediting the issuance and transfer of commercial launch licenses; and

(B) facilitating and encouraging the use of United States Government-developed space technology.

§ 60102. Definitions

In this chapter—

(1) "citizen of the United States" means—

(A) an individual who is a citizen of the United States;

(B) an entity organized or existing under the laws of the United States or a State; or

(C) an entity organized or existing under the laws of a foreign country if the controlling interest (as defined by the Secretary of Transportation) is held by an individual or entity described in subclause (A) or (B) of this clause.

(2) "executive agency" has the same meaning given that term in section 105 of title 5.

(3) "launch" means to place or try to place a launch vehicle and any payload—

(A) in a suborbital trajectory;

(B) in Earth orbit in outer space; or

(C) otherwise in outer space.

(4) "launch property" means an item built for, or used in, the launch preparation or launch of a launch vehicle.

(5) "launch services" means—

(A) activities involved in the preparation of a launch vehicle and payload for launch; and

(B) the conduct of a launch.

(6) "launch site" means the location on Earth from which a launch takes place (as defined in a license the Secretary issues or transfers under this chapter) and necessary facilities.

(7) "launch vehicle" means—

(A) a vehicle built to operate in, or place a payload in, outer space; and

(B) a suborbital rocket.

(8) "payload" means an object that a person undertakes to place in outer space by means of a launch vehicle, including components of the vehicle specifically designed or adapted for that object.

(9) "person" means an individual and an entity organized or existing under the laws of a State or country.

(10) "State" means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, and a territory or possession of the United States.

(11) "third party" means a person except—

(A) the United States Government or the Government's contractors or subcontractors involved in launch services;

(B) a licensee or transferee under this chapter;

(C) a licensee's or transferee's contractors, subcontractors, or customers involved in launch services; or

(D) the customer's contractors or subcontractors involved in launch services.

(12) "United States" means the States of the United States, the District of Columbia, and the territories and possessions of the United States.

§ 60103. General authority

The Secretary of Transportation shall carry out this chapter. In carrying out this chapter, the Secretary shall encourage, facilitate, and promote commercial space launches by the private sector. When necessary, the head of an executive agency shall assist the Secretary in carrying out this chapter.

§ 60104. Restrictions on launches and operations

(a) A license issued or transferred under this chapter is required for the following:

(1) for a person to launch a launch vehicle or to operate a launch site in the United States.

(2) for a citizen of the United States (as defined in section 60102(1)(A) or (B) of this title) to launch a launch vehicle or to operate a launch site outside the United States.

(3) for a citizen of the United States (as defined in section 60102(1)(C) of this title) to launch a launch vehicle or to operate a launch site outside the United States and outside the territory of a foreign country unless there is an agreement between the United States Government and the government of the foreign country providing that the government of the foreign country has jurisdiction over the launch or operation.

(4) for a citizen of the United States (as defined in section 60102(1)(C) of this title) to launch a launch vehicle or to operate a launch site in the territory of a foreign country if there is an agreement between the United States Government and the government of the foreign country providing that the United States Government has jurisdiction over the launch or operation.

(b) The holder of a launch license under this chapter may launch a payload only if the payload complies with all requirements of the laws of the United States related to launching a payload.

(c) The Secretary of Transportation shall establish whether all required licenses, authorizations, and permits required for a payload have been obtained. If no license, authorization, or permit is required, the Secretary may prevent the launch if the Secretary decides the launch would jeopardize the public health and safety, safety of property, or national security or foreign policy interest of the United States.

§ 60105. License application and requirements

(a) A person may apply to the Secretary of Transportation for a license or transfer of a license under this chapter in the form and way the Secretary prescribes. Consistent with the public health and safety, safety of property, and national security and foreign policy interests of the United States, the Secretary, not later than 180 days after receiving an application, shall issue or transfer a license if the Secretary decides in writing that the applicant complies, and will continue to comply, with this chapter and regulations prescribed under this chapter. The Secretary shall inform the applicant of any pending issue and action required to resolve the issue if the Secretary has not made a decision not later than 120 days after receiving an application.

(b)(1) Except as provided in this subsection, all requirements of the laws of the United States applicable to the launch of a launch vehicle or the operation of a launch site are requirements for a license under this chapter.

(2) The Secretary may prescribe—

(A) any term necessary to ensure compliance with this chapter, including on-site verification that a launch or operation complies with representations stated in the application;

(B) an additional requirement necessary to protect the public health and safety, safety of property, national security interests, and foreign policy interests of the United States; and

(C) by regulation that a requirement of a law of the United States not be a requirement for a license if the Secretary, after consulting with the head of the appropriate executive agency, decides that the requirement is not necessary to protect the public health and safety, safety of property, and national security and foreign policy interests of the United States.

(3) The Secretary may waive a requirement for an individual applicant if the Secretary decides that the waiver is in the public interest and will not jeopardize the public health and safety, safety of property, and national security and foreign policy interests of the United States.

(c) The Secretary shall establish procedures and timetables that expedite review of a license application and reduce the regulatory burden for an applicant.

§ 60106. Monitoring activities

(a) A licensee under this chapter must allow the Secretary of Transportation to place an officer or employee of the United States Government or another individual as an observer at a launch site the licensee uses, at a production facility or assembly site a contractor of the licensee uses to produce or assemble a launch vehicle, or at a site at which a payload is integrated with a launch vehicle. The observer will monitor the activity of the licensee or contractor at the time and to the extent the Secretary considers reasonable to ensure compliance with the license or to carry out the duties of the Secretary under section 60104(c) of this title. A licensee must cooperate with an observer carrying out this subsection.

(b) To the extent provided in advance in an appropriation law, the Secretary may make a contract with a person to carry out subsection (a) of this section.

§ 60107. Effective periods, and changes, suspensions, and revocations, of licenses

(a) The Secretary of Transportation shall specify the period for which a license issued or transferred under this chapter is in effect.

(b) On the initiative of the Secretary or on application of the licensee, the Secretary may change a license issued or transferred under this chapter if the Secretary decides the change will comply with this chapter.

(c) The Secretary may suspend or revoke a license if the Secretary decides that—

(1) the licensee has not complied substantially with a requirement of this chapter or a regulation prescribed under this chapter; or

(2) the suspension or revocation is necessary to protect the public health and safety, the safety of property, or a national security or foreign policy interest of the United States.

(d) Unless the Secretary specifies otherwise, a change, suspension, or revocation under this section takes effect immediately and remains in effect during a review under section 60110 of this title.

(e) The Secretary shall notify the licensee in writing of the decision of the Secretary under this section and any action the Secretary takes or proposes to take based on the decision.

§ 60108. Prohibition, suspension, and end of launch or operation of launch site

(a) The Secretary of Transportation may prohibit, suspend, or end immediately the launch of a launch vehicle or the operation of a launch site licensed under this chapter if the Secretary decides the launch or operation is detrimental to the public health and safety, the safety of property, or a national security or foreign policy interest of the United States.

(b) An order under this section takes effect immediately and remains in effect during a review under section 60110 of this title.

§ 60109. Preemption of scheduled launch

(a) With the cooperation of the Secretary of Defense and the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Secretary of Transportation shall act to ensure that a launch of a payload is not preempted from access to a United States Government launch site or launch property, except for imperative national need, when a launch date commitment from the Government has been obtained for a launch licensed under this chapter. A licensee or transferee preempted from access to a launch site or launch property does not have to pay the Government any amount for launch services attributable only to the scheduled launch prevented by the preemption.

(b) In consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, the Secretary of Defense or the Administrator shall decide when an imperative national need requires preemption under subsection (a) of this section. That decision may not be delegated.

(c) In cooperation with the Secretary of Transportation, the Secretary of Defense or the Administrator, as appropriate, shall submit to Congress not later than 7 days after a decision to preempt under subsection (a) of this section, a report that includes an explanation of the circumstances justifying the decision and a schedule for ensuring the prompt launching of a preempted payload.

§ 60110. Administrative and judicial review

(a) After an opportunity for a proceeding under section 554 of title 5—

(1) an applicant under this chapter is entitled to a decision on the record of a decision of the Secretary of Transportation under section 60105(a) of this title to issue or transfer a license with terms or deny the issuance or transfer of a license;

(2) an owner or operator of a payload under this chapter is entitled to a decision on the record of a decision of the Secretary under section 60104(c) of this title to prevent the launch of the payload; and

(3) a licensee under this chapter is entitled to a decision on the record of a decision of the Secretary under—

(A) section 60107(b) or (c) of this title to change, suspend, or revoke a license; or

(B) section 60108(a) of this title to prohibit, suspend, or end a launch or operation of a launch site licensed by the Secretary.

(b) A final action of the Secretary under this chapter is subject to judicial review as provided in chapter 7 of title 5.

§ 60111. Acquiring United States Government property and services

(a)(1) The Secretary of Transportation shall facilitate and encourage the acquisition by the private sector of—

(A) launch property of the United States Government that is excess or otherwise is not needed for public use; and

(B) launch services, including utilities, of the Government otherwise not needed for public use.

(2) In acting under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Secretary shall consider the commercial availability on reasonable terms of substantially equivalent launch property or launch services from a domestic source.

(b)(1) In this subsection, "direct costs" means the actual costs that—

(A) can be associated unambiguously with a commercial launch effort; and

(B) the Government would not incur if there were no commercial launch effort.

(2) In consultation with the Secretary, the head of the executive agency providing the property or service under subsection (a) of this section shall establish the price for the property or service. The price for—

(A) acquiring launch property by sale or transaction instead of sale is the fair market value;

(B) acquiring launch property (except by sale or transaction instead of sale) is an amount equal to the direct costs, including specific wear and tear and property damage, the Government incurred because of acquisition of the property; and

(C) launch services is an amount equal to the direct costs, including the basic pay of Government civilian and contractor personnel, the Government incurred because of acquisition of the services.

(c) The Secretary may collect a payment under this section with the consent of the head of the executive agency establishing the price. Amounts collected under this subsection shall be deposited in the Treasury. Amounts (except for excess launch property) shall be credited to the appropriation from which the cost of providing the property or services was paid.

(d) The head of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government may collect a payment for an activity involved in producing a launch vehicle or its payload for launch if the activity was agreed to by the owner or manufacturer of the launch vehicle or payload.

§ 60112. Liability insurance and financial responsibility requirements

(a)(1) When a license is issued or transferred under this chapter, the licensee or transferee shall obtain liability insurance or demonstrate financial responsibility in amounts to compensate for the maximum probable loss from claims by—

(A) a third party for death, bodily injury, or property damage or loss resulting from an activity carried out under the license; and

(B) the United States Government against a person for damage or loss to Government property resulting from that activity.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall determine the amounts required under paragraph (1)(A) and (B) of this subsection, after consulting with the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Secretary of the Air Force, and the heads of other appropriate executive agencies.

(3) For the total claims related to one launch, a licensee or transferee is not required to obtain insurance or demonstrate financial responsibility of more than—

(A)(i) $500,000,000 under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection; or

(ii) $100,000,000 under paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection; or

(B) the maximum liability insurance available on the world market at reasonable cost if the amount is less than the applicable amount in clause (A) of this paragraph.

(4) An insurance policy or demonstration of financial responsibility under this subsection shall protect the following, to the extent of their potential liability for involvement in launch services, at no cost to the Government:

(A) the Government.

(B) executive agencies and personnel, contractors, and subcontractors of the Government.

(C) contractors, subcontractors, and customers of the licensee or transferee.

(D) contractors and subcontractors of the customer.

(b)(1) A license issued or transferred under this chapter shall contain a provision requiring the licensee or transferee to make a reciprocal waiver of claims with its contractors, subcontractors, and customers, and contractors and subcontractors of the customers, involved in launch services under which each party to the waiver agrees to be responsible for property damage or loss it sustains, or for personal injury to, death of, or property damage or loss sustained by its own employees resulting from an activity carried out under the license.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall make, for the Government, executive agencies of the Government involved in launch services, and contractors and subcontractors involved in launch services, a reciprocal waiver of claims with the licensee or transferee, contractors, subcontractors, and customers of the licensee or transferee, and contractors and subcontractors of the customers, involved in launch services under which each party to the waiver agrees to be responsible for property damage or loss it sustains, or for personal injury to, death of, or property damage or loss sustained by its own employees resulting from an activity carried out under the license. The waiver applies only to the extent that claims are more than the amount of insurance or demonstration of financial responsibility required under subsection (a)(1)(B) of this section. After consulting with the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Secretary of the Air Force, the Secretary of Transportation may waive, for the Government and a department, agency, and instrumentality of the Government, the right to recover damages for damage or loss to Government property to the extent insurance is not available because of a policy exclusion the Secretary of Transportation decides is usual for the type of insurance involved.

(c) The Secretary of Transportation shall determine the maximum probable losses under subsection (a)(1)(A) and (B) of this section associated with an activity under a license not later than 90 days after a licensee or transferee requires a determination and submits all information the Secretary requires. The Secretary shall change the determination as warranted by new information.

(d)(1) Not later than November 15 of each year, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives a report on current determinations made under subsection (c) of this section related to all issued licenses and the reasons for the determinations.

(2) Not later than May 15 of each year, the Secretary of Transportation shall review the amounts specified in subsection (a)(3)(A) of this section and submit a report to Congress that contains proposed changes in the amounts to conform with changed liability expectations and availability of insurance on the world market. The proposed change takes effect 30 days after a report is submitted.

(e) The Secretary of Transportation shall establish requirements consistent with this chapter for proof of financial responsibility and other assurances necessary to protect the Government and its executive agencies and personnel from liability, death, bodily injury, or property damage or loss as a result of a launch or operation of a launch site involving a facility or personnel of the Government. The Secretary may not relieve the Government of liability under this subsection for death, bodily injury, or property damage or loss resulting from the willful misconduct of the Government or its agents.

(f) The head of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government shall collect a payment owed for damage or loss to Government property under its jurisdiction or control resulting from an activity carried out under a license issued or transferred under this chapter. The payment shall be credited to the current applicable appropriation, fund, or account of the department, agency, or instrumentality.

§ 60113. Paying claims exceeding liability insurance and financial responsibility requirements

(a)(1) To the extent provided in advance in an appropriation law or to the extent additional legislative authority is enacted providing for paying claims in a compensation plan submitted under subsection (d) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall provide for the payment by the United States Government of a successful claim (including reasonable litigation or settlement expenses) of a third party against a licensee or transferee under this chapter, a contractor, subcontractor, or customer of the licensee or transferee, or a contractor or subcontractor of a customer, resulting from an activity carried out under the license issued or transferred under this chapter for death, bodily injury, or property damage or loss resulting from an activity carried out under the license. However, claims may be paid under this section only to the extent the total amount of successful claims related to one launch—

(A) is more than the amount of insurance or demonstration of financial responsibility required under section 60112(a)(1)(A) of this title; and

(B) is not more than $1,500,000,000 (plus additional amounts necessary to reflect inflation occurring after Jaunuary 1, 1989) above that insurance or financial responsibility amount.

(2) The Secretary may not provide for paying a part of a claim for which death, bodily injury, or property damage or loss results from willful misconduct by the licensee or transferee. To the extent insurance required under section 60112(a)(1)(A) of this title is not available to cover a successful third party liability claim because of an insurance policy exclusion the Secretary decides is usual for the type of insurance involved, the Secretary may provide for paying the excluded claims without regard to the limitation contained in section 60112(a)(1).

(b) Before a payment under subsection (a) of this section is made—

(1) notice must be given to the Government of a claim, or a civil action related to the claim, against a party described in subsection (a)(1) of this section for death, bodily injury, or property damage or loss;

(2) the Government must be given an opportunity to participate or assist in the defense of the claim or action; and

(3) the Secretary must approve any part of a settlement to be paid out of appropriations of the Government.

(c) The Secretary may withhold a payment under subsection (a) of this section if the Secretary certifies that the amount is not reasonable. However, the Secretary shall deem to be reasonable the amount of a claim finally decided by a court of competent jurisdiction.

(d)(1) If as a result of an activity carried out under a license issued or transferred under this chapter the total of claims related to one launch is likely to be more than the amount of required insurance or demonstration of financial responsibility, the Secretary shall—

(A) survey the causes and extent of damage; and

(B) submit expeditiously to Congress a report on the results of the survey.

(2) Not later than 90 days after a court determination indicates that the liability for the total of claims related to one launch may be more than the required amount of insurance or demonstration of financial responsibility, the President, on the recommendation of the Secretary, shall submit to Congress a compensation plan that—

(A) outlines the total dollar value of the claims;

(B) recommends sources of amounts to pay for the claims;

(C) includes legislative language required to carry out the plan if additional legislative authority is required; and

(D) for a single event or incident, may not be for more than $1,500,000,000.

(3) A compensation plan submitted to Congress under paragraph (2) of this subsection shall—

(A) have an identification number; and

(B) be submitted to the Senate and the House of Representatives on the same day and when the Senate and House are in session.

(e)(1) In this subsection, "resolution"—

(A) means a joint resolution of Congress the matter after the resolving clause of which is as follows: "That the Congress approves the compensation plan numbered —— submitted to the Congress on —— —, 19—.", with the blank spaces being filled appropriately; but

(B) does not include a resolution that includes more than one compensation plan.

(2) The Senate shall consider under this subsection a compensation plan requiring additional appropriations or legislative authority not later than 60 calendar days of continuous session of Congress after the date on which the plan is submitted to Congress.

(3) A resolution introduced in the Senate shall be referred immediately to a committee by the President of the Senate. All resolutions related to the same plan shall be referred to the same committee.

(4)(A) If the committee of the Senate to which a resolution has been referred does not report the resolution within 20 calendar days after it is referred, a motion is in order to discharge the committee from further consideration of the resolution or to discharge the committee from further consideration of the plan.

(B) A motion to discharge may be made only by an individual favoring the resolution and is highly privileged (except that the motion may not be made after the committee has reported a resolution on the plan). Debate on the motion is limited to one hour, to be divided equally between those favoring and those opposing the resolution. An amendment to the motion is not in order. A motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to is not in order.

(C) If the motion to discharge is agreed to or disagreed to, the motion may not be renewed and another motion to discharge the committee from another resolution on the same plan may not be made.

(5)(A) After a committee of the Senate reports, or is discharged from further consideration of, a resolution, a motion to proceed to the consideration of the resolution is in order at any time, even though a similar previous motion has been disagreed to. The motion is highly privileged and is not debatable. An amendment to the motion is not in order. A motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to is not in order.

(B) Debate on the resolution referred to in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph is limited to not more than 10 hours, to be divided equally between those favoring and those opposing the resolution. A motion further to limit debate is not debatable. An amendment to, or motion to recommit, the resolution is not in order. A motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution is agreed to or disagreed to is not in order.

(6) The following shall be decided in the Senate without debate:

(A) a motion to postpone related to the discharge from committee.

(B) a motion to postpone consideration of a resolution.

(C) a motion to proceed to the consideration of other business.

(D) an appeal from a decision of the chair related to the application of the rules of the Senate to the procedures related to resolution.

(f) This section applies to a license issued or transferred under this chapter for which the Secretary receives a complete and valid application not later than November 15, 1993.

§ 60114. Disclosing information

The Secretary of Transportation, an officer or employee of the United States Government, or a person making a contract with the Secretary under section 60106(b) of this title may disclose information under this chapter that qualifies for an exemption under section 552(b)(4) of title 5 or is designated as confidential by the person or head of the executive agency providing the information only if the Secretary decides withholding the information is contrary to the public or national interest.

§ 60115. Enforcement and penalty

(a) A person may not violate this chapter, a regulation prescribed under this chapter, or any term of a license issued or transferred under this chapter.

(b)(1) In carrying out this chapter, the Secretary of Transportation may—

(A) conduct investigations and inquiries;

(B) administer oaths;

(C) take affidavits; and

(D) under lawful process—

(i) enter at a reasonable time a launch site, production facility, assembly site of a launch vehicle, or site at which a payload is integrated with a launch vehicle to inspect an object to which this chapter applies or a record or report the Secretary requires be made or kept under this chapter; and

(ii) seize the object, record, or report when there is probable cause to believe the object, record, or report was used, is being used, or likely will be used in violation of this chapter.

(2) The Secretary may delegate a duty or power under this chapter related to enforcement to an officer or employee of another executive agency with the consent of the head of the agency.

(c)(1) After notice and an opportunity for a hearing on the record under section 554 of title 5, a person the Secretary finds to have violated subsection (a) of this section is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $100,000. A separate violation occurs for each day the violation continues.

(2) In conducting a hearing under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Secretary may—

(A) subpena witnesses and records; and

(B) enforce a subpena in the appropriate district court of the United States.

(3) The Secretary shall impose the civil penalty by written notice. The Secretary may compromise or remit a penalty imposed, or that may be imposed, under this section.

(4) The Secretary shall recover a civil penalty not paid after the penalty is final or after a court enters a final judgment for the Secretary.

§ 60116. Consultation

(a) The Secretary of Transportation shall consult with the Secretary of Defense on a matter under this chapter affecting national security. The Secretary of Defense shall identify and notify the Secretary of Transportation of a national security interest relevant to an activity under this chapter.

(b) The Secretary of Transportation shall consult with the Secretary of State on a matter under this chapter affecting foreign policy. The Secretary of State shall identify and notify the Secretary of Transportation of a foreign policy interest or obligation relevant to an activity under this chapter.

(c) In carrying out this chapter, the Secretary of Transportation shall consult with the head of another executive agency—

(1) to provide consistent application of licensing requirements under this chapter;

(2) to ensure fair treatment for all license applicants; and

(3) when appropriate.

§ 60117. Relationship to other executive agencies, laws, and international obligations

(a) Except as provided in this chapter, a person is not required to obtain from an executive agency a license, approval, waiver, or exemption to launch a launch vehicle or operate a launch site.

(b) This chapter does not affect the authority of—

(1) the Federal Communications Commission under the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 151 et seq.); or

(2) the Secretary of Commerce under the Land Remote-Sensing Commercialization Act of 1984 (15 U.S.C. 4201 et seq.).

(c) A State or political subdivision of a State—

(1) may not adopt or have in effect a law, regulation, standard, or order inconsistent with this chapter; but

(2) may adopt or have in effect a law, regulation, standard, or order consistent with this chapter that is in addition to or more stringent than a requirement of, or regulation prescribed under, this chapter.

(d) The Secretary of Transportation is encouraged to consult with a State to simplify and expedite the approval of a space launch activity.

(e) The Secretary of Transportation shall—

(1) carry out this chapter consistent with an obligation the United States Government assumes in a treaty, convention, or agreement in force between the Government and the government of a foreign country; and

(2) consider applicable laws and requirements of a foreign country when carrying out this chapter.

(f) A launch vehicle or payload that is launched is not, because of the launch, an export for purposes of a law controlling exports.

(g) This chapter does not apply to—

(1) a launch, operation of a launch vehicle or launch site, or other space activity the Government carries out for the Government; and

(2) planning and policies related to the launch, operation, or activity.

§ 60118. Authorization of appropriations

Not more than $———— may be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation for the fiscal year ending September 30, 19—, to carry out this chapter.

70115. Limitation on use of judicial process to obtain possession of goods from common carriers.
70116. Criminal penalty.

§ 70101. Definitions

In this chapter—

(1) "consignee" means the person named in a bill of lading as the person to whom the goods are to be delivered.

(2) "consignor" means the person named in a bill of lading as the person from whom the goods have been received for shipment.

(3) "goods" means merchandise or personal property that has been, is being, or will be transported.

(4) "holder" means a person in possession of a bill of lading and having a property right in it.

(5) "order" means an order by indorsement on a bill of lading.

(6) "purchase" includes taking by mortgage or pledge.

(7) "State" means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, and a territory or possession of the United States.

§ 70102. Application

This chapter applies to a bill of lading when the bill is issued by a common carrier for the transportation of goods—

(1) between a place in the District of Columbia and another place in the District of Columbia;

(2) between a place in a territory or possession of the United States and another place in the same territory or possession;

(3) between a place in a State and a place in another State;

(4) between a place in a State and a place in the same State through another State or a foreign country; or

(5) from a place in a State to a place in a foreign country.

§ 70103. Negotiable and non-negotiable bills

(a)(1) A bill of lading is negotiable if the bill—

(A) states that the goods are to be delivered to the order of a consignee; and

(B) does not contain on its face an agreement with the shipper that the bill is not negotiable.

(2) Inserting in a negotiable bill of lading the name of a person to be notified of the arrival of the goods—

(A) does not limit its negotiability; and

(B) is not notice to the purchaser of the goods of a right the named person has to the goods.

(b)(1) A bill of lading is non-negotiable if the bill states that the goods are to be delivered to a consignee. The indorsement of a non-negotiable bill does not—

(A) make the bill negotiable; and

(B) give the transferee any additional right.

(2) A common carrier issuing a non-negotiable bill of lading must put "non-negotiable" or "not negotiable" on the bill. This paragraph does not apply to an informal memorandum or acknowledgment.

§ 70104. Form and requirements for negotiation

(a)(1) A negotiable bill of lading may be negotiated by indorsement. The indorsement may be made in blank or to a specified person. If the goods are deliverable to the order of a specified person, then the bill must be indorsed by that person.

(2) A negotiable bill of lading may be negotiated by delivery when the common carrier, under the terms of the bill, starts to deliver the goods to a person that has indorsed the bill in blank.

(3) A negotiable bill of lading may be negotiated by a person possessing the bill, regardless of the way in which the person got possession, if—

(A) a common carrier, under the terms of the bill, starts to deliver the goods to that person; or

(B) when the bill is negotiated, it is in a form that allows it to be negotiated by delivery.

(b) The validity of the negotiation of a negotiable bill of lading is not affected when the transferee receives the bill for value, in good faith, and without notice—

(1) that the negotiation of the bill by the transferor is a breach of duty;

(2) of the loss of possession of the bill by its owner; or

(3) of a prior sale, mortgage, or pledge of the bill or of the goods in the possession of a common carrrier and for which the bill was issued.

§ 70105. Title and rights affected by negotiation

(a) When a negotiable bill of lading is negotiated—

(1) the person to whom it is negotiated acquires the title to the goods that—

(A) the person negotiating the bill had the ability to convey to a purchaser in good faith for value; and

(B) the consignor and consignee had the ability to convey to that purchaser; and

(2) the common carrier issuing the bill remains obligated to keep the goods in its possession under the terms of the bill.

(b) When a negotiable bill of lading is negotiated to a person for value in good faith, that person's right to the goods for which the bill was issued is superior to a seller's lien or to a right to stop the transportation of the goods. This subsection applies whether the negotiation is made before or after the common carrier issuing the bill receives notice of the seller's claim. The carrier may deliver the goods to an unpaid seller only if the bill first is surrendered for cancellation.

(c) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, this chapter does not limit a right of a mortgagee or lien holder having a mortgage or lien on goods against a person that purchased for value in good faith from the owner, and got possession of the goods immediately before delivery to the common carrier.

§ 70106. Transfer without negotiation

(a) The holder of a bill of lading may transfer the bill without negotiating it by delivery and agreement to transfer title to the bill or to the goods represented by it. Subject to the agreement, the person to whom the bill is transferred has title to the goods against the transferor.

(b) When a negotiable bill of lading is transferred for value by delivery without being negotiated, the transferee may compel the transferor to indorse the bill if indorsement is essential for negotiation unless a different agreement exists between them. The negotiation is effective when the indorsement is made.

(c)(1) When a transferee notifies the common carrier that a non-negotiable bill of lading has been transferred under subsection (a) of this section, the carrier is obligated directly to the transferee for any obligations the carrier owed to the transferor immediately before the notification. However, before the carrier is notified, the transferee's title to the goods and right to acquire the obligations of the carrier may be defeated by—

(A) garnishment, attachment, or execution on the goods by a creditor of the transferor; or

(B) notice to the carrier by the transferor or a purchaser from the transferor of a later purchase of the goods from the transferor.

(2) A common carrier receives notice under this subsection when its officer or agent (whose duties include acting on the notification) is notified. Notification is effective only when the officer or agent receiving it has had time to communicate with the agent having control or possession of the goods.

§ 70107. Warranties

(a) Unless otherwise agreed, a person negotiating or transferring a bill of lading for value warrants that—

(1) the bill is genuine;

(2) the person has the right to transfer the bill and the title to the goods described in the bill;

(3) the person does not know of a fact that would affect the validity or worth of the bill; and

(4) the goods are merchantable or fit for a particular purpose when merchantability or fitness would have been implied if the agreement of the parties had been to transfer the goods without a bill of lading.

(b) A person holding a bill of lading as security for a debt that in good faith demands or receives payment of the debt from another person does not warrant by the demand or receipt—

(1) the genuineness of the bill; or

(2) the quantity or quality of the goods described in the bill.

(c) A common carrier issuing a bill of lading containing the word "duplicate" or another word indicating the bill is not an orginal bill warrants only that it is an accurate copy of the original bill.

(d) Indorsement of a bill of lading does not make the indorser liable for failure of the common carrier or a previous indorser to fulfill its obligations.

§ 70108. Alteration

The alteration of a bill of lading without authorization from the common carrier issuing the bill does not affect the enforceability of the bill consistent with its original terms.

§ 70109. Liens of common carriers

A common carrier issuing a negotiable bill of lading has a lien on the goods covered by the bill for—

(1) charges incurred after the date of the bill for storage, transportation, and delivery (including demurrage and terminal charges) and expenses necessary to preserve the goods or incidental to transporting them; and

(2) other charges for which the bill expressly specifies a lien is claimed to the extent the charges are allowed by law and the agreement between the consignor and carrier.

§ 70110. Duty to deliver goods

(a) Except to the extent a common carrier establishes an excuse provided by law, the carrier must deliver goods covered by a bill of lading on demand of the consignee named in a non-negotiable bill or the holder of a negotiable bill for the goods when the consignee or holder—

(1) offers in good faith to satisfy the lien of the carrier on the goods;

(2) has possession of the bill and, if a negotiable bill, offers to indorse and give the bill to the carrier; and

(3) agrees to sign, on delivery of the goods, a receipt for delivery if requested by the carrier.

(b) Subject to section 70111 of this title, a common carrier may deliver the goods covered by a bill of lading to—

(1) a person entitled to their possession;

(2) the consignee named in a non-negotiable bill; or

(3) a person in possession of a negotiable bill if—

(A) the goods are deliverable to the order of that person; or

(B) the bill has been indorsed to that person or in blank by the consignee or another indorsee.

(c) A claim by a common carrier that the carrier has title to goods or right to their possession is an excuse for nondelivery of the goods only if the title or right is derived from—

(1) a transfer made by the consignor or consignee after the shipment; or

(2) the carrier's lien.

(d) If a person (except the consignee or the person in possession of a bill of lading) claims title to or possession of goods and the common carrier knows of the claim, the carrier is not required to deliver the goods to any claimant until the carrier has had a reasonable time to decide the validity of the adverse claim or to bring a civil action to require all claimants to interplead.

(e) If at least 2 persons claim title to or possession of the goods, the common carrier may—

(1) bring a civil action to interplead all known claimants to the goods; or

(2) require those claimants to interplead as a defense in an action brought against the carrier for nondelivery.

(f) Except as provided in subsections (b), (d), and (e) of this section, title or a right of a third person is not a defense to an action brought by the consignee of a non-negotiable bill of lading or by the holder of a negotiable bill against the common carrier for failure to deliver the goods on demand unless enforced by legal process.

§ 70111. Liability for delivery of goods

(a) A common carrier is liable for damages to a person having title to or possession of goods when—

(1) the carrier delivers the goods to a person not entitled to their possession unless the delivery is authorized under section 70110(b) (2) or (3) of this title;

(2) the carrier makes a delivery under section 70110 (b)(2) or (3) of this title after being requested by or for a person having title to or possession of the goods not to make the delivery; or

(3) at the time of delivery under section 70110(b) (2) or (3) of this title, the carrier knows it is delivering the goods to a person not entitled to their possession.

(b) A request is effective and a common carrier is deemed to have knowledge under subsection (a) (2) or (3) of this section when a request is made or information is given to an officer or agent of the carrier (whose duties include acting on the request or information) in time to let the officer or agent stop delivery of the goods.

(c)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, if a common carrier delivers goods for which a negotiable bill of lading has been issued without taking and cancelling the bill, the carrier is liable for damages for failure to deliver the goods to a person purchasing the bill for value in good faith whether the purchase was before or after delivery and even when delivery was made to the person entitled to the goods. The carrier also is liable under this paragraph if part of the goods are delivered without taking and cancelling the bill or plainly noting on the bill that a partial delivery was made and generally describing the goods or the remaining goods kept by the carrier.

(2) A common carrier is not liable under paragraph (1) of this subsection—

(A) when delivery is compelled by legal process; or

(B) after the goods are sold lawfully to satisfy a carrier's lien because they have not been claimed or because they are perishable or hazardous.

§ 70112. Liability under negotiable bills issued in parts, sets, or duplicate

(a) A negotiable bill of lading issued in a State for the transportation of goods to a place in the 48 contiguous States or the District of Columbia may not be issued in parts or sets. A common carrier issuing a bill in violation of this subsection is liable for damages for failure to deliver the goods to a purchaser of one part for value in good faith even though the purchase occurred after the carrier delivered the goods to a holder of one of the other parts.

(b) When at least 2 negotiable bills of lading are issued in a State for the same goods to be transported to a place in the 48 contiguous States or the District of Columbia, the word "duplicate" or another word indicating that the bill is not an original must be put plainly on the face of each bill except the original. A common carrier violating this subsection is liable for damages caused by the violation to a purchaser of the bill for value in good faith as an original bill even though the purchase occurred after the carrier delivered the goods to the holder of the original bill.

§ 70113. Liability for non-receipt, misdescription, and improper loading

(a) Except as provided in this section, a common carrier issuing a bill of lading is liable for damages caused by non-receipt by the carrier of any part of the goods by the date shown in the bill and for failure of the goods to correspond with the description contained in the bill. The carrier is liable to the owner of goods transported under a non-negotiable bill (subject to the right of stoppage in transit) or to the holder of a negotiable bill if the owner or holder gave value in good faith relying on the description of the goods in the bill or on the shipment being made on the date shown in the bill.

(b) A common carrier issuing a bill of lading is not liable under subsection (a) of this section—

(1) when the goods are loaded by the shipper;

(2) when the bill—

(A) describes the goods in terms of marks or labels, or in a statement about kind, quantity, or condition; or

(B) is qualified by "contents or condition of contents of packages unknown", "said to contain", "shipper's weight, load, and count", or words of the same meaning; and

(3) to the extent the carrier does not know whether any part of the goods were received or conform to the description.

(c) A common carrier issuing a bill of lading is liable for damages caused by improper loading except when—

(1) the shipper loads the goods; and

(2) the bill contains the words "shipper's weight, load, and count", or words of the same meaning indicating the shipper loaded the goods.

(d)(1) When bulk freight is loaded by a shipper that makes available to the common carrier adequate facilities for weighing the freight, the carrier must determine the kind and quantity of the freight within a reasonable time after receiving the written request of the shipper to make the determination. In that situation, inserting the words "shipper's weight" or words of the same meaning in the bill of lading has no effect.

(2) When goods are loaded by a common carrier, the carrier must count the packages of goods, if package freight, and determine the kind and quantity, if bulk freight. In that situation, inserting in the bill of lading or in a notice, receipt, contract, rule, or tariff, the words "shipper's weight, load, and count" or words indicating that the shipper described and loaded the goods, has no effect except for freight concealed by packages.

§ 70114. Lost, stolen, or destroyed negotiable bills

(a) If a negotiable bill of lading is lost, stolen, or destroyed, a court may order the common carrier to deliver the goods if the person claiming the goods gives a surety bond, in an amount approved by the court, to indemnify the carrier or a person injured by delivery against liability under the outstanding original bill. The court also may order payment of reasonable costs and attorney's fees to the carrier. A voluntary surety bond, without court order, is binding on the parties to the bond.

(b) Delivery of goods under a court order under subsection (a) of this section does not relieve a common carrier from liability to a person to whom the negotiable bill has been or is negotiated for value without notice of the court proceeding or of the delivery of the goods.

§ 70115. Limitation on use of judicial process to obtain possession of goods from common carriers

(a) Except when a negotiable bill of lading was issued originally on delivery of goods by a person that did not have the power to dispose of the goods, goods in the possession of a common carrier for which a negotiable bill has been issued may be attached through judicial process or levied on in execution of a judgment only if the bill is surrendered to the carrier or its negotiation is enjoined.

(b) A common carrier may be compelled by judicial process to deliver goods under subsection (a) of this section only when the bill is surrendered to the carrier or impounded by the court.

§ 70116. Criminal penalty

A person shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both, if the person—

(1) violates this chapter with intent to defraud; or

(2) knowingly or with intent to defraud—

(A) falsely makes, alters, or copies a bill of lading subject to this chapter;

(B) utters, publishes, or issues a falsely made, altered, or copied bill subject to this chapter; or

(C) negotiates or transfers for value a bill containing a false statement.

70302. Prohibitions.
70303. Seizure and forfeiture.
70304. Administrative.
70305. Availability of certain appropriations.
70306. Relationship to other laws.

§ 70301. Definitions

In this chapter—

(1) "aircraft" means a contrivance used, or capable of being used, for transportation in the air.

(2) "vehicle" means a contrivance used, or capable of being used, for transportation on, below, or above land, but does not include aircraft.

(3) "vessel" means a contrivance used, or capable of being used, for transportation in water, but does not include aircraft.

§ 70302. Prohibitions

(a) In this section, "contraband" means—

(1) a narcotic drug (as defined in section 102 of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 802)), including marihuana (as defined in section 102 of that Act (21 U.S.C. 802)), that—

(A) is possessed with intent to sell or offer for sale in violation of the laws and regulations of the United States;

(B) is acquired, possessed, sold, transferred, or offered for sale in violation of those laws;

(C) is acquired by theft, robbery, or burglary and transported—

(i) in the District of Columbia or a territory or possession of the United States; or

(ii) from a place in a State, the District of Columbia, a territory or possession of the United States, or the Canal Zone, to a place in another State, the District of Columbia, a territory or possession, or the Canal Zone; or

(D) does not bear tax-paid internal revenue stamps required by those laws or regulations;

(2) a firearm involved in a violation of chapter 53 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 5801 et seq.);

(3) a forged, altered, or counterfeit—

(A) coin or an obligation or other security of the United States Government (as defined in section 8 of title 18); or

(B) coin, obligation, or other security of the government of a foreign country;

(4) material or equipment used, or intended to be used, in making a coin, obligation, or other security referred to in clause (3) of this subsection; or

(5) a cigarette involved in a violation of chapter 114 of title 18 or a regulation prescribed under chapter 114.

(b) A person may not—

(1) transport contraband in an aircraft, vehicle, or vessel;

(2) conceal or possess contraband on an aircraft, vehicle, or vessel; or

(3) use an aircraft, vehicle, or vessel to facilitate the transportation, concealment, receipt, possession, purchase, sale, exchange, or giving away of contraband.

§ 70303. Seizure and forfeiture

The Secretary of the Treasury or the Governor of Guam or of the Northern Mariana Islands as provided in section 70304 of this title, or a person authorized by another law to enforce section 70302 of this title, shall seize an aircraft, vehicle, or vessel involved in a violation of section 70302 and place it in the custody of a person designated by the Secretary or appropriate Governor, as the case may be. The seized aircraft, vehicle, or vessel shall be forfeited, except when the owner establishes that a person except the owner committed the violation when the aircraft, vehicle, or vessel was in the possession of a person who got possession by violating a criminal law of the United States or a State. However, an aircraft, vehicle, or vessel used by a common carrier to provide transportation for compensation may be forfeited only when—

(1) the owner, conductor, driver, pilot, or other individual in charge of the aircraft or vehicle (except a rail car or engine) consents to, or knows of, the alleged violation when the violation occurs;

(2) the owner of the rail car or engine consents to, or knows of, the alleged violation when the violation occurs; or

(3) the master or owner of the vessel consents to, or knows of, the alleged violation when the violation occurs.

§ 70304. Administrative

(a) Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c) of this section, the Secretary of the Treasury—

(1) may designate officers, employees, agents, or other persons to carry out this chapter; and

(2) shall prescribe regulations to carry out this chapter.

(b) The Governor of Guam—

(1) or officers of the government of Guam designated by the Governor shall carry out this chapter in Guam;

(2) may carry out laws referred to in section 70306(b) of this title with changes the Governor decides are necessary to meet conditions in Guam; and

(3) may prescribe regulations to carry out this chapter in Guam.

(c) The Governor of the Northern Mariana Islands—

(1) or officers of the government of the Northern Mariana Islands designated by the Governor shall carry out this chapter in the Northern Mariana Islands;

(2) may carry out laws referred to in section 70306(b) of this title with changes the Governor decides are necessary to meet conditions in the Northern Mariana Islands; and

(3) may prescribe regulations to carry out this chapter in the Northern Mariana Islands.

(d) The Secretary of the Treasury, or the Governor of Guam or of the Northern Mariana Islands as provided in subsections (b) and (c) of this section, shall carry out the customs laws on the seizure and forfeiture of aircraft, vehicles, and vessels under this chapter.

§ 70305. Availability of certain appropriations

Appropriations for enforcing customs, narcotics, counterfeiting, or internal revenue laws are available to carry out this chapter.

§ 70306. Relationship to other laws

(a) This chapter is in addition to another law—

(1) imposing, or authorizing the compromise of, fines, penalties, or forfeitures; or

(2) providing for seizure, condemnation, or disposition of forfeited property, or the proceeds from the property.

(b) To the extent applicable and consistent with this chapter, the following apply to a seizure or forfeiture under this chapter:

(1) provisions of law related to the seizure, forfeiture, and condemnation of vehicles and vessels violating the customs laws.

(2) provisions of law related to the disposition of those vehicles or vessels or the proceeds from the sale of those vehicles or vessels.

(3) provisions of law related to the compromise of those forfeitures or claims related to those forfeitures.

(4) provisions of law related to the award of compensation to an informer about those forfeitures.

CHAPTER 705—MISCELLANEOUS

Sec.
70501. Damage to transported property.
70502. Transportation of animals.
70503. Payments for inspection and quarantine services.
70504. Medals of honor.

§ 70501. Damage to transported property

(a) A person willfully damaging, or attempting to damage, property in the possession of an air carrier, motor carrier, or rail carrier and being transported in interstate or foreign commerce, shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 10 years, or both. In a proceeding under this section, a shipping document for the property is prima facie evidence of the places to which and from which the property was being transported.

(b) A person may not be prosecuted for an act under this section when the person has been convicted or acquitted on the merits for the same act under the laws of a State, the District of Columbia, or a territory or possession of the United States.

§ 70502. Transportation of animals

(a)(1) Except as provided in this section, a rail carrier, express carrier, or common carrier (except by air or water), a receiver, trustee, or lessee of one of those carriers, or an owner or master of a vessel transporting animals from a place in a State, the District of Columbia, or a territory or possession of the United States through or to a place in another State, the District of Columbia, or a territory or possession, may not confine animals in a vehicle or vessel for more than 28 consecutive hours without unloading the animals for feeding, water, and rest.

(2) Sheep may be confined for an additional 8 consecutive hours without being unloaded when the 28-hour period of confinement ends at night. Animals may be confined for—

(A) more than 28 hours when the animals cannot be unloaded because of accidental or unavoidable causes that could not have been anticipated or avoided when being careful; and

(B) 36 consecutive hours when the owner or person having custody of animals being transported requests, in writing and separate from a bill of lading or other rail form, that the 28-hour period be extended to 36 hours.

(3) Time spent in loading and unloading animals is not included as part of a period of confinement under this subsection.

(b) Animals being transported shall be unloaded in a humane way into pens equipped for feeding, water, and rest for at least 5 consecutive hours. The owner or person having custody of the animals shall feed and water the animals. When the animals are not fed and watered by the owner or person having custody, the rail carrier, express carrier, or common carrier (except by air or water), the receiver, trustee, or lessee of one of those carriers, or the owner or master of a vessel transporting the animals—

(1) shall feed and water the animals at the reasonable expense of the owner or person having custody, except that the owner or shipper may provide food;

(2) has a lien on the animals for providing food, care, and custody that may be collected at the destination in the same way that a transportation charge is collected; and

(3) is not liable for detaining the animals for a reasonable period to comply with subsection (a) of this section.

(c) This section does not apply when animals are transported in a vehicle or vessel in which the animals have food, water, space, and an opportunity for rest.

(d) A rail carrier, express carrier, or common carrier (except by air or water), a receiver, trustee, or lessee of one of those carriers, or an owner or master of a vessel that knowingly and willfully violates this section is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of at least $100 but not more than $500 for each violation. On learning of a violation, the Attorney General shall bring a civil action to collect the penalty in the district court for the judicial district in which the violation occurred or the defendant resides or does business.

§ 70503. Payments for inspection and quarantine services

(a)(1) In this subsection—

(A) "private aircraft" means a civilian aircraft not being used to transport passengers or property for compensation.

(B) "private vessel" means a civilian vessel not being used—

(i) to transport passengers or property for compensation; or

(ii) in fishing or fish processing operations.

(2) Notwithstanding section 451 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1451), the owner, operator, or agent of a private aircraft or private vessel may pay not more than $25 for the services of an officer or employee of the Department of Agriculture, the Customs Service, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, or the Public Health Service (including an independent contractor performing an inspection service for the Public Health Service) when the services are performed on a Sunday, holiday, or from 5 p.m. through 8 a.m. on a weekday, and are related to the aircraft's or vessel's arrival in, or departure from, the United States. However, the owner, operator, or agent does not have to pay for the services from 5 p.m. through 8 a.m. on a weekday when an officer or employee on regular duty is available at the place of arrival or departure to perform services.

(3) The head of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government providing services under paragraph (2) of this subsection shall collect the amount paid for the services and deposit the amount in the Treasury. The amount shall be credited to the appropriation of the department, agency, or instrumentality against which the expense of those services was charged.

(b)(1) An owner or operator of an aircraft is required to reimburse the head of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government for the expenses of performing an inspection or quarantine service related to the aircraft at a place of inspection during regular service hours on a Sunday or holiday only to the same extent that an owner or operator makes reimbursement for the service during regular service hours on a weekday. The head of the department, agency, or instrumentality may not assess an owner or operator of an aircraft for administrative overhead expenses for inspection or quarantine service provided by the department, agency, or instrumentality at an entry airport.

(2) This subsection does not require reimbursement for costs incurred by the Secretary of the Treasury in providing customs services described in section 13031(e)(1) of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 (19 U.S.C. 58c(e)(1)).

§ 70504. Medals of honor

(a) The President may prepare and give a bronze medal of honor with emblematic devices to an individual who by extreme daring endangers that individual's life in trying to prevent, or save the life of another in, a grave accident in the United States involving a rail carrier providing transportation in interstate commerce or involving a motor vehicle on the public streets, roads, or highways. The President may give a medal only when sufficient evidence that the individual deserves the medal has been filed under regulations prescribed by the President.

(b) The President may give an individual who receives a medal a ribbon to be worn with the medal and a knot or rosette to be worn in place of the medal. The President shall prescribe the design for the ribbon, knot, and rosette. If the ribbon is lost, destroyed, or made unfit for use and the individual receiving the medal is not negligent, the President shall issue a new ribbon without charge to the individual.

(c) Appropriations made to the Secretary of Transportation are available to carry out this section.

PORTS OF ENTRY

Sec. 2. (a) The definitions in section 40102(a) of title 49, United States Code, apply to this section.

(b)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may—

(A) designate ports of entry in the United States for civil aircraft arriving in the United States from a place outside the United States and property transported on that aircraft;

(B) detail to ports of entry officers and employees of the United States Customs Service the Secretary considers necessary;

(C) give an officer or employee of the United States Government stationed at a port of entry (with the consent of the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government with jurisdiction over the officer or employee) duties and powers of officers or employees of the Customs Service;

(D) by regulation, apply to civil air navigation the laws and regulations on carrying out the customs laws, to the extent and under conditions the Secretary considers necessary; and

(E) by regulation, apply to civil aircraft the laws and regulations on entry and clearance of vessels, to the extent and under conditions the Secretary considers necessary.

(2) A person violating a customs regulation prescribed under paragraph (1)(A)–(D) of this subsection or a public health or customs law or regulation made applicable to aircraft by a regulation under paragraph (1)(A)–(D) is liable to the Government for a civil penalty of $5,000 for each violation. An aircraft involved in the violation may be seized and forfeited under the customs laws. The Secretary of the Treasury may remit or mitigate a penalty and forfeiture under this paragraph.

(3) A person violating a regulation made applicable under paragraph (1)(E) of this subsection or an immigration regulation prescribed under paragraph (1)(E) is liable to the Government for a civil penalty of $5,000 for each violation. The Secretary of the Treasury or the Attorney General may remit or mitigate a penalty under this paragraph.

(4) In addition to any other penalty, when a controlled substance described in section 584 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1584) is found on, or to have been unloaded from, an aircraft to which this subsection applies, the owner of, or individual commanding, the aircraft is liable to the Government for the penalties provided in section 584 for each violation unless the owner or individual, by a preponderance of the evidence, demonstrates that the owner or individual did not know, and by exercising the highest degree of care and diligence, could not have known, that a controlled substance was on the aircraft.

(5) If a violation under this subsection is by the owner or operator of, or individual commanding, the aircraft, the aircraft is subject to a lien for the penalty.

(c)(1) The Secretary of Agriculture by regulation may apply laws and regulations on animal and plant quarantine (including laws and regulations on importing, exporting, transporting, and quarantining animals, plants, animal and plant products, insects, bacterial and fungus cultures, viruses, and serums) to civil air navigation to the extent and under conditions the Secretary considers necessary.

(2) A person violating a law or regulation made applicable under paragraph (1) of this subsection is liable for the penalties provided under that law or regulation.

(d) A decision to remit or mitigate a civil penalty under this section is final. When libel proceedings are pending during a proceeding to remit or mitigate a penalty, the appropriate Secretary shall notify the Attorney General of the remission or mitigation proceeding.

(e)(1) An aircraft subject to a lien under this section may be seized summarily by and placed in the custody of a person authorized by regulations of the appropriate Secretary or the Attorney General. A report of the case shall be sent to the Attorney General. The Attorney General shall bring promptly a civil action in rem to enforce the lien or notify the appropriate Secretary that the action will not be brought.

(2) An aircraft seized under this section shall be released from custody when—

(A) the civil penalty or amount not remitted or mitigated is paid;

(B) the aircraft is seized under process of a court in a civil action in rem to enforce the lien;

(C) the Attorney General gives notice that a civil action will not be brought under paragraph (1) of this subsection; or

(D) a bond is deposited with the appropriate Secretary or the Attorney General in an amount and with a surety the appropriate Secretary or the Attorney General prescribes, conditioned on payment of the penalty or amount not remitted or mitigated.

(f) A civil penalty under this section may be collected by bringing a civil action against the person subject to the penalty, a civil action in rem against an aircraft subject to a lien for a penalty, or both. The action shall conform as nearly as practicable to a civil action in admiralty, regardless of the place an aircraft in a civil action in rem is seized. However, a party may demand a trial by jury of an issue of fact if the value of the matter in controversy is more than $20. An issue of fact tried by jury may be reexamined only under common law rules.

(g) Necessary amounts may be appropriated to allow the head of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government to acquire space at a public airport (as defined in section 47102 of title 49) when the head decides the space is necessary to carry out inspections, clearance, collection of taxes or duties, or a similar responsibility of the head, related to transporting passengers or property in air commerce. The head must consult with the Secretary of Transportation before making a decision on space.

MASS TRANSPORTATION EXEMPTION

Sec. 3. Chapter 105 of title 49, United States Code, is amended as follows:

(1) Insert immediately after section 10530 the following new section:

"§ 10531. Mass transportation exemption

"(a) The definitions in section 5302 of this title apply to this section.

"(b) A State or local governmental authority may petition the Interstate Commerce Commission for an exemption from the jurisdiction of the Commission under this subchapter for mass transportation the authority provides or has provided to it by contract. Not later than 180 days after the Commission receives a petition and after notice and a reasonable opportunity for a proceeding, the Commission shall exempt the State, local governmental authority, or contractor unless the Commission finds that—

"(1) the public interest would not be served by an exemption;

"(2) the exemption would result in an unreasonable burden on interstate or foreign commerce; or

"(3) a State or local governmental authority may not regulate the mass transportation to be exempt under this section.

"(c) All applicable laws of the United States related to safety and to representation of employees for collective bargaining purposes, retirement, annuities, and unemployment systems, and all other laws related to employee-employer relations, apply to a State or local governmental authority that was granted, or whose contractor was granted, an exemption under this section.

"(d) The Commission may change or revoke an exemption if it finds that new evidence, material error, or changed circumstances exist that materially affect the original order. The Commission may act on its own initiative or on application of an interested party.".

(2) Insert immediately below item 10530 in the analysis of the chapter the following new item:

"10531. Mass transportation exemption.".

LEGISLATIVE PURPOSE AND CONSTRUCTION

Sec. 6. (a) Sections 1–4 of this Act restate, without substantive change, laws enacted before October 1, 1990, that were replaced by those sections. Those sections may not be construed as making a substantive change in the laws replaced. Laws enacted after September 30, 1990, that are inconsistent with this Act supersede this Act to the extent of the inconsistency.

(b) A reference to a law replaced by sections 1–4 of this Act, including a reference in a regulation, order, or other law, is deemed to refer to the corresponding provision enacted by this Act.

(c) An order, rule, or regulation in effect under a law replaced by sections 1–4 of this Act continues in effect under the corresponding provision enacted by this Act until repealed, amended, or superseded.

(d) An action taken or an offense committed under a law replaced by sections 1–4 of this Act is deemed to have been taken or committed under the corresponding provision enacted by this Act.

(e) An inference of legislative construction is not to be drawn by reason of the location in the United States Code of a provision enacted by this Act or by reason of a caption or catch line of the provision.

(f) If a provision enacted by this Act is held invalid, all valid provisions that are severable from the invalid provision remain in effect. If a provision enacted by this Act is held invalid in any of its applications, the provision remains valid for all valid applications that are severable from any of the invalid applications.

REPEALS

Sec. 7. (a) The repeal of a law by this Act may not be construed as a legislative implication that the provision was or was not in effect before its repeal.

(b) The laws specified in the following schedule are repealed, except for rights and duties that matured, penalties that were incurred, and proceedings that were begun before the date of enactment of this Act:

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Frank] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. James] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Frank].

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, there is a procedure where a revision commission works on revising and redrafting and recodifying statutes making no substantive change.

We have before us, as Members will notice, a very thick recodification of Federal laws regarding transportation. No substantive change is made. This is a recodification for ease of reference.

It was shepherded through the full committee by the full committee chairman as is his responsibility under the rules for this particular procedure.

No one has any objection to it. We recommend its adoption as simply a recodification with no substantive change.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4956, a bill prepared by the office of the Law Revision Counsel to codify into positive law the balance of title 49 of the United States Code. This title relates to "Transportation". The various departments and agencies concerned have all signed off on this measure, and the Law Revision Counsel, Mr. Edward Willett, has advised the Judiciary Committee that he is satisfied that H.R. 4956 is an accurate restatement of existing law without substantive change.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the passage of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Frank] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4956.

The question was taken; and (two thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the measure just enacted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

GRANTING THE CONSENT OF CONGRESS TO AMENDMENTS TO THE WASHINGTON METROPOLITAN AREA TRANSIT REGULATION COMPACT

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendments to the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 520), granting the consent of Congress to amendments to the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Regulation Compact.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendments:

Page 2, line 3, strike out "That the" and insert:

Section 1. Congressional Consent.—The

Page 33, after line 10, insert:

Sec. 2. Notwithstanding the first section of this joint resolution, the consent and approval of Congress set forth in such first section is given on the express condition that section 1 of article VIII shall not be exercised, and no amendment to the compact following the date this joint resolution becomes law shall be effective, unless Congress has first consented to and approved such amendment by a law or resolution adopted or enacted after such date.

Sec. 3. The right to alter, amend or repeal this resolution is hereby expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Frank] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. James] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Frank].

□ 0030

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, one of our constitutional duties as the Congress is to ratify compacts between or among the several States. The Subcommittee on Administrative Law, which I chair, and which the gentleman from Florida [Mr. James] is the ranking member, has the legislative jurisdiction over these compacts, and it has been our practice, where the sovereign States or the District of Columbia use their lawful authority, to conclude a compact not to try to substitute our judgment on the policy questions for theirs, absent any claim from individuals in the affected jurisdictions, if their rights have been prejudiced. It has been our practice to give full force and effect to these compacts which have been freely negotiated, and we recommend that we do so in this case.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Joint Resolution 520, giving the consent of Congress to amendments to the Washington metropolitan area transit regulation compact, which was originally entered into in 1960. This interstate compact regulates the business of certain public transportation within the District of Columbia, the State of Maryland and the Commonwealth of Virginia. The agreement ratified by House Joint Resolution 520 amends certain sections of the original compact relating to the assessment of fees, ease of market entry, and enforcement procedures. The House passed this measure on June 5, 1990. The amendment made by the Senate makes it clear that amendments to the compact must be given congressional approval and reserves the right of the Congress to alter, amend or repeal this resolution of consent in the future.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support passage of this measure.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Mazzoli). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Frank] that the House suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendments to the joint resolution House Joint Resolution 520.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate amendments were concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the Senate amendments to House Joint Resolution 520 just concurred in.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

INDIAN CHILD PROTECTION AND FAMILY VIOLENCE PREVENTION ACT

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 1783) to regulate Indian child protection and prevent child abuse on Indian reservations, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

S. 1783

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) Findings.—The Congress, after careful review of the problem of child abuse on Indian reservations and the historical and special relationship of the Federal Government with Indian people,

(1) finds that—

(A) incidents of abuse of children on Indian reservations are grossly underreported;

(B) such underreporting is often a result of the lack of a mandatory Federal reporting law;

(C) multiple incidents of sexual abuse of children on Indian reservations have been perpetrated by persons employed or funded by the Federal Government;

(D) Federal Government investigations of the background of Federal employees who care for, or teach, Indian children are often deficient;

(E) funds spent by the United States on Indian reservations or otherwise spent for the benefit of Indians who are victims of child abuse or family violence are inadequate to meet the growing needs for mental health treatment and counseling for victims of child abuse or family violence and their families; and

(F) there is no resource that is more vital to the continued existence and integrity of Indian tribes than their children and the United States has a direct interest, as trustee, in protecting Indian children who are members of, or are eligible for membership in, an Indian tribe; and

(2) declares that two major goals of the United States are to—

(A) identify the scope of incidents of abuse of children and family violence in Indian country and to reduce such incidents; and

(B) provide funds for mental health treatment for Indian victims of child abuse and family violence on Indian reservations.

(b) Purpose.—The purposes of this Act are to—

(1) require that reports of abused Indian children are made to the appropriate authorities in an effort to prevent further abuse;

(2) establish a reliable data base for statistical purposes and to authorize a study to determine the need for a central registry for reported incidents of abuse;

(3) authorize such other actions as are necessary to ensure effective child protection in Indian country;

(4) establish the Indian Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Grant Program to provide funds for the establishment on Indian reservations of treatment programs for victims of child sexual abuse;

(5) provide for technical assistance and training related to the investigation and treatment of cases of child abuse and neglect;

(6) establish Indian Child Resource and Family Services Centers in each Bureau of Indian Affairs Area Office which will consist of a multi-disciplinary team of personnel with experience and training in the prevention, identification, investigation, and treatment of child abuse and neglect;

(7) provide for the treatment and prevention of incidents of family violence;

(8) establish tribally operated programs to protect Indian children and reduce the incidents of family violence in Indian country; and

(9) authorize other actions necessary to ensure effective child protection on Indian reservations.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

For the purposes of this Act, the term—

(1) "Bureau" means the Bureau of Indian Affairs of the Department of the Interior;

(2) "child" means an individual who—

(A) is not married, and

(B) has not attained 18 years of age;

(3) "child abuse" includes—

(A) any case in which—

(i) a child is dead or exhibits evidence of skin bruising, bleeding, malnutrition, failure to thrive, burns, fracture of any bone, subdural hematoma, soft tissue swelling, and

(ii) such condition is not justifiably explained or may not be the product of an accidental occurrence; and

(B) any case in which a child is subjected to sexual assault, sexual molestation, sexual exploitation, sexual contact, or prostitution;

(4) "child neglect" means negligent treatment or maltreatment of a child by a person, including a person responsible for the child's welfare, under circumstances which indicate that the child's health or welfare is harmed or threatened thereby;

(5) "family violence" means any act, or threatened act, of violence, including any forceful detention of an individual, which—

(A) results, or threatens to result, in physical or mental injury, and

(B) is committed by an individual against another individual—

(i) to whom such person is, or was, related by blood or marriage or otherwise legally related, or

(ii) with whom such person is, or was, residing;

(6) "Indian" means any individual who is a member of an Indian tribe;

(7) "Indian child" has the meaning given to such term by section 4(4) of the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 1903(4));

(8) "Indian country" has the meaning given to such term by section 1151 of title 18, United States Code;

(9) "Indian reservation" means any Indian reservation, public domain Indian allotment, former Indian reservation in Oklahoma, or lands held by incorporated Native groups, regional corporations, or village corporations under the provisions of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.);

(10) "Indian tribe" and "tribal organization" have the respective meanings given to each of such terms under section 4 of the Indian Self Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450b);

(11) "inter-tribal consortium" means a partnership between—

(A) an Indian tribe or tribal organization of an Indian tribe, and

(B) one or more Indian tribes or tribal organizations of one or more other Indian tribes;

(12) "local child protective services agency" means that agency of the Federal Government, of a State, or of an Indian tribe that has the primary responsibility for child protection on any Indian reservation or within any community in Indian country;

(13) "local law enforcement agency" means that Federal, tribal, or State law enforcement agency that has the primary responsibility for the investigation of an instance of alleged child abuse within the portion of Indian country involved;

(14) "persons responsible for a child's welfare" means any person who has legal or other recognized duty for the care and safety of a child, including—

(A) any employee or volunteer of a children's residential facility, and

(B) any person providing out-of-home care, education, or services to children;

(15) "related assistance"—

(A) includes counseling and self-help services to abusers, victims, and dependents in family violence situations (which shall include counseling of all family members to the extent feasible) and referrals for appropriate health-care services (including alcohol and drug abuse treatment), and

(B) may include food, clothing, child care, transportation, and emergency services for victims of family violence and their dependents;

(16) "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior;

(17) "shelter" means the provision of temporary refuge and related assistance in compliance with applicable Federal and tribal laws and regulations governing the provision, on a regular basis, of shelter, safe homes, meals, and related assistance to victims of family violence or their dependents; and

(18) "Service" means the Indian Health Service of the Department of Health and Human Services.

SEC. 4. REPORTING PROCEDURES.

(a) Report to Local Law Enforcement Agency.—(1) Chapter 53 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"Sec. ——. Reporting of child abuse.

"(H) law enforcement officer, probation officer, worker in a juvenile rehabilitation or detention facility, or person employed in a public agency who is responsible for enforcing statutes and judicial orders;

"(2) knows, or has reasonable suspicion, that—

"(A) a child was abused in Indian country, or

"(B) actions are being taken, or are going to be taken, that would reasonably be expected to result in abuse of a child in Indian country; and

"(3) fails to immediately report such abuse or actions described in paragraph (2) to the local child protective services agency or local law enforcement agency, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned for not more than 6 months or both,

"(b) Any person who—

"(1) supervises, or has authority over, a person described in subsection (a)(1), and

"(2) inhibits or prevents that person from making the report described in subsection (a),

shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned for not more than 6 months or both.

"(c) For purposes of this section, the term—

"(1) 'abuse' includes—

"(A) any case in which—

"(i) a child is dead or exhibits evidence of skin bruising, bleeding, malnutrition, failure to thrive, burns, fracture of any bone, subdural hematoma, soft tissue swelling, and

"(ii) such condition is not justifiably explained or may not be the product of an accidental occurrence; and

"(B) any case in which a child is subjected to sexual assault, sexual molestation, sexual exploitation, sexual contact, or prostitution;

"(2) 'child' means an individual who—

"(A) is not married, and

"(B) has not attained 18 years of age;

"(4) 'local law enforcement agency' means that Federal, tribal, or State law enforcement agency that has the primary responsibility for the investigation of an instance of alleged child abuse within the portion of Indian country involved.

"(d) Any person making a report described in subsection (a) which is based upon their reasonable belief and which is made in good faith shall be immune from civil or criminal liability for making that report.".

(2) The table of contents for chapter 53 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"————. Reporting of child abuse.".

(b) Notification of Child Abuse Reports.—(1) When a local law enforcement agency or local child protective services agency receives an initial report from any person of——

(A) the abuse of a child in Indian country, or

(B) actions which would reasonably be expected to result in abuse of a child in Indian country, the receiving agency shall immediately notify appropriate officials of the other agency of such report and shall also submit, when prepared, a copy of the written report required under subsection (c) to such agency.

(2) Where a report of abuse involves an Indian child or where the alleged abuser is an Indian and where a preliminary inquiry indicates a criminal violation has occurred, the local law enforcement agency, if other than the Federal Bureau of Investigation, shall immediately report such occurrence to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(c) Written Report of Child Abuse.—(1) Within 36 hours after receiving a initial report described in subsection (b), the receiving agency shall prepare a written report which shall include, if available—

(A) the name, address, age, and sex of the child that is the subject of the report;

(B) the grade and the school in which the child is currently enrolled;

(C) the name and address of the child's parents or other person responsible for the child's care;

(D) the name and address of the alleged offender;

(E) the name and address of the person who made the report to the agency;

(F) a brief narrative as to the nature and extent of the child's injuries, including any previously known or suspected abuse of the child or the child's siblings and the suspected date of the abuse; and

(G) any other information the agency or the person who made the report to the agency believes to be important to the investigation and disposition of the alleged abuse.

(2)(A) Any local law enforcement agency or local child protective services agency that receives a report alleging abuse described in section 3(3) shall immediately initiate an investigation of such allegation and shall take immediate, appropriate steps to secure the safety an well-being of the child or children involved.

(B) Upon completion of the investigation of any report of alleged abuse that is made to a local law enforcement agency or local child protective services agency, such agency shall prepare a final written report on such allegation.

(d) Confidentiality of Informant.—The identity of any person making a report described in subsection (b)(1) shall not be disclosed, without the consent of the individual, to any person other than a court of competent jurisdiction or an employee of an Indian tribe, a State or the Federal Government who needs to know the information in the performance of such employee's duties.

SEC. 5. CENTRAL REGISTRY.

(a) Preparation of Study.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Attorney General of the United States, is hereby authorized and directed to prepare a written study on the feasibility of, and need for, the establishment of a Central Register for reports or information on the abuse of Children in Indian country.

(b) Content of Study.—The study conducted pursuant to subsection (a) shall include, but shall not be limited to,—

(1) the need for, and purpose of, a Central Register;

(2) the examination of due process implication of the maintenance of such a register;

(3) the extension of access of information contained in the register;

(4) the need and process for expunging information from the register;

(5) the types, and duration of maintenance, of information in the register; and

(6) the classes of persons who should be covered by such register.

(c) The Secretary shall complete the study conducted pursuant to this section and shall submit such study, together with recommendations and draft legislation to implement such recommendations, to the Congress within 180 days after-the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 6. CONFIDENTIALITY.

Pursuant to section 552a of title 5, United States Code, the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 (20 U.S.C. 1232g), or any other provision of law, agencies of any Indian tribe, of any State, or of the Federal Government that investigate and treat incidents of abuse of children may provide information and records to those agencies of any Indian tribe, any State, or the Federal Government that need to know the information in performance of their duties. For purposes of this section, Indian tribal governments shall be treated the same as other Federal Government entities.

SEC. 7. WAIVER OF PARENTAL CONSENT.

(a) Examinations and Interviews.—Photographs, x-rays, medical examinations, psychological examinations, and interviews of an Indian child alleged to have been subject to abuse in Indian country shall be allowed without parental consent if local child protective services or local law enforcement officials have reason to believe the child has been subject to abuse.

(b) Interviews by Law Enforcement and Child Protective Services Officials.—In any case in which officials of the local law enforcement agency or local child protective services agency have reason to believe that an Indian child has been subject to abuse in Indian country, the officials of those agencies shall be allowed to interview the child without first obtaining the consent of the parent, guardian, or legal custodian.

(c) Protection of Child.—Examinations and interviews of a child who may have been the subject of abuse shall be conducted under such circumstances and with such safeguards as are designed to minimize additional trauma to the child and, where time permits, shall be conducted with the advise, or under the guidance, of a local multidisciplinary team established pursuant to section 11 or, in the absence of a local team, a multidisciplinary team established pursuant to section 10.

(d) Court Orders.—Upon a finding of reasonable suspicion that an Indian child has been the subject of abuse in Indian country, a Federal magistrate or United States District Court may issue an order enforcing any provision of this section.

SEC. 8. CHARACTER INVESTIGATIONS.

(a) By Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Health and Human Services.—The Secretary and the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall—

(1) compile a list of all authorized positions within their respective departments the duties and responsibilities of which involve regular contact with, or control over, Indian children,

(2) conduct an investigation of the character of each individual who is employed, or is being considered for employment, by the respective Secretary in a position listed pursuant to paragraph (1), and

(3) prescribe by regulations minimum standards of character that each of such individuals must meet to be appointed to such positions.

(b) Criminal Records.—The minimum standards of character that are to be prescribed under this section shall ensure that none of the individuals appointed to positions described in subsection (a) have been found guilty of, or entered a plea of nolo contendere or guilty to, any offense under Federal, state, or tribal law involving crimes of violence; sexual assault, molestation, exploitation, contact or prostitution; or crimes against persons.

(d) Investigations by Indian Tribes and Tribal Organizations.—Each Indian tribe or tribal organization that receives funds under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act or the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988 shall—

(1) conduct an investigation of the character of each individual who is employed, or is being considered for employment, by such tribe or tribal organization in a position that involves regular contact with, or control over, Indian children, and

(2) employ individuals in those positions only if the individuals meet standards of character, no less stringent than those prescribed under subsection (a), as the Indian tribe or tribal organization shall establish.

SEC. 9. INDIAN CHILD ABUSE TREATMENT GRANT PROGRAM.

(a) Establishment of Grant Program.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services, acting through the Service and in cooperation with the Bureau, shall establish an Indian Child Abuse Treatment Grant Program that provides grants to any Indian tribe or inter-tribal consortium for the establishment on Indian reservations of treatment programs for Indians who have been victims of child sexual abuse.

(b) Grant Applications.—(1) Any Indian tribe or inter-tribal consortium may submit to the Secretary of Health and Human Services an application for a grant under subsection (a).

(2) Any application submitted under paragraph (1)—

(A) shall be in such form as the Secretary of Health and Human Services may prescribe;

(B) shall be submitted to such Secretary on or before the date designated by such Secretary; and

(C) shall specify—

(i) the nature of the program proposed by the applicant,

(ii) the data and information on which the program is based,

(iii) the extent to which the program plans to use or incorporate existing services available on the reservation, and

(iv) the specific treatment concepts to be used under the program.

(c) Maximum Grant Amount.—The maximum amount of any grant awarded under subsection (a) shall not exceed $500,000.

(d) Grant Administration and Final Report.—Each recipient of a grant awarded under subsection (a) shall—

(1) furnish the Secretary of Health and Human Services with such information as such Secretary may require to—

(A) evaluate the program for which the grant is made, and

(B) ensure that the grant funds are expended for the purposes for which the grant was made, and

(2) submit to such Secretary at the close of the term of the grant a final report which shall include such information as the Secretary may require.

(e) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of this section $10,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1992, 1993, 1994, and 1995.

SEC. 10. INDIAN CHILD RESOURCE AND FAMILY SERVICES CENTERS.

(a) Establishment.—The Secretary shall establish within each area office of the Bureau an Indian Child Resource and Family Services Center.

(b) Memorandum of Agreement.—The Secretary and the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall enter into a Memorandum of Agreement which provides for the staffing of the Centers established under this section.

(c) Center Staffing.—Each Center established under subsection (a) shall be staffed by a multidisciplinary-term of personnel with experience and training in prevention, identification, investigation, and treatment of incidents of family violence, child abuse, and child neglect.

(d) Center Responsibilities and Functions.—Each Center established under subsection (a) shall—

(1) provide advice, technical assistance, and consultation to Indian tribes, tribal organizations, and inter-tribal consortia upon request;

(2) provide training to appropriate personnel of Indian tribes, tribal organizations, the Bureau and the Service on the identification and investigation of cases of family violence, child abuse, and child neglect and, to the extent practicable, coordinate with institutions of higher education, including tribally controlled community colleges, to offer college-level credit to interested trainees;

(3) develop training materials on the prevention, identification, investigation, and treatment of incidents of family violence, child abuse, and child neglect for distribution to Indian tribes and to tribal organizations;

(4) develop recommendations to assist Federal and tribal personnel to respond to cases of family violence, child abuse, and child neglect; and

(5) develop policies and procedures for each agency office of the Bureau and service unit of the Service within the area which, to the extent feasible, comply with tribal laws pertaining to cases of family violence, child abuse, and child neglect, including any criminal laws, and which provide for maximum cooperation with the enforcement of such laws.

(e) Multidisciplinary Team Personnel.—Each multidisciplinary team established under this section shall include, but is not limited to, personnel with a background in—

(1) law enforcement,

(2) child protective services,

(3) juvenile counseling and adolescent mental health, and

(4) domestic violence.

(f) Center Advisory Board.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, shall establish, for each Indian Child Resource and Family Services Center, an advisory board to advise and assist such Center in carrying out its activities under this Act. Each advisory board shall consist of 7 members appointed by the Secretary from Indian tribes and human service providers served by an area office of the Bureau. Members shall serve without compensation, but may be reimbursed for travel and other expenses while carrying out the duties of the board. The advisory board shall assist the Center in coordinating programs, identifying training materials, and developing policies and procedures relating to family violence, child abuse, and child neglect.

(g) Application of the Indian Self-Determination Act to Centers.—Indian Child Resource and Family Services Centers established under subsection (a) shall be subject to the provisions of the Indian Self-Determination Act. If a Center is located in an area office of the Bureau which serves more than one Indian tribe, any application to enter into a contract to operate the Center pursuant to such Act must have the consent of each of the other tribes to be served under the contract, except that, in the Juneau Area, only the consent of such tribes or tribal consortia that are engaged in contracting of Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention programs pursuant to such Act shall be required. This section shall not preclude the designation of an existing child resource and family services center operated by a tribe or tribal organization as a Center if all of the tribes to be served by the Center agree to such designation.

(h) Appropriations.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of this section $3,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1992, 1993, 1994, and 1995.

SEC. 11. INDIAN CHILD PROTECTION AND FAMILY VIOLENCE PREVENTION PROGRAM.

(a) Establishment.—The Secretary shall establish within the Bureau an Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention Program to provide financial assistance to any Indian tribe, tribal organization, or inter-tribal consortium for the development of an Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention program.

(b) Indian Self-Determination Act Agreements.—The Secretary is authorized to enter into agreements with Indian tribes, tribal organizations, or inter-tribal consortia pursuant to the Indian Self-Determination Act for the establishment of Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention programs on Indian reservations.

(c) Investigation and Treatment and Prevention of Child Abuse and Family Violence.—An Indian tribe operating an Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention program established under this section shall designate the agency or officials which shall be responsible—

(1) for the investigation of reported cases of child abuse and child neglect; and

(2) for the treatment and prevention of incidents of family violence; and

(3) for the provision of immediate shelter and related assistance for victims of family violence and their dependents.

(d) Program Responsibilities and Functions.—Funds provided pursuant to this section may be used for—

(1) the establishment of a child protective services program which may include—

(A) the employment of child protective services staff to investigate cases of child abuse and child neglect,

(b) training programs for child protective services personnel, law enforcement personnel, and judicial personnel in the investigation, prevention, and treatment of cases of child abuse and child neglect, and

(C) purchase of equipment to assist in the investigation of cases of child abuse and child neglect;

(2) the establishment of a family violence prevention and treatment program which may include—

(A) the employment of family violence prevention and treatment staff to respond to incidents of family violence,

(B) the provision of immediate shelter and related assistance for victims of family violence and their dependents,

(C) training programs for family violence prevention and treatment personnel, law enforcement personnel, and judicial personnel in the investigation, prevention, and treatment of cases of family violence; and

(D) construction or renovation of facilities for the establishment of family violence shelters;

(3) the development and implementation of a multidisciplinary child abuse investigation and prosecution program which may—

(A) coordinate child abuse prevention, investigation, prosecution, treatment, and counseling services,

(B) develop protocols among related agencies to ensure that investigations of child abuse cases, to the extent practicable, minimize the trauma to the child victim, and

(C) provide for the coordination and cooperation of law enforcement agencies, courts of competent jurisdiction, and other tribal, Federal, and State agencies through intergovernmental or interagency agreements that define and specify each party's responsibilities;

(4) the development of tribal child protection codes and regulations;

(5) the establishment of training programs for—

(A) professional and paraprofessional personnel in the fields of medicine, law, education, social work, and other relevant fields who are engaged in, or intend to work in, the field of prevention, identification, investigation, and treatment of family violence, child abuse, and child neglect,

(B) instruction in methods of protecting children from abuse and neglect for persons responsible for the welfare of Indian children, including parents of, and persons who work with, Indian children, or

(C) educational identification, prevention and treatment services for child abuse and child neglect in cooperation with preschool, elementary and secondary schools, or tribally controlled community colleges (within the meaning of section 2 of the Tribally Controlled Community College Act of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 1801));

(6) other community education efforts for tribal members (including school children) regarding issues of family violence, child abuse, and child neglect; and

(7) such other innovative and culturally relevant programs and projects as the Secretary may approve, including programs and projects for—

(A) parental awareness and self-help.

(B) prevention and treatment of alcohol and drug-related family violence, child abuse, and child neglect, or

(C) home health visitor programs, that show promise of successfully preventing and treating cases of family violence, child abuse, and child neglect.

(f) Secretarial Regulations; Base Support Funding.—(1) The Secretary, with the participation of Indian tribes, shall establish, and promulgate by regulations, a formula which establishes base support funding for Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention programs.

(2) In the development of regulations for base support funding for such programs, the Secretary shall develop, in consultation with Indian tribes, appropriate caseload standards and staffing requirements which are comparable to standards developed by the National Association of Social Work, the Child Welfare League of America and other professional associations in the field of social work and child welfare. Each level of funding assistance shall correspond to the staffing requirements established by the Secretary pursuant to this section.

(3) Factors to be considered in the development of the base support funding formula shall include, but are not limited to—

(A) projected service population of the program;

(B) projected service area of the program;

(C) projected number of cases per month; and

(D) special circumstances warranting additional program resources, such as high incidence of child sexual abuse, high incidence of violent crimes against women, or the existence of a significant victim population within the community.

(4) The formula established pursuant to this subsection shall provide funding necessary to support—

(A) one child protective services or family violence caseworker, including fringe benefits and support costs, for each tribe; and

(B) an additional child protective services and family violence caseworker, including fringe benefits and support costs, for each level of assistance for which an Indian tribe qualifies.

(5) In any fiscal year that appropriations are not sufficient to fully fund Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention programs at each level of assistance under the formula required to be established in this subsection, available funds for each level of assistance shall be evenly divided among the tribes qualifying for that level of assistance.

(g) Maintenance of Effort.—Services provided, under contracts made under this section shall supplement, not supplant, services from any other funds available for the same general purposes, including, but not limited to—

(1) treatment, including, but not limited to—

(A) individual counseling,

(B) group counseling, and

(C) family counseling;

(2) social services and case management;

(3) training available to Indian tribes, tribal agencies, and Indian organizations regarding the identification, investigation, prevention, and treatment of family violence, child abuse, and child neglect; and

(4) law enforcement services, including investigations and prosecutions.

(h) Contract Evaluation and Annual Report.—Each recipient of funds awarded pursuant to subsection (a) shall—

(1) furnish the Secretary with such information as the Secretary may require to—

(A) evaluate the program for which the award is made, and

(B) ensure that funds are expended for the purposes for which the award was made; and

(2) submit to the Secretary at the end of each fiscal year an annual report which shall include such information as the Secretary may require.

(i) Appropriations.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of this section $30,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1992, 1993, 1994, and 1995.

SEC. 12. REPORT.

On or before March 1, 1991, and March 1 of each calendar year thereafter, the Secretary shall submit to the Congress a report involving the administration of this Act during the calendar year preceding the calendar year in which such report is submitted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. Richardson] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. Rhodes] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. Richardson].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the Senate bill presently under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Mexico?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to bring before the House for its consideration S. 1783, the Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention Act. This legislation is a product of numerous hearings conducted by both the House and Senate which focused on the growing problems of child abuse and neglect in Indian country.

This issue first came to the attention of Congress in 1989, when the Special Senate Committee on Investigations focused on the problems of sexual molestation of nearly 200 Navajo, Hopi, and Cherokee children by Federal teachers and employees of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The facts were shocking. On the Cherokee Reservation, a BIA teacher molested young boys over a period of 14 years, despite reports from parents and teachers. In the case of the Hopi Reservation, over 142 children were victimized over an 8-year period by a BIA teacher. Prior to this teacher's arrest by Federal authorities, a Navajo County deputy sheriff reported to BIA school officials that there were allegations of child sexual abuse against this teacher and that a criminal investigation was being conducted. The BIA took no administrative action and no BIA officials were reprimanded for their inaction on these cases.

It seems unconscionable to me that each of the 50 States has enacted a mandatory reporting law for child abuse and neglect, yet, Congress has never developed similar mandatory reporting laws for Indian country. During the hearings conducted by the House Interior Committee on Indian child abuse, it became apparent that there were serious inadequacies in the current system. The committee found that incidents of child abuse on Indian reservations were grossly underreported, background checks on BIA and Indian Health Service employees who work with children are inadequate, investigation and enforcement efforts are often ineffective, and treatment of victims is almost nonexistent.

S. 1783, among other things, imposes new mandatory reporting requirements for cases of child abuse in Indian country, imposes clear requirements for character and background checks on persons being considered for Federal employment, establishes a child sexual abuse treatment grant program, and establishes comprehensive education, prevention and treatment programs for Indian reservations.

Mr. Speaker, I think that it is clear that we need to improve the current system so that Indian children are protected. In addition, for the numerous children who are or were victims of sexual abuse, we need to provide adequate counseling and treatment and provide the basic infrastructure at the local level to ensure that treatment and prevention efforts are available. S. 1783 addresses these issues.

Mr. Speaker, the committee amended S. 1783 to incorporate the revised text of two Senate bills which were pending before the committee, S. 1783 and S. 2340.

S. 1783, as passed by the Senate, established new Federal requirements for the mandatory reporting of child abuse in Indian country, required the establishment of a central register for reports of child abuse, imposed new requirements on the BIA and the IHS to do background checks on employees working with Indian children, and provided for an Indian child sexual abuse treatment grant program.

Testimony of Indian tribes before our committee and the Senate committee made clear their discontent that the bill did not go far enough in the area of education, prevention, and treatment of child abuse. In addition, the tribes wanted legislation which more directly recognized their role in dealing with the problem of child abuse.

As a consequence, the Senate considered and passed S. 2340 which establishes a more comprehensive program for dealing with child abuse and family violence on Indian reservations.

S. 1783, as amended by the committee, combines and melds these two bills into one bill. In merging the two bills, duplicative and unnecessary matter is eliminated. In addition, it makes numerous technical and clarifying changes in the Senate language.

The first major substantive change was to eliminate the provision which requires the establishment of a central register of child abuse reports. While I believe that such a mechanism may well be needed, the administration and others were concerned about the ability of the BIA to protect the confidentiality of such information and the implications for the abuse of the due process rights of persons who are alleged to be abusers. As a consequence, the committee deleted that requirement and inserted, instead, a requirement for a study of the need for such a register.

The second major change made by the committee is to strike all of section 9 of S. 1783 as passed by the Senate. This provision amended the Victims of Crimes Act to provide for the funding of Indian child abuse treatment grants. This act falls within the jurisdiction of the Judiciary Committee. Our committee was advised that the Judiciary Committee objected to any amendment of that act. As a consequence, the committee deleted that section, but did add an appropriation authorization to the grant section of the bill for the same amount which would have been derived from the VOCA program.

Mr. Speaker, S. 1783, as amended by the committee, goes a long way toward addressing the growing crisis in Indian country of child abuse, child neglect, and family violence. I urge the House to act favorably on this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 1783, the Indian Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act. This bill is the product of extensive hearings in both the Senate and the House, and has the potential for being one of the most important pieces of legislation the committee has considered in recent times.

Child abuse reporting and prevention has been largely a responsibility of State social services and law enforcement programs, and as a result, Indian reservations have lagged behind the rest of the country with regard to such services. The hearings we have had on this matter have brought to our attention the need for Federal legislation to remedy this situation.

I believe this legislation is important for several reasons.

It establishes the framework for a comprehensive Indian child welfare program on Indian reservations.

It establishes legal requirements similar to those that exist in the 50 States, for reporting instances of child abuse, so that persons who abuse children can be identified and prosecuted.

It contains treatment and prevention programs for the child victims—a necessary safety net once the reporting requirements kick in and begin to identify victims more effectively. Many of the witnesses at our hearings were social workers and mental health care professionals who pointed out quite correctly that reporting of abuses and identification of child victims are meaningless without the followup support services for the child victims.

It promotes interagency cooperation between tribes, the Interior Department, the Justice Department, and Indian Health Services in the identification, investigation, prosecution, treatment, and prevention of child abuse and neglect on Indian reservations.

Although this bill envisions an annual budgetary outlay of $43 million in order to be fully effective, I believe it is a small price to pay in order to halt and prevent the cycles of child abuse that appear to be occurring on Indian reservations.

For all of these reasons I support passage of S. 1783 and urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Native American Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention Act. And I do so with a keen awareness of the need for this, and related legislation. I want to sketch out why I feel the House should pass this bill forthwith.

As a resident of North Dakota, I have long been troubled by the mind-boggling problem of poverty on our Indian reservations. Since beginning my service in Congress 10 years ago, I have become even more acutely aware of other problems arising from poverty, including malnutrition and diabetes, alcoholism and child abuse, and joblessness, and inadequate educational opportunities.

During the past few years, I have conducted several hearings on North Dakota reservations to get at the roots of these various problems. On the Fort Berthold Reservation, for example, I learned during a Hunger Committee hearing that tribal members were suffering from diabetes rates 12 times as high as the national average. Many of these people were obliged travel over 100 miles several times per week for dialysis treatment arising from complications of diabetes.

In response, I worked with the late Chairman Mickey Leland, Chairman MORRIS UDALL of the Interior Committee, and Chairman SIDNEY YATES to designate the three affiliated tribes at Fort Berthold as a tribe eligible to obtain a model diabetes center. That center was named the Mickey Leland Model Diabetes Center in honor of Mickey's work on this issue. We now have some additional resources in place to stem the alarming diabetes rate at Fort Berthold through programs of treatment, prevention, and education.

I subsequently discovered at a fact-finding hearing at the Turtle Mountain Reservation that tribal members were being shortchanged on such services as higher education, child welfare, and law enforcement. Again, Chairman YATES of the Interior Appropriations Subcommittee cooperated with me in shifting resources to meet these critical needs in order that motivated students could get a higher education and that child abuse cases would be promptly investigated and prosecuted.

CHILD ABUSE HEARING NEED FOR ACTION

Most recently, I conducted hearings about the daunting problems of malnutrition and child abuse on the Standing Rock Sioux Reservation. Working with Chairman TONY HALL of the Hunger Committee, I have pressed the U.S. Department of Agriculture to ensure that the food assistance program on Indian reservations provides wholesome and healthful food and to insist that the program responds to the specific nutritional needs of native Americans. We have also requested private studies and a GAO review of this program. This should help curb such practices as sending very fatty foods to recipients who are very vulnerable to diabetes and heart disease.

In the meantime, we have worked with tribal officials in North Dakota to improve the availability, delivery, and suitability of foods used in commodity and senior feeding programs. We also have encouraged more cooperation between the tribe and the State agencies.

In one sense, malnutrition and unsuitable feeding programs result in child neglect. But perhaps the most perplexing and disturbing problem of any that I have encountered on the reservations is physical abuse of children. Recent reports and testimony which I have received have prompted me to request an investigation by the Inspector General of the Interior Department about the breakdown of child protection in the particular case of a young girl who was savagely beaten while under tribally approved foster care. It also prompted me to seek the Interior Committee's support of increased resources for child protection teams, tougher standards for foster care homes, and increased efforts by the Bureau of Indian Affairs to prevent child abuse.

Interior Investigations Subcommittee Chairman PETER KOSTMAYER and I heard heart-rending stories about widespread abuse of Indian children. We heard one tribal chairperson report that three-fourths of child abuse cases are not investigated. In such a limited and emotionally charged situation it was not possible to confirm every allegation. And our purpose was not to suggest no one at the BIA cares about child abuse. But it was clear that the system is not working effectively. So we immediately urged the BIA officials at the hearing to realign their priorities and to initiate positive programs to eliminate this social cancer. I am including for the RECORD an article from the Bismarck Tribune about this hearing in order that my colleagues might better appreciate the nature of this problem.

LEGISLATION PROVIDES PART OF THE SOLUTION

The bill before us will address several of the problems to which I alluded before. It establishes strict and prompt reporting requirements for government personnel who might become aware of suspected child abuse or neglect. It further mandates immediate investigation of such reports by local law enforcement agencies or the FBI. The bill also directs tribes to do character checks on individuals employed in positions with regular contact with children. It further provides grants for child abuse treatment, establishes a central registry on child abuse, sets up Indian child resource and child protection centers.

While I support these initiatives, they will only bear fruit if Federal Indian agencies—the BIA and Indian Health Service, tribal governments, and law enforcement agencies vigorously carry out these new programs and assiduously enforce the law. Congress, too, must maintain rigorous oversight as part of its trust responsibility for the welfare of Indian children. We must do a better job of protecting these innocent victims of abuse. I might also observe that we can expect no significant reduction in child abuse without increasing Indian job opportunities and curtailing the overwhelming incidence of alcoholism on reservations.

In conclusion, I would reflect that child abuse on reservations requires the same kind of attention as child abuse in the wider population. Families, churches, civic groups, and all citizens have a responsibility to end child abuse. Without stronger families, Federal programs can only hope to keep things from getting worse. Unless hard work and personal respect are revered as values, tribal officials will fight a losing battle. We must marshall all available resources to stop child abuse and neglect wherever they occur.

HUNDREDS OF CHILDREN ABUSED—INDIANS TELL CONGRESSMEN CRUELTY GOES UNCHECKED

(By Deneen Gilmour)

One case of child abuse was reported every day last year on the Turtle Mountain Indian Reservation. Forty-nine cases of child sexual abuse were reported in the same time period.

Even more tragic, said Tribal Chairwoman Twila Martin-Kekahbah, was that only the most gruesome cases were investigated. The rest, about 75 percent, were left to linger on the desks of the reservation's two-person criminal investigation staff.

"Meanwhile children suffer at the hands of abusers," Martin-Kekahbah told Rep. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., and Rep. Peter Kostmayer, D-Pa. The congressmen were in Bismarck on Thursday to conduct a hearing on Native American child abuse at United Tribes Technical College.

The congressmen will report their findings to the Oversight and Investigative Subcommittee of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee. The Bismarck hearing is one of a nationwide series at which congressmen will assess the role and effectiveness of the Bureau of Indian Affairs regarding child abuse.

Like other tribal leaders at the hearing, Martin-Kekahbah begged the congressmen for more money to address the problem. And like about 20 reservation residents who streamed forward during a 45-minute open microphone period, she described atrocities perpetrated against children.

"One case goes beyond human endurance in which a child's genitals were burned with cigarettes," Martin-Kekahbah said. "Another boy asked social services to take him out of his home. Nobody did. He later killed himself. Afterwards an investigation showed he was regularly abused by his father. Last month an 8-month-old infant starved to death because of parental neglect."

After decades of rampant alcoholism and more than 60 percent unemployment rates, the social fiber of reservations is unraveling. Depending upon local tribal and Bureau of Indian Affairs leadership, most reservations lack the money or initiative to address the horrors of child abuse.

The situation Martin-Kekahbah described is similar to the sad state of affairs on North Dakota's other three reservations.

Tribal courts are short of staff and money. At Turtle Mountain, 40 percent of pending court cases could not be heard last year. Child welfare workers handle caseloads five or six times greater than the national average.

Law officers handle immediate crises like burglary and assault while child abuse is shuffled to the back burner. "The longer a case sits the harder it is to prosecute," Martin-Kekahbah said. She said an abuse case requires two to three times as much time to investigate as a burglary.

Martin-Kekahbah came armed with more meaningful statistics than the other tribal chairmen. But all tribal leaders echoed this request: we need at least twice as much money and staff.

"Our very future as a tribe rests on our children being brought up in a healthy environment," said Standing Rock councilman Tom Irons, speaking on behalf of Tribal Chairman Charles Murphy.

Irons, who carries the tribe's Health, Education and Welfare portfolio, requested tribal funding nearly equal to Fort Yates BIA Social Services budget of $393,000. He said the money would fund eight full-time workers in child psychology, investigations, foster care and quality assurance.

Austin Gillette of the Fort Berthold Tribal Council told the congressmen $870,000 would help the Three Affiliated Tribes eradicate child abuse. Gillette also said economic development would help dysfunctional families since "95 percent of the abuse happens in unemployed families."

After listening to pleas for money, Kostmayer asked the tribal representatives how Congress could be assured tribes would take the lead in curbing child abuse when they hadn't in the past.

Irons replied that given enough funding, the tribal council would do a better job of hiring qualified people than BIA has.

In answer to a question from Dorgan, Irons and Gillette admitted their reservations have mandatory child abuse reporting laws but couldn't think of a single person prosecuted for knowing about abuse and failing to report it.

"Peter Kostmayer and I have toured refugee camps worldwide and it breaks my heart to hear testimony like this so close to home," Dorgan said. "These things shouldn't happen in this country. We've got to do something about it quickly. The children rely on us. Child abuse is a problem nationwide but Congress has a special trust responsibility to Indian children. We're their protectors. But we can't solve this problem only with dollars. BIA and tribes must apply themselves and work together."

The two-hour hearing was punctuated by a stream of "grassroots people" who approached the microphone, sometimes tearfully, to relate instances of violence inflicted on children.

Most of the grassroots people said money alone wouldn't prevent child abuse.

"Pouring more money into the existing machine won't help," said Mary Louise Defender Wilson, a human and civil rights activist from Standing Rock. "More money only means the oppressors get stronger. What we need to do is employ people who respect human rights."

After the Tribune began in January to write stories about child abuse on Standing Rock Reservation, BIA gave the Fort Yates social services office almost $100,000 extra funding to reduce staggering social worker case loads.

"We've seen no improvement from that money," said Phyllis Wilcox of Fort Yates. "The only people on the child protection team are from BIA or the tribal office. They're in collusion and protect each other. Interested citizens should be on the team."

Said Reginald Bird House of Wakpala, S.D.: "In 1987 the Standing Rock Tribal Council reported no incidents of child abuse. That's the year my grandchildren were abused (in a BIA-approved foster home). The system stinks and it doesn't work for some Indian people."

Bird House said BIA and the tribal council purposely cover up child abuse and use money intended for the children to fund out-of-state junkets. He also said tribal council judges are afraid to take a stand on child abuse because they fear tribal councilmen will fire them.

Carole Defender, Fort Yates, said social workers did nothing when she reported her eighth-grade daughter suffered a concussion from a beating by class mates at school.

Lawrence St. John, Selfridge, wept as he told of the June 30 death of his 1-year-old son, who had been placed in foster care. The boy was left in an air-conditioned room and apparently caught pneumonia.

"We need mandatory abuse reporting guidelines," said Tribal Judge Peter Belgarde of Fort Totten Reservation. "We also have a total lack of background checks. Anybody who knows how to fill out a form could become a foster parent—even the worst criminal," the judge said.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. RICHARDSON] that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 1783, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REDEFINING ELIGIBILITY FOR MEMBERSHIP IN THE AMERICAN LEGION

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from further consideration of the Senate bill (S. 3091) to amend the act incorporating the American Legion so as to redefine eligibility for membership therein.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 3091

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section 5 of the Act entitled "An Act to incorporate The American Legion", approved September 16, 1919 (41 Stat. 285; 36 U.S.C. 45), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. No person shall be a member of this corporation unless he has served in the naval or military services of the United States at some time during any of the following periods; April 6, 1917, to November 11, 1918; December 7, 1941, to December 31, 1946; June 25, 1950, to January 31, 1955; December 22, 1961, to May 7, 1975; August 24, 1982, to July 31, 1984; December 20, 1989, to January 31, 1990; all dates inclusive, or who, being a citizen of the United States at the time of entry therein, served in the military or naval service of any governments associated with the United States during said wars or hostilities: Provided, however, That such person shall have an honorable discharge or separation from such service or continues to serve honorably after any of the aforesaid terminal dates.".

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF SENATE AMENDMENT TO H.R. 3386, SANITARY FOOD TRANSPORTATION ACT OF 1990

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 508) to provide for consideration of the Senate amendment to H.R. 3386.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. RES. 508

Resolved, That, upon the adoption of this resolution, the bill (H.R. 3386) to prohibit the use of refrigerated motor vehicles for the transportation of solid waste, to prohibit the use of cargo tanks in providing motor vehicle transportation of food and nonfood products, and for other purposes, be, and the same is hereby, taken from the Speaker's table to the end that the Senate amendment to the text of the bill be, and the same is hereby, agreed to with the following amendments:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate, insert as an amendment in the nature of a substitute the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Sanitary Food Transportation Act of 1990".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) Americans are entitled to receive food and other consumer products that are not made unsafe as a result of certain transportation practices;

(2) the American public is threatened by the transportation of products potentially harmful to consumers in motor vehicles and rail vehicles which are used to transport food and other consumer products; and

(3) the risks posed to consumers by such transportation practices are unnecessary, and such practices must be terminated.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this Act—

(1) FOOD, FOOD ADDITIVES, DRUGS, DEVICES, OR COSMETICS.—The terms "food", "food additives", "drugs", "devices", and "cosmetics" have the meanings given to them by section 201 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 321).

(2) NONFOOD PRODUCT.—The term "nonfood product" means any material, substance, or product (including refuse, and solid waste, as such term is defined in section 1004 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act (42 U.S.C. 6903)) which (except as provided under section 4(a)(2)) is not a food, food additive, drug, device, or cosmetic. Such term includes any class of such materials, substances, or products.

(3) REFUSE.—The term "refuse" means any discarded material to be transported to or disposed of in a landfill or incinerator, or required by law to be transported to or disposed of in a landfill or incinerator.

(4) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Transportation.

(5) STATE.—The term "State" means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Guam, and any other territory or possession of the United States.

(6) TRANSPORTS OR TRANSPORTATION.—The term "transports" or "transportation" means any movement of property in commerce (including intrastate commerce) by motor vehicle or rail vehicle.

(7) UNITED STATES.—The term "United States" means all of the States.

SEC. 4. REGULATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) RESPONSIBILITY OF SECRETARY.—In accordance with this Act, the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, shall issue regulations, pursuant to a rulemaking proceeding, with respect to the transportation of food, food additives, drugs, devices, and cosmetics in motor vehicles and rail vehicles which are used to transport either refuse or other nonfood products which, when so transported, would make such food, food additives, drugs, devices, or cosmetics unsafe to the health of humans or animals.

(2) TREATMENT AS NONFOOD PRODUCTS.—If a drug, device, or cosmetic is transported in a motor or rail vehicle at the same time or before a food or food additive is transported in such vehicle, the Secretary shall treat such drug, device, or cosmetic as a nonfood product if such transportation would make such food or food additive unsafe to the health of humans or animals.

(b) Special Requirements.—In issuing regulations under subsection (a)(1), the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, shall establish standards, requirements, and other provisions relating to—

(1) appropriate recordkeeping, identification, marking, certification, or other means of verification required to promote compliance with the requirements of sections 5, 6, and 7;

(2) appropriate determination, removal, disposal, and isolation standards with respect to regulations implementing sections 5 and 6;

(3) appropriate materials for construction of tank trucks, rail tank cars, cargo tanks, and accessory equipment to comply with regulations implementing section 5.

(c) Considerations.—In issuing regulations under subsection (a)(1), the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, shall consider each of the following and may establish standards, requirements, or other provisions relating to any or all of the following:

(1) The extent to which packaging or similar means of protecting and isolating commodities are adequate to ameliorate or eliminate the potential risks of transporting food, food additives, drugs, devices, or cosmetics in motor vehicles or rail vehicles used to transport nonfood products. If packaging standards are found to be adequate by the Secretary, regulations issued under subsection (a)(1) shall not apply to food, food additives, drugs, devices, or cosmetics or nonfood products which are packaged in packages which meet such standards.

(2) Appropriate compliance and enforcement measures for carrying out this Act.

(3) Appropriate minimum insurance or other liability requirements for any person covered by this Act.

(d) Deadlines.—The rulemaking proceeding referred to in subsection (a)(1) shall be initiated within 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act. The regulations referred to in subsection (a)(1) shall be issued within 270 days after such date of enactment.

SEC. 5. TANK TRUCKS, RAIL TANK CARS, AND CARGO TANKS.

(a) Prohibition.—At a minimum, the regulations issued under section 4(a)(1) shall prohibit any person from using, offering for use, or arranging for the use of tank truck, rail tank car, or cargo tank used in motor vehicle transportation or rail transportation for food, food additives, drugs, devices, or cosmetics, if such tank truck, rail tank car, or cargo tank is used to transport a nonfood product (other than any nonfood product which is included on a list published under subsection (b)).

(b) List of Acceptable Nonfood Products.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary, and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, shall publish in the Federal Register a list of nonfood products which the Secretary has determined do not make food, food additives, drugs devices, or cosmetics unsafe to the health of humans or animals as a result of transportation in a tank truck, rail tank car, or cargo tank which is used to transport food, food additives, drugs, devices, or cosmetics. The Secretary may periodically amend such list by publication in the Federal Register.

(c) Identification.—The regulations issued under section 4(a)(1) shall, at a minimum, provide that—

(1) no person shall use, offer for use, or arrange for the use of a tank truck or a cargo tank to provide motor vehicle transportation of only food, food additives, drugs, devices, or cosmetics or nonfood products which are included on the list published under subsection (b) unless such tank truck or cargo tank is identified, by a permanent marking on such tank truck or cargo tank, as transporting such food, food additives, drugs, devices, or cosmetics or nonfood products;

(2) no person shall use, offer to use, or arrange for the use of a tank truck or a cargo tank to provide motor vehicle transportation of a nonfood product which is not included on the list published under subsection (b) if such tank truck or cargo tank is identified pursuant to paragraph (1) as a tank truck or cargo tank transporting only food, food additives, drugs, devices, or cosmetics and nonfood products included on such a list; and

(3) no person shall receive, except for lawful disposal purposes, any food, food additive, drug, device, or cosmetic or nonfood product which has been transported in a tank truck or cargo tank in violation of paragraph (1) or (2).

(d) Disclosure.—Any person who arranges for the use of a tank truck or a cargo tank used in motor vehicle transportation for the transportation of a food, food additive, drug, device, or cosmetic or nonfood product shall in making such arrangement disclose to the motor carrier or other appropriate person if the food, food additive, drug, device, or cosmetic or nonfood product being transported is to be used—

(1) as, or in the preparation of, a food or food additive, or

(2) as a nonfood product which is included in the list published under subsection (b).

SEC. 6. MOTOR AND RAIL TRANSPORTATION OF NONFOOD PRODUCTS.

(a) Prohibition.—At a minimum, the regulations issued under section 4(a)(1) shall prohibit any person from using, offering for use, or arranging for the use of a motor vehicle or a rail vehicle, other than a tank truck, rail tank car, or cargo tank described in section 5, to provide transportation of food, food additives, drugs, devices, or cosmetics, if such vehicle is used to transport nonfood products included on a list published under subsection (b).

(b) List of Unacceptable Nonfood Products.—

(1) Publication.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, shall publish in the Federal Register a list of nonfood products which the Secretary has determined would make food, food additives, drugs, devices, or cosmetics unsafe to the health of humans or animals as a result of transportation in a motor vehicle or rail vehicle which is used to transport food, food additives, drugs, devices, or cosmetics. The Secretary may periodically amend the list by publication in the Federal Register.

(2) Cardboard, pallets, beverage containers, and other food packaging.—The list published under paragraph (1) shall not include cardboard, pallets, beverage containers, and other food packaging except to the extent the Secretary determines that the transportation of cardboard, pallets, beverage containers, or other food packaging in a motor vehicle or rail vehicle which is used to transport food, food additives, drugs, devices, or cosmetics would make the food, food additives, drugs, devices, or cosmetics unsafe to the health of humans or animals.

SEC. 7. DEDICATED VEHICLES.

At a minimum, the regulations issued under section 4(a)(1) shall prohibit any person from using, offering for use, or arranging for the use of a motor vehicle or rail vehicle to provide transportation of asbestos, in forms or quantities determined by the Secretary to be necessary, or of products which present an extreme danger to human or animal health, despite any decontamination, removal, disposal, packaging, or other isolation procedures, unless such motor vehicle or rail vehicle is used only to provide transportation of one or more of the following: asbestos, such extremely dangerous products, refuse. The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, shall publish in the Federal Register a list of the products covered by this section. The Secretary may periodically amend such list by publication in the Federal Register.

SEC. 8. WAIVER AUTHORITY.

The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, may waive, in whole or in part, application of any provision of this Act or any regulations issued under this Act with respect to any class of persons, class of motor vehicles, class of rail vehicles, class of food, food additives, drugs, devices, or cosmetics, class of refuse, or class or nonfood products, if the Secretary determines that such waiver would not result in transportation of food, food additives, drugs, devices, or cosmetics that would be unsafe to human or animal health and otherwise is not contrary to the public interest and this Act. Any waiver under this section shall be published in the Federal Register, together with the reasons for such waiver.

SEC. 9. FOOD TRANSPORTATION INSPECTIONS.

(a) Inspection Authority.—With respect to commercial motor vehicles, the Secretary may carry out the requirements of this Act and assist in carrying out compatible State laws and regulations through means that include inspections conducted by State employees which are funded with money authorized under sections 402 through 404 of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 (49 U.S.C. App. 2302-2304) to carry out the motor carrier safety assistance program, if the recipient States agree to assist in the enforcement of this Act or are enforcing compatible State laws and regulations.

(b) Assistance of Other Agencies.—Upon request by the Secretary, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, and the heads of other appropriate Federal agencies shall provide assistance, to the extent such assistance is available, to the Secretary for the purpose of carrying out this Act, including assistance in the training of personnel under a program established under subsection (c).

(c) Training Program.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, and the heads of appropriate State transportation and food safety agencies, shall develop and carry out a training program for inspectors to conduct vigorous enforcement of this Act and regulations issued under this Act or compatible State laws and regulations. As part of such training program, the inspectors, including State inspectors or personnel paid with funds under the motor carrier safety assistance program, shall be trained in the recognition of adulteration problems associated with the transportation of food, food additives, drugs, devices, and cosmetics and in the procedures for securing the assistance of the appropriate Federal and State agencies to support such enforcement.

SEC. 10. POWERS AND DUTIES OF THE SECRETARY.

The Secretary shall have the same powers, duties, and authorities under this Act with respect to transportation regulated under this Act as the Secretary has under section 109 (other than subsections (c)(1), (d), and (e) of such section) of the Hazardous Materials Transportation Act (49 U.S.C. App. 1801 et seq.) with respect to transportation regulated under such Act.

SEC. 11. VIOLATIONS, PENALTIES, AND SPECIFIC RELIEF.

(a) Violations, Penalties.—Civil and criminal violations of regulations or orders issued under this Act shall be determined, and civil and criminal penalties for such violations shall be imposed, in the same manner and to the same extent that violations are determined and penalties are imposed under section 110 of the Hazardous Materials Transportation Act (49 U.S.C. App. 1809).

(b) Equitable Relief.—The Secretary shall request equitable relief and take action to eliminate or ameliorate an imminent hazard with respect to any violation of regulations issued under this Act, or of an order issued under this Act, in the same manner and to the same extent that the Secretary is authorized to take under section 111 of the Hazardous Materials Transportation Act (49 U.S.C. App. 1810).

SEC. 12. RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER LAWS.

The provisions of the Hazardous Materials Transportation Act (49 U.S.C. App. 1801 et seq.) relating to the relationship of the Act to a law, regulation, order, ruling, provision, or other requirement of a State or political subdivision thereof or of an Indian tribe shall apply with respect to the relationship of this Act to a law, regulation, order, ruling, provision, or other requirement of a State or political subdivision thereof or of an Indian tribe which concerns a subject covered under this Act.

SEC. 13. COORDINATION PROCEDURES.

Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary, after consultation with appropriate State officials, shall establish procedures to promote more effective coordination between the agencies of the United States and agencies of the States with regulatory authority over motor carrier safety and railroad safety with respect to implementation and enforcement of this Act.

SEC. 14. APPLICABILITY.

This Act shall take effect on the date of enactment of this Act, except that sections 11 and 12 shall only apply to transportation occurring on or after the date that regulations issued under section 4(a)(1) take effect.

SEC. 15. MOTOR CARRIER SAFETY.

(a) Short Title.—This section may be cited as the "Motor Carrier Safety Act of 1990".

(b) Motor Carrier Safety Ratings.—

(1) Amendment.—The Hazardous Materials Transportation Act (49 U.S.C. App. 1801 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 117. UNSATISFACTORY SAFETY RATINGS.

"(a) Prohibition on Transportation.—Effective January 1, 1991, if a motor carrier receives a safety rating from the Secretary which is unsatisfactory, such motor carrier shall have 45 days to take such action as may be necessary to improve such safety rating to conditional or satisfactory. After the last day of such 45-day period, if such motor carrier has not received a safety rating from the Secretary which is conditional or satisfactory, such motor carrier shall not operate a commercial motor vehicle (as defined in section 203(1) of the Motor Carrier Safety Act of 1984)—

"(1) to provide transportation of hazardous materials for which placarding of motor vehicles is required in accordance with the regulations issued under this title, or until such motor carrier has received such a safety rating from the Secretary.

"(2) to transport more than 15 passengers, including the driver.

"(b) Review of Rating.—If a motor carrier who has received an unsatisfactory safety rating from the Secretary requests the Secretary to review the conditions and other factors which resulted in such motor carrier receiving the unsatisfactory safety rating, the Secretary shall conduct such review within 30 days after the date of such request.

"(c) Prohibition on Federal Agency Use.—No Federal agency may use a motor carrier who has an unsatisfactory safety rating from the Secretary—

"(1) to provide transportation of hazardous materials for which placarding of motor vehicles is required in accordance with the regulations issued under this title, or

"(2) to transport more than 15 passengers, including the driver.".

(2) Public availability of safety ratings.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary, in consultation with the Interstate Commerce Commission, shall issue a final rule amending the Federal motor carrier safety regulations contained in subchapter B of chapter III of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations, to establish a system to make readily available to the public, and to periodically update, the safety ratings of motor carriers which have been assigned unsatisfactory safety ratings by the Secretary.

(c) Imminent Hazards to Safety.—Not later than January 1 of 1992 and 1993, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report describing the actions taken under section 521(b)(5) of title 49, United States Code, with respect to any violation, or combination of violations, that poses an imminent hazard to safety.

(d) Procedures To Ensure Timely Correction of Safety Violations.—

(1) Issuance of final rule.—The Secretary shall, within 9 months after the date of enactment of this Act, issue a final rule establishing procedures to ensure the proper and timely correction of commercial motor vehicle safety violations noted during inspections funded with moneys authorized under section 404 of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 (49 U.S.C. App. 2304) to carry out the motor carrier safety assistance program.

(2) Verification program.—Such final rule shall establish a verification program for Federal inspectors and States which are participating in the motor carrier safety assistance program to ensure that commercial motor vehicles and operators thereof found in violation of safety requirements have subsequently been brought into compliance with safety requirements. The final rule shall, among other things, institute—

(A) a nationwide system for random reinspection of the commercial motor vehicles and operators thereof that have been declared out-of-service as a result of such safety violations, the main purpose of which system shall be to verify that the violations have been corrected on a timely basis;

(B) a program of accountability for correcting all safety violations, which shall provide that—

(i) the operator of a commercial motor vehicle for which a safety violation has been noted shall be issued a form prescribed by the Secretary;

(ii) the making of the repairs necessary to correct such violation and the date, location, and time of such repairs shall be certified on such form by the person making such repairs;

(iii) the motor carrier responsible for such commercial motor vehicle or operator shall certify on such form that, based on the knowledge of the carrier, the repairs necessary to correct such violation have been made; and

(iv) appropriate State penalties shall be assessed for false statements on such forms or for failure to return such forms to the appropriate State entity; and

(C) a system for ensuring that appropriate State penalties are assessed for failure to correct any such safety violation.

(e) Serious Safety Violations.—

(1) Findings.—Congress finds that:

(A) the present system for ensuring compliance with Federal motor carrier safety laws and regulations needs improvement;

(B) relying primarily upon voluntary compliance methods has not resulted in an acceptable level of commercial motor vehicle safety; and

(C) improvements in the existing enforcement authorities are required to bring about greater safety.

(2) Operation procedures.—In light of the findings in paragraph (1), section 521(b)(1) of title 49, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by redesignating the existing text as subparagraph (A); and

(B) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(B) The Secretary shall, not later than 80 days after the date of enactment of this subparagraph, establish operational procedures to require a highway safety specialist or other appropriate representative of the Secretary to initiate, at the time of a safety review, compliance review, or other inspection or audit activity, or within a reasonable time thereafter, an enforcement action whenever any of the offenses referred to in paragraph (2) (A) and (B) can be documented, except recordkeeping violations not specified by the Secretary as serious. The procedures shall—

"(i) specify those serious recordkeeping violations for which an enforcement action shall be initiated, including instances in which the falsification of records of duty status or drivers' medical certificates is required or permitted, and such other recordkeeping violations as the Secretary determines to be serious; and

"(ii) authorize, but not require, initiation of an enforcement action for recordkeeping violations not specified by the Secretary as serious.".

(f) Truck Visibility.—

(1) Initiation of rulemaking proceeding.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall initiate a rulemaking proceeding on the need to adopt methods for making trucks or any category of trucks more visible to motorists so as to reduce accidents, particularly at night, taking into consideration such factors as truck illumination and truck color.

(2) Completion of proceeding.—The proceeding under this subsection shall be completed not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act, or if the Secretary determines that it is not feasible to complete the proceeding within such 2-year period, such proceeding may be extended by the Secretary for up to 1 additional year.

(g) Definitions.—As used in this section—

(1) Commercial motor vehicle.—The term "commercial motor vehicle" has the meaning given such term in section 204(1) of the Motor Carrier Safety Act of 1984 (49 U.S.C. App. 2503(1)).

(2) Truck.—The term "truck" means a commercial motor vehicle that meets the description set forth in section 204(1) (A) or (C) of the Motor Carrier Safety Act of 1984 (49 U.S.C. App. 2503(1) (A) or (C)).

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to prohibit certain food transportation practices and to provide for regulation by the Secretary of Transportation that will safeguard food and other food products from contamination during motor or rail transportation.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California [Mr. Anderson] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Clinger] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. Anderson].

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3386, which was first passed by the House on March 27, 1990. The Senate amended the bill and passed its version on September 20, 1990. The bill before you today is a compromise between the House and Senate versions.

I wish to thank the members of the Public Works and Transportation Committee and the Energy and Commerce Committee of the House and the Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation in the Senate for their diligence in working to put an end to the potential problems that can result from backhauling garbage in vehicles that transport food.

The Committee on Public Works and Transportation became aware of some members in the transportation industry moving waste in vehicles that were also used to transport food. The Subcommittee on Investigations and Oversight, which I chair, held hearings on this matter. On August 2, the owner of a fleet of refrigerated motor vehicles testified that he regularly hauled garbage and anything else after hauling meat, poultry, and other food items.

A professor of food science said it simply when he stated, "It should not be allowed." I agree. I find it personally revolting and an outrage to public health and safety to permit this practice to go unabated.

Similarly, we were told that products such as formaldehyde were being transported in tank vehicles used to transport fruit juices without proper cleaning or decontamination being carried out. Again, this practice can not continue.

Although there were no documented cases of food contamination as a result of these practices that caused any harm to the public, there exists a threat of such harm. This bill will go a long way to nullify that threat.

The overriding goal of H.R. 3386 is to maintain conditions in this country that prevent contamination of food in the distribution process. Thus far, the record is good. This bill is designed to keep it that way by controlling emerging practices that might threaten that record. The citizens of this country deserve and should have regulatory safeguards to assure the sanitary transportation of food. H.R. 3386 does that, both with respect to existing practices and potential practices.

The bill also contains several provisions that deal with safety issues in the truck and intercity bus industries. They require reports from the Department of Transportation on several new safety improvements and on some safety initiatives that are currently under way. Included in the bill is a provision that provides new authority to the Secretary for enforcement at the Federal and State levels of safety regulations aimed at removing unsafe carriers from the highways.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues in the House to support this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, during the summer of 1989, the largest newspaper in my district, the Centre Daily Times, ran a series of stories on the growing practice of backhauling garbage in the same trucks used to haul food products. The impact of the story was shocking. Pictures accompanying the articles showed refrigerated trucks discharging baled garbage into landfills. Truckers interviewed readily admitted to alternating loads of food and garbage.

Coincidentally, shortly after the articles appeared, a refrigerated truck overturned on a section of Interstate 80 that runs through my district. When rescuers arrived and attempted to right the truck, they were repelled by noxious odors emanating from the back. The truck was loaded with rotting trash.

As a result of these episodes, Chairman Anderson directed the Investigations and Oversight Subcommittee to undertake an investigation and hearing on this disgusting practice. The hearings produced significant evidence that the practice of backhauling was widespread, that refrigerated trucks as well as a larger number of dry vans were regularly used by a few unscrupulous operators to haul alternate loads of food products with trash, and that tank trucks were alternating loads of liquid food products with hazardous and toxic chemicals.

The most surprising aspect of the investigation, however, was the dearth of Federal regulations prohibiting this disgusting and immoral practice.

As a result of these findings, I introduced H.R. 3386. My good friend and colleague, Representative Bob Borski, was an original cosponsor of the bill and has played an instrumental role in improving the bill and assuring its passage through the House.

Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Public Works and Transportation, together with the Energy and Commerce Committee, reported the bill earlier this year. On March 27, 1990, the House passed H.R. 3386 by a vote of 415 to 10.

Companion legislation was introduced in the Senate and passed that body by voice vote on September 20.

You have heard the chairman outline the features of the bill. The key to this legislation is a prohibition against the use of refrigerated trailers, tank trucks, rail tank cars, and cargo tanks from hauling food products if they are also used to haul hazardous chemicals or other products that pose a risk to human health. Through rulemaking, the Secretary of Transportation is required to establish requirements or standards to ensure the safety of food and other consumable products hauled in highway and rail vehicles.

The bill also amends the Hazardous Materials Transportation Act to prohibit motor carriers with unsatisfactory safety ratings from transporting hazardous materials. In addition, the bill prohibits Federal agencies from using motor carriers with unsatisfactory safety ratings to transport hazardous materials.

I want to thank Chairman Anderson, ranking Republican John Paul Hammerschmidt, Subcommittee Chairman Norman Mineta, and ranking Republican Bud Shuster for their invaluable assistance during the hearings and markup. I also wish to recognize the staffs of the Public Works and Transportation Committee and the Energy and Commerce Committee for their diligence and hard labor.

Mr. Speaker, I support H.R. 3386 and encourage all Members to support it as well. This is a vitally needed piece of legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Whittaker], the ranking member of the subcommittee of jurisdiction of the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

□ 0040

Mr. WHITTAKER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the leadership of both House committees with jurisdiction over this legislation—Public Works and Energy and Commerce—for an outstanding job of cooperation. First, both committees worked together to fashion the original House version of this bill last spring. And now, both committees, along with the Senate Commerce Committee, have again made the final version of this legislation an outstanding example of bipartisan cooperation. I particularly want to commend our Transportation Subcommittee chairman, Mr. Luken, for his diligent efforts and untiring cooperation in fashioning this bipartisan legislation. It has been my good fortune to spend the closing phase of my congressional career working on transportation issues with such a conscientious legislator as Mr. Luken.

The evil addressed by this bill is, of course, the recently documented practice of shipping food products and noxious or dangerous items in the same vehicle or railcar on alternate trips, with little or no decontamination in between. This has to stop, and the Safe Food Transportation Act places the appropriate regulatory and enforcement tools in the hands of the relevant Federal agencies, led by the Department of Transportation.

The approach taken in the bill is a sensible and flexible one, where outright prohibitions of interchangeable use are reserved for only the truly dangerous situations, while appropriate decontamination is required where the degree of danger is less. And routine, combined shipments of food-related products and other properly packaged goods is not threatened by any regulatory overkill. On all counts, Mr. Speaker, this is legislation precisely targeted on the real problem, with a view to correcting that known deficiency, but without undue expense or regulatory interference.

I urge the prompt approval of the resolution that will finally approve this legislation without the need for a formal conference.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. Mineta].

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3386, the Sanitary Food Transportation Act. The House passed this bill on March 27, 1990. Since that time, the House and Senate have worked out the compromise legislation that is now before the House.

The bill addresses the garbage backhaul problem that was subjected to much public scrutiny approximately 1 year ago. Simply put, it directs the responsible Federal agencies to consult with the Department of Transportation for the purpose of issuing rules that will maintain the integrity of food while it is being transported. The regulations will specify when, if, and under what conditions food shipments may be made in vehicles that are used for transporting nonfood products.

The legislative scheme envisions that vehicles used to transport certain nonfood products will not be permitted to transport food or allied products. Moreover, the same prohibition might be imposed on other vehicles unless specific decontamination or other cleaning procedures are implemented.

The new regulatory scheme is devised to remove the obnoxious practices that were occurring in a limited area of the transportation industry where food was being transported one way and garbage was transported on the return trip.

The legislation represents an additional enforcement tool to maintain food in a condition that is safe for humans. Specifically, it is molded to maintain safe transportation conditions. As such, the Department of Transportation is the lead agency for carrying out the new requirements.

However, the bill does not diminish the roles that other Federal agencies have previously played in the regulation of food.

The remaining provisions are directed at a number of safety issues in the trucking and intercity bus industry. Generally, they provide for reports on various safety improvements and some safety initiatives that are already underway. It also provides new authority to rid the highways of unsafe carriers through new and improved enforcement mechanisms at the Federal and State level.

Mr. Speaker, I urge members to support enactment of this safety legislation.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Borski].

Mr. BORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3386, the Safe Food Transportation Act of 1990.

This legislation is a giant step forward in protecting the public from unnecessary hazards resulting from the transportation of food and other consumer items.

I want to commend my good friend and colleague from Pennsylvania, Congressman Bill Clinger, for his hard work in helping to craft this legislation.

Congressman Clinger has been one of the strongest voices in this House for tougher laws to protect Americans from the the dangers associated with the transportation of food.

The origins of this legislation date back to the summer of 1989, when the American people were shocked and outraged by news reports describing how the same trucks which haul food to our family tables were also hauling garbage and other solid wastes.

As part of its investigation, the Public Works' Subcommittee on Investigations and Oversight, where I serve as ranking member, held public hearings on backhauling practices in the trucking industry.

What we found did not inspire public confidence in the safety of the Nation's food supply.

The subcommittee heard extensive testimony which established that municipal solid waste is being backhauled in the same refrigerated trucks and dry vans that carry food products, and that hazardous chemicals, such as formaldehyde and marine oil, are being backhauled in the same cargo tankers which transport liquid foods such as fruit juices or cooking oils.

After public hearings, the subcommittee uncovered evidence that removed asbestos is being moved in trucks which later carry children's toys and vegetables.

Clearly, the time has arrived to put an end to these dangerous practices. The bill which is before us will do just that.

H.R. 3386 contains strong measures to protect consumers from unsafe transportation of food.

I am pleased that that it contains a number of important items which were included in a substitute amendment that I offered, and which was approved during full committee markup.

The bill specifically directs the Secretary of Transportation to prohibit the hauling of food in trucks which transport garbage or other products which make food unsafe.

It also requires the Secretary to prohibit the hauling of dangerous chemicals and food products in the same cargo tankers, and, the legislation mandates that certain dangerous commodities, such as asbestos, be hauled only in dedicated vehicles.

To ensure compliance, the bill requires that cargo tanks must be permanently marked for "food use." It makes all parties—the shipper, the broker, the transporter, and the receiver—responsible for violations.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that we owe a great debt of gratitude to Jim and Rikki Pomerenke, Dave Helzer, and Sharon Sonner. These courageous individuals from Yakima, WA, stood up and risked everything to blow the whistle on dangerous backhauling practices.

Passage of this legislation clearly demonstrates that individual citizens, willing to become involved, can make a difference. Passage of this legislation reaffirms the importance of the congressional oversight process in protecting the health and safety of the American people.

The unfortunate fact is, that despite numerous laws and Government regulations, most of the dangerous backhauling practices addressed in this bill are currently not prohibited. They have simply fallen through the legislative and regulatory cracks.

Now, after months of investigation, hearings and thorough review, we are ready to take action on legislation which provides protection where none existed before. I believe that H.R. 3386 will go a long way toward restoring public confidence in the safe transportation of food and consumer items. I strongly urge my colleagues join me and to support this very important legislation.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I want to declare my support for this final, agreed version of H.R. 3386. The House version, which we passed this spring, represented an extraordinarily successful combination of ideas from the members of the two committees who share jurisdiction over this legislation—the Public Works and Transportation Committee, and the Energy and Commerce Committee. I am most gratified that we can now add to that successful cooperative effort an equally successful negotiation with the Senate to arrive at a final, agreed version of this bill and thus avoid a formal conference. The resolution before us would do just that.

In recent months, Mr. Speaker, the American public has been literally revolted by the prospect of noxious and unsanitary materials being carried in trucks or rail cars that are used interchangeably for food-related products as well. This has to stop. And the Safe Food Transportation Act gives the various Federal agencies concerned—led by the Department of Transportation—the tools they need to stop it.

The bill establishes a regime of safe transportation regulations, under which certain interchangeable uses of a vehicle or railcar for dangerous products and food would simply be prohibited. In other instances, interchange would be permissible, but only if proper decontamination procedures are followed. And in still other categories, where no substantial risk is involved, food and nonfood products would continue to be allowed to be transported together. This is a commonsense, targeted solution to a demonstrated problem. But it gives the Department of Transportation wide latitude in administering these regulations to protect the integrity of the Nation's food shipments. And in that respect, it avoids any overly restrictive or burdensome regulation.

I urge the prompt approval of the resolution.

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3386, a bill which will go far to ensure that the food set out on American tables has not been contaminated by exposure to harmful bacteria, filth, or chemicals while being transported by truck or by rail.

I particularly want to congratulate Mr. CLINGER of Pennsylvania for his aggressive efforts to promote this legislation. Mr. CLINGER quickly responded to reports of raw garbage being carried in refrigerated trucks from the Northeast to landfills in the Midwest—trucks that would later carry meat and produce eastbound. Introducing the legislation before us today, Mr. CLINGER sought to fill a gap in Federal law by banning such practices.

Mr. BORSKI is also to be commended for investigating tank truck practices of hauling fruit juices and other edible liquids back-to-back with dangerous chemicals.

Chairman ANDERSON, Mr. MINETA, and Mr. SHUSTER should be recognized for moving this legislation swiftly through the Public Works and Transportation Committee.

All of these Members, as well as members of the House Energy and Commerce Committee and the Senate Commerce Committee, are to be commended for taking steps to safeguard food transportation.

The General Accounting Office reports that in eight Eastern States landfill capacity will be depleted within 5 years, with the effect that the long-haul transport of garbage will become increasingly common. In fact, New York, and New Jersey already export 395,000 truckloads of garbage—over 9 million tons—each year.

Without this legislation, there will be no marking or recordkeeping requirements, no cleaning procedures, not even a basic prohibition on shipping food in garbage trucks. I urge my colleagues to join me in support of this much-needed legislation.

Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this important legislation.

One year ago, many Members of this body joined me and Mr. WHITTAKER in introducing comprehensive legislation which will revamp, reform, and revitalize the outdated Hazardous Materials Transportation Act.

One of the provisions of our hazardous materials bill outlaws the practice of hauling food and other consumer products in trucks and railroad cars which have been used to carry poisonous chemicals, garbage, and other dangerous commodities. The need for this provision was starkly confirmed to us at our subcommittee's hearings last November. We heard shocking testimony from witnesses who have personally investigated numerous instances where trucks and trains have carried food after they have transported deadly chemicals, toxic waste, and other dangerous contaminants.

Mr. Alden Fitch, an inspector with the Washington State Department of Agriculture, testified he has witnessed these atrocious practices repeatedly during his 29-year tenure. For example, he personally investigated a case where feed grain was transported in a rail car after it had hauled an arsenic compound—1 million dollars' worth of cattle died after eating the contaminated grain. Milk from other cattle was poisoned and had to be dumped for over 4 weeks until it tested clean. We can only conjecture what would have happened if the poisoned grain had been used for human consumption.

Mrs. Terri Moore also testified at our hearing. She heads a citizen watchdog group which monitors a landfill in Centerpoint, IN. Mrs Moore brought photographs and videotapes depicting graphic scenes of products which were contaminated, including pictures of maggots swimming in disinfectant in a truck trailer. Mrs. Moore's group has documented case after case where food, soft drinks, and packaged foods have been backhauled in garbage trucks, refrigerated trucks, and other motor vehicles which have previously carried hazardous waste, chemicals, and other dangerous commodities.

These hideous practices have not ceased. Just 6 weeks ago, a truck that had just dumped a load of garbage at the Indiana landfill was caught hauling corn meal to New York. To say the least, the time for enacting comprehensive Federal legislation is long overdue.

The administration has not seen fit to correct these hideous practices which endanger our food supply. Evidently, the Department of Transportation thinks it's a problem for the Food and Drug Administration. The FDA thinks it's a transportation problem. And EPA, who has justification over solid waste, doesn't know what to think. The bottom line is that Congress is going to have to direct these agencies to work together to stop these life-threatening practices.

At the same time of our subcommittee's investigation, our colleagues from the Committee on Public Works and Transportation had been examining these dangerous practices. They held hearings which focused on the backhauling of food in trucks which are also used to carry garbage and dangerous chemicals. In March, our committees presented H.R. 3386 for floor consideration. The bill passed overwhelmingly by a vote of 410 to 15. The Senate later approved a similar bill and we have been working with Public Works and the Senate to finalize this critically needed legislation. Today, I am pleased to announce that all differences have been resolved by the committees of jurisdiction of both Houses.

This bill will shut down those unscrupulous transporters who don't care whether they are hauling trash or tomatoes. The bill covers both trucks and railroads. The bill also requires dedicated vehicles for transporting asbestos and other extremely dangerous products. The bill requires the Secretary of Transportation, along with other Federal agencies, to enact and aggressively enforce regulations governing safe transportation practices. The bill also directs the Secretary to consider and address a number of subjects in issuing the regulations. These subjects include: The extent to which packaging is adequate to eliminate any risks involved; appropriate recordkeeping, marking, and identification requirements; appropriate cleaning standards; and appropriate compliance and enforcement measures.

I wish to express my appreciation to Chairman DINGELL, Mr. LENT, Mr. WHITTAKER, Mr. SWIFT, Mr. RINALDO, and all the members of our subcommittee who helped to craft this important legislation. I also commend our colleagues from the Public Works Committee, Chairman ANDERSON, Chairman MINETA, Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT, Mr. SHUSTER, Mr. BORSKI,

Mr. CLINGER, and others, who have worked hand in hand with us to produce a bill that we all support. I also want to commend the efforts of our colleagues from the other body, including Chairmen HOLLINGS and EXON, and Senators DANFORTH, KASTEN, GORE, and GORTON, who have worked with the House to reach a final settlement. Finally, I wish to commend the efforts of the gentleman from New Jersey, Mr. CHRIS SMITH, who has worked tirelessly in educating the public about these issues.

We need to get this bill to the President's desk as soon as possible. I urge my colleagues to support adoption of the resolution and reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. ANDERSON] that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 508).

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks, and include therein extraneous material, on House Resolution 508, the resolution just adopted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

AUTHORIZING STUDY OF FEASIBILITY TO ESTABLISH NATIONAL PARK SYSTEM UNIT TO INTERPRET AND COMMEMORATE JAZZ

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 2846) to authorize and direct the Secretary of the Interior to conduct a study of the feasibility of establishing a unit of the National Park System to interpret and commemorate the origins, development, and progression of jazz in the United States, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

S. 2846

Be in enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SUITABILITY AND FEASIBILITY STUDY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—In order to determine an appropriate means of preserving and interpreting the origins, development and progression of the music known as jazz, a music that has gained worldwide influence and respect and represents this Nation's unique contribution to the musical arts, the Secretary of the Interior (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary"), in consultation with the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, shall conduct a study of the suitability and feasibility of preserving and interpreting the origins of jazz in New Orleans, including establishing, or adding to, a unit of the National Park System, or providing technical and financial assistance. Such study shall recognize the origins of jazz in New Orleans, the city in which the cultural strains that became jazz were fused to form this unique American music, and the birthplace of such major jazz artists as Jelly Roll Morton, Sidney Bechet, and Louis Armstrong.

(b) SITES OR STRUCTURES.—(1) The study shall include a determination as to which sites or structures in New Orleans associated with the origin and early history of jazz exhibit the necessary historical and physical integrity to make them suitable and feasible for administration, protection, and preservation by the National Park System for the use and benefit of the public. Prior to making any such determination, the Secretary shall consult with and carefully consider the views of affected local citizens and neighborhood groups.

(2) With respect to any such site or structure determined to be suitable and feasible, the study shall include an analysis of potential management alternatives that involve the participation of public and private entities in the preservation of jazz as an American art form, including interpretive performances pursuant to cooperative agreements with the Secretary.

(3) In the event appropriate sites or structures cannot be identified, the study shall also consider and make recommendations concerning sites which would serve as an appropriate location to commemorate the origins and early history of jazz in New Orleans.

(c) ADDITIONAL RECOMMENDATIONS.—The study shall also include recommendations for—

(1) public outreach programs;

(2) the establishment of a jazz education center;

(3) the appropriate Federal role, including through cooperative agreements, in supporting second line bands and in preserving the unique contributions to the development of jazz made by neighborhood social and pleasure clubs, including recommendations for interpretive performances by such clubs and other programs to assure that the contributions of such clubs are preserved; and

(4) the need for the preservation and dissemination of information about existing public and private archival collections (with potential alternatives for an appropriate Federal role) and possible management alternatives including cooperative agreements with existing public and private facilities and institutions.

SEC. 2. JEAN LAFITTE NATIONAL HISTORICAL PARK.

The study shall also assess and include a recommendation concerning the desirability and feasibility of including any site or structure identified pursuant to section 1(b) to be managed as a unit of the Jean Lafitte National Historical Park.

SEC. 3. SUBMISSION OF STUDY.

The Secretary shall submit the study referred to in section 1 to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the United States Senate and the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the United States House of Representatives no later than one year after the date funds are made available for such study, together with any recommendations for further legislation.

SEC. 4. PRESERVATION OF JAZZ ADVISORY COMMISSION.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF THE COMMISSION.—There is hereby established the Preservation of Jazz Advisory Commission (hereinafter referred to as the "Commission"). The Commission shall consist of fifteen members who shall be appointed within ninety days after enactment of this Act as follows:

(1) one member to be appointed jointly by the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives and the President Pro Tempore of the United States Senate;

(2) the Mayor of the city of New Orleans or the Mayor's designee;

(3) one member who shall have experience in music education programs emphasizing jazz, to be appointed by the Secretary from among recommendations submitted by the Mayor of New Orleans;

(4) one member who is knowledgeable about tourism, to be appointed by the Secretary from among recommendations submitted by local business and economic development groups;

(5) one member to be appointed by the Secretary from among recommendations submitted by the producers of the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival who shall have experience in the production of such Festival;

(6) one member to be appointed by the Secretary from among recommendations submitted by representatives of local historic preservation groups;

(7) one member who is a recognized musician with knowledge and experience in the development of jazz in New Orleans, to be appointed by the Chairman of the National Endowment of the Arts;

(8) one member who is a recognized local expert on the history and development of jazz in New Orleans and is familiar with existing local archival materials, to be appointed jointly by the Chairman of the National Endowment on the Humanities and the Librarian of Congress;

(9) three members with recognized expertise in jazz, cultural or folklife preservation and interpretation, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution;

(10) one member to be appointed by the Secretary who shall be a resident of the Treme neighborhood of New Orleans;

(11) one member to be selected from recommendations submitted by local social and pleasure clubs, to be appointed by the Chairman of the National Endowment of the Arts;

(12) one member to be appointed by the Governor of Louisiana who shall be a member of the Louisiana State Music Commission; and

(13) the Chairman of the Delta Region Preservation Commission who shall serve as an ex officio member of the Commission.

(b) DUTIES OF THE COMMISSION.—The Commission shall advise the Secretary in the preparation of the suitability and feasibility study required by section 1, and the views of the Commission members shall be included in the study transmitted to the Congress as provided in section 3.

(c) MEMBERSHIP.—No person who is an employee of the Department of the Interior shall be appointed to serve as a member of the Commission.

(d) COMPENSATION.—Members of the Commission shall serve without compensation.

Member of the Commission shall be entitled to travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, in the same manner as persons employed intermittently in government service under section 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(e) Chairperson.—The Commission shall elect a chairperson from among its members.

(f) Quorum.—A simple majority of the members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum.

(g) Meetings.—The Commission shall meet at least quarterly or upon the call of the Chairperson or a majority of its members.

(h) Public Hearings.—The Commission shall hold no less than three public hearings in New Orelans to consider the views of the public concerning the most appropriate means to commemorate jazz in the United States. At least one such hearing shall be held in the Teme neighborhood of New Orleans.

(i) Staff.—The National Park Service shall provide staff support and technical assistance as may be necessary to carry out the functions of the Commission.

(j) Termination of Commission.—The Commission shall terminate 60 days after the transmittal of the report to Congress.

SEC. 5. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Vento] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from California [Mr. Lagomarsino] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Vento].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks, and include therein extraneous material, on S. 2846, the Senate bill presently under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, jazz is a key American musical form whose birthplace was New Orleans. S. 2846 directs the Secretary of the Interior to conduct a study of the feasibility of establishing a unit of the National Park System to interpret and commemorate the history of jazz, especially in New Orleans. It is quite similar to H.R. 5650, introduced by our colleague, Lindy Boggs, whose service will be missed in this House as she concludes her services this term.

The Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs amended S. 2846 by adding consultation with the Secretary of the Smithsonian in order to access their expertise in jazz, by deleting the consideration of construction or reconstruction of a facility to commemorate the origins of jazz, and by making several minor changes to the preservation of jazz advisory commission. Any such study needs to consider whether the preservation and interpretation of this part of American history can best be achieved through the adding to Jean Lafitte National Historical Park, creating a new separate unit or providing technical and financial assistance.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that these changes strengthen this bill, and endorse its passage.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to be recognized on H.R. 5650. This bill, as amended by a substitute in full committee, would direct the Secretary of the Interior, in consultation with the Smithsonian, to conduct a study to recommend ways of preserving and interpreting the origins of jazz in New Orleans, including establishing or adding to a unit of the National Park System, or by providing technical and financial assistance through cooperative agreements.

A 15-member Commission is also established by this legislation, made up of mostly local members of the community with an expertise on jazz history, to advise the Secretary in the preparation of the study. The make-up of the commission further emphasizes the purpose of the bill to focus specifically on the birth of jazz in New Orleans.

Unfortunately, employees of the Department of the Interior are specifically prohibited by this bill from serving on the commission, even though the department would most likely be involved in any preservation or interpretation efforts at a New Orleans site.

Mr. Speaker, the bill as amended in full committee reflects a substantial improvement over the original bill. The bill emphasizes that the existing Jean Lafitte National Historical Park, as a unit of the National Park System, may be the most appropriate management option to commemorate the birth of this distinctive and world-famous Afro-American contribution to western music history. In fact, I understand that the staff at Jean Lafitte have already completed a study of the appropriate sites around New Orleans and how to best commemorate the history of jazz. They should continue to be the lead in any future management options in New Orleans, and in the interpretation of jazz history.

However, Mr. Speaker, I do have concerns on the precedence that this bill could set.

Jazz is not the only important musical form that has originated with America. In the Mississippi Delta region alone, the blues, gospel music, and other musical forms were not only powerful precursors to the evolution of jazz, but continue to be important musical forms in their own right. Will this legislation lead us in the future to be establishing parks or other management structures to commemorate these and other forms of music?

Mr. Speaker, with this bill, and the establishment of the Maine Acadian Culture Center which passed the House last week, I believe we are significantly expanding the role of the National Park System in the preservation of a wide variety of forms of American culture. I wonder if it is appropriate for the National Park Service to take on such an expanded role?

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Vento] that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 2846, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONDUCTING CERTAIN STUDIES IN NEW MEXICO

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5796) to conduct certain studies in the State of New Mexico, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 5796

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE I—ENCHANTED NATIONAL FOREST INFORMATION AND EDUCATION STUDY

SEC. 101. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) environmental education is fundamental to expanding our understanding of the environment;

(2) the natural resources found on national forests in New Mexico, the Land of Enchantment, can contribute to environmental education programs;

(3) the Forest Service plays a vital role in the environmental education of all Americans;

(4) a center to provide information on the national forests in New Mexico would increase public awareness of their national forests, increase participation in management decisions, and improve the public's appreciation of their national forests;

(5) there is not a central facility dedicated to providing information on the national forests in New Mexico to residents and out-of-State visitors; and

(6) in light of the opportunities provided by national forests and the importance of environmental education, it is necessary to identify, through a comprehensive study, the opportunities that are available to provide information to the public on the national forests of New Mexico and to expand the environmental education program for those forests.

SEC. 102. STUDY AND REPORT BY THE FOREST SERVICE.

(a) Study.—The Secretary of Agriculture, acting through the Chief of the Forest Service, shall conduct a study of the opportunities to establish a center to provide information on the national forests in New Mexico and to expand the environmental education program for those forests.

(b) Report.—Not later than 1 year after the date that funds are made available for the study referred to in subsection (a), the Secretary of Agriculture shall transmit the Study to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the House of Representatives.

(c) Contents of Study.—The study referred to in subsection (a) shall develop alternative means for the national forests in New Mexico to provide information that improves public awareness and participation in management of their national forests and to expand the environmental education program for those forests. Alternatives shall include an information and education center located in or near Albuquerque, New Mexico, and an expanded education outreach program.

SEC. 103. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out this title.

TITLE II—CAVE RESEARCH INSTITUTE

SEC. 201. FINDINGS.

The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The world's most exposed fossil reef, Capitan Reef, in southern New Mexico that includes Carlsbad Caverns, contains over 300 caves, including 75 identified caves in Carlsbad Caverns National Park and 22 caves in Guadalupe Mountains National Park.

(2) Recent explorations of Lechuguilla Cave at Carlsbad Caverns National Park have provided much new information about the wonders of this cave including the fact that it is the second deepest cave in the United States and contains outstanding world-class cave features such as gypsum crystal chandeliers and gypsum flowers.

(3) The Lechuguilla Cave has been described by cave researchers as possibly the finest cave researchers as possibly the finest cave in America.

(4) The interest and excitement of cave researchers throughout the world have been focused on Carlsbad Caverns National Park.

(5) Cave researchers could use this research institute as an operational base for study of caves in other regions and as a focal point for storage of data on cave geology and speleology.

(6) The Congress, with the passage of Public Law 100–691, the Federal Cave Resources Protection Act of 1988, recognized the significance of cave resources on Federal lands and established the policy that Federal lands be managed in a manner which protects and maintains, to the extent practicable, significant cave resources.

SEC. 202. ESTABLISHMENT OF CAVE RESEARCH PROGRAM.

(a) Establishment.—In order to provide for needed research relating to cave resources on certain lands in the United States, the Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Director of the National Park Service shall establish and administer a Cave Research Program (hereinafter in this title referred to as the "Program"). The Program shall include the orderly and scholarly collection, analysis, and dissemination of research material related to caves in lands managed by the National Park Service including, but not limited to, Carlsbad Caverns National Park and the Capitan Reef area.

(b) Functions.—The Program shall produce educational and interpretive information and materials vital to public understanding of cave geology, assist students and researchers, and provide for a comprehensive evaluation of cave resources and measures needed for their protection.

(c) Emphasis.—The Program shall be directed primarily toward lands managed by the National Park Service, but the Secretary of the Interior may enter into cooperative agreements with other agencies or entities as may be appropriate to carry out the purposes of this title.

SEC. 203. CAVE RESEARCH INSTITUTE STUDY.

Not later than one year after enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior shall prepare and transmit to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the United States Senate and the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the United States House of Representatives a study on the feasibility of establishing a Cave Research Institute. The Study shall include the need for such a facility, its costs, its purposes, what the facility should include and where it should be located. An analysis of potential sites for the Institute should include, but not be limited to, Carlsbad Caverns National Park.

SEC. 204. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this title.

TITLE III—PREHISTORIC TRACKWAY STUDY

SEC. 301. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) Findings.—The Congress finds that—

(1) fossils are important for scientific studies of prehistoric life on earth;

(2) lands administered by the Bureau of Land Management in the Robledo Mountains in New Mexico contain one of the most important fossil discoveries of the 20th century;

(3) discoveries have included prehistoric tracks of amphibians, reptiles, arthropods and insects, extensive plant fossils, and clues to the weather and climate of the period;

(4) fossil footprints that form trackways help scientists recreate the environment and habitat that supported prehistoric life;

(5) nearly one hundred trackways from the Permian Age have been uncovered in the Robledo Mountains;

(6) the trackways are over 280 million years old and they document the emergency of life from water to land;

(7) the trackways are unique in length and represent most taxonomic groups, including many prints of previously unknown animals;

(8) the trackways and other fossils are being lost for scientific study through unsupervised collecting, and commercial quarrying; and

(9) the trackways and fossils found in the Robledo Mountains and surrounding areas should be evaluated for their potential protection and value for scientific interpretation and education.

(b) Purposes.—The purposes of this title are to—

(1) require the Secretary of the Interior to conduct a study to consider appropriate means to protect the discoveries and identify the scientific, interpretive, and public education values associated with the trackways and fossils located in the Robledo Mountains in southeastern New Mexico; and

(2) provide for interim protection of such trackways and fossils.

SEC. 302. INTERIM WITHDRAWAL.

(a) In General.—The area consisting of approximately 736 acres, as generally depicted on the map entitled "Prehistoric Trackways Study Area", numbered NM 030-01 and dated September, 1990 (hereafter referred to as the "study area"), is hereby withdrawn, subject to valid existing rights, from all forms of entry, appropriation, or disposal under the public land laws, from location, entry, or patent under the mining laws, but not from operation under the mineral leasing laws. Such withdrawal shall terminate on the date 2 years after the date the study referred to in section 303 is transmitted to Congress.

(b) Map.—The map referred to in subsection (a) shall be on file and available for public inspection in the appropriate offices of the Bureau of Land Management, Department of the Interior.

SEC. 303. STUDY.

(a) Study.—(1) The Secretary of the Interior, in cooperation with State and local governments, and institutions of higher education, shall conduct a study of the alternatives for the protection and interpretation of the fossil resources within the study area.

(2) The study shall include analysis of the importance of the discoveries at the site and an evaluation of the feasibility of developing a facility in New Mexico to evaluate, curate, display, and interpret the fossil resources located within the study area.

(3) The study shall recommend the preferred administrative designation for the area, including but not limited to potential designation as a unit of the National Park System, and the appropriate management agency.

(b) Transmittal to Congress.—Not later than 1 year after the date that funds are made available for the study required in subsection (a), the Secretary shall transmit such study to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the United States Senate and the Committee on Interior and Insular affairs of the United States House of Representatives.

SEC. 304. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this title.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Vento] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from California [Mr. Lagomarsino] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Vento].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include therein extraneous material on H.R. 5796, the bill presently under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5796, introduced by my colleague from New Mexico [Mr. Richardson] would direct the Federal Land Management agencies to do a series of studies that will enhance the management of our Federal lands. It directs the Forest Service to study ways to improve its environmental education and visitor information efforts for the five national forests in New Mexico. It directs the National Park Service to implement immediately a National Cave Research Program to study the many caves found within the National Park System and to evaluate the need for a Cave Research Institute. It directs the Bureau of Land Management to study how best to protect and interpret the fossilized trackways found in the Robledo Mountains of New Mexico. These mountains contain tracks of amphibians, reptiles, anthropods, and insects made 280 millions years ago including the prints of animals previously unknown. The bill would give 736 acres of the area interim protection.

The studies in this bill will help both the agencies and Congress better develop policies to protect and manage our natural resources.

□ 0050

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5796, which was introduced by Mr. Richardson and is supported by the entire New Mexico congressional delegation.

Title I, of this legislation requires the Forest Service to conduct a 1-year study of the feasibility of establishing an environmental education center in New Mexico and to expand environmental education programs on New Mexico's five national forests which total 9 million acres.

Title II originally directed the Secretary of the Interior to establish a cave research institute at Carlsbad Caverns. This title was opposed by the administration and myself for several reasons. First, such a facility would overemphasize cave studies there at the expense of the cave research at other units of the National Park Service. Second, because the Park Service's Research Program is undergoing a review by the National Academy of Science, creating a cave research institute before the Academy's final report is complete would be premature.

Because of these concerns, Chairman Vento and the New Mexico congressional delegation agreed to change title II to conform with the rest of the bill. As a result, it now directs the National Park Service to study the feasibility of establishing a cave research institute. I commend Chairman Vento and Mr. Richardson for agreeing to this more prudent approach.

The last title of this bill deals with protection of prehistoric trackways in the Robledo Mountains outside of Las Cruces, NM. I was amazed to learn that fossil trackways, which include prints of primitive scorpions, flying insects and reptiles, found in the area date back as much as 280 million years. These fossils are located on lands managed by the Bureau of Land Management.

Title III would direct the Secretary of the Interior to conduct a study of the alternatives for protecting and interpreting these fossil resources. The study would be conducted jointly with State and local governments and institutions of higher learning. Seven hundred and thirty-six acres of BLM would be withdrawn from the public lands and mining lands—but not from mineral leasing laws—upon enactment of this bill. The withdrawal would terminate 2 years after this study is submitted to Congress.

Mr. Speaker, with the changes made in title II, this legislation has been significantly improved. I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 5796.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. Richardson], our resident expert on paleontology.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the committee chairman for bringing H.R. 5796, a bill to conduct certain studies in New Mexico, to the House floor for consideration.

New Mexico, known as the Land of Enchantment, contains many natural resources that are nationally significant. H.R. 5796 would provide for three studies to see how these resources can best be protected.

First, the legislation would direct the Secretary of Agriculture to conduct a study to determine the need for a National Forest Information Center and an expanded environmental education program in New Mexico. There are over 9 million acres of spectacular national forests which are used for recreational and economic purposes. A National Forest Information Center in New Mexico would help the public determine how its natural resources should be managed as well as providing general tourist information.

Second, the bill would direct the Secretary of the Interior to take two steps concerning cave research; First, establish a Cave Research Program within the Department of Interior; and second, conduct a study on the feasibility of establishing a Cave Research Institute.

The Cave Research Program shall include collection of data, analysis, and dissemination of research material related to caves managed by the National Park Service, including Carlsbad Caverns National Park and the Capitan Reef area. The program shall be directed primarily toward lands managed by the National Park Service, but the Secretary may enter into cooperative agreements with other agencies or entities. The feasibility study shall be submitted to this committee within 1 year after enactment of this act and include the need for a Cave Research Institute, its costs, its purposes, what the facility should include, and where it should be located. An analysis of potential sites for the Institute shall include the Carlsbad Caverns National Park.

Third, the bill would direct the Secretary of the Interior to conduct a study of the fossil trackways recently discovered at the Robledo Mountains near Las Cruces, NM. The find at Robledo contains spectacular fossilized trackways of amphibians, reptiles, arthropods, and insects made 280 million years ago. The study would determine the importance of the discovery; evaluate how to curate, display, and interpret the fossils found in the area; and, recommend the proper administrative designation and agency for management of the site. The bill would also provide for an interim withdrawal of the area from operation of public laws which would extend for 2 years after the conclusion of the study.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation provides for studies that would enhance public knowledge about these unique natural resources in New Mexico. This legislation has the support of the entire New Mexico delegation and I urge my colleagues support.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Mazzoli). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Vento] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5796, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 5835, PROVIDING FOR RECONCILIATION PURSUANT TO SECTION 4 OF CONCURRENT RESOLUTION ON THE BUDGET FISCAL YEAR 1991

Mr. MOAKLEY, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 101-882) on the resolution (H. Res. 509) providing for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5835) to provide for reconciliation pursuant to section 4 of the concurrent resolution on the budget for the fiscal year 1991, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

AUTHORIZING CONVEYANCE OF CERTAIN LANDS IN IDAHO BY SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 267) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain lands in Idaho to Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Blevins of Kuna, ID, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

S. 267

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE I—CONVEYANCE OF IDAHO LANDS

SEC. 101. CONVEYANCE.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of the Interior shall convey to Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Blevins of Kuna, Idaho, by quitclaim deed or other appropriate instrument and without consideration, all right, title, and interest of the United States, excluding oil, gas, and other mineral deposits, in and to a parcel of public land described as the East half, Southeast Quarter (E ½ SL ¼) of Section 33, Township 2 North, Range 1 East, of the Boise Meridian in Ada County, Idaho.

TITLE II—CENTRAL CALIFORNIA

SEC. 201. FINDINGS AND POLICY.

The Congress finds that—

(1) areas of undeveloped National Forest System land on Los Padres National Forest have outstanding natural characteristics giving them high value as wilderness and will, if properly preserved, contribute as an enduring resource of wilderness for the benefit of the American people;

(2) it is in the national interest that certain of these areas be promptly designated as components of the National Wilderness Preservation System in order to preserve such areas as an enduring resource of wilderness which shall be managed to promote and perpetuate the wilderness character of the land and its specific multiple values for watershed preservation, wildlife habitat protection, scenic and historic preservation, scientific research and educational use, primitive recreation, solitude, physical and mental challenge, and inspiration for the benefit of all of the American people of present and future generations; and

(3) geologic evidence and production data suggest that a producing oil and gas field adjacent to the proposed Sespe Wilderness extends into such area.

SEC. 202. DESIGNATION OF WILDERNESS AREAS.

In furtherance of the purposes of the Wilderness Act, the following National Forest System lands are hereby designated as wilderness and, therefore, as components of the National Wilderness Preservation System—

(1) certain lands in Los Padres National Forest and the Angeles National Forest, California, which comprise approximately 209,000 acres, which are generally depicted on a map entitled "Sespe Wilderness Area—Proposed" and dated June 1990, which shall be known as the Sespe Wilderness;

(2) certain lands in Los Padres National Forest, California, which comprise approximately 30,000 acres, which are generally depicted on a map entitled "Matilija Wilderness Area—Proposed" and dated June 1990, which shall be known as the Matilija Wilderness;

(3) certain lands in Los Padres National Forest, California, which comprise approximately 43,000 acres, which are generally depicted on a map entitled "San Rafael Wilderness Addition—Proposed" and dated June 1990, and which lands are hereby incorporated in, and shall be managed as a part of, the San Rafael Wilderness;

(4) certain lands in Los Padres National Forest, California, which comprise approximately 11,600 acres, which are generally depicted on a map entitled "Garcia Wilderness Area—Proposed" and dated June 1990, and shall be known as the Garcia Wilderness;

(5) certain lands in Los Padres National Forest, California, which comprise approximately 36,200 acres, which are generally depicted on a map entitled "Chumash Wilderness—Proposed" and dated June 1990, and shall be known as the Chumash Wilderness; and

(6) certain lands in Los Padres National Forest, California, which comprise approximately 38,000 acres, which are generally depicted on a map entitled "Ventana Wilderness Addition—Proposed" and dated June 1990, and which lands are hereby incorporated in, and shall be managed as a part of, the Ventana Wilderness.

SEC. 203. ADMINISTRATION OF WILDERNESS AREAS.

(a) In General.—Subject to valid existing rights, each wilderness area designated by this title shall be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture in accordance with the provisions of the Wilderness Act. Any reference in such provisions to the effective date of the Wilderness Act shall be deemed to be a reference to the effective date of this Act.

(b) Fire Prevention and Watershed Protection.—Notwithstanding any provision of the Wilderness Act, in order to provide for the continued viability of the watershed affected by the wilderness designations made by this title, and to provide for the continued health and safety of the communities serviced by such watersheds, the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to take such actions in the Sespe, Matilija, Garcia, Chumash, Ventana, and San Rafael Wilderness areas as are necessary for fire prevention and watershed protection including, but not limited to, fire presuppression and fire suppression measures and techniques utilized elsewhere on the National Forest System.

(c) Sespe Condor Sanctuary.—Notwithstanding any provision of the Wilderness Act (16 U.S.C. 1131 et seq.), the Secretary of Agriculture may take such measures and utilize such facilities as are necessary for the management of the Sespe Condor Sanctuary, including (but not limited to) road, vehicular, and helicopter access, and related facilities. Such measures are to be taken only for the preservation and protection of the California Condor and related habitat as part of the recovery program for the condor.

(d) Special Management Restriction.—Notwithstanding any provision of the Wilderness Act (16 U.S.C. 1131 et seq.) and section 5112 of the Federal Onshore Oil and Gas Leasing Reform Act of 1987 (30 U.S.C. 226-3), the Secretary of the Interior may, under existing authority, issue oil and gas leases for the subsurface of the Sespe Wilderness. Such leases shall not allow surface occupancy and may be entered only by directional drilling from outside the Sespe Wilderness.

(e) Adjacent Management.—The Congress does not intend that wilderness areas designated under this title lead to the creation of protective perimeters or buffer zones around such wilderness areas. The fact that nonwilderness activities or uses can be seen or heard from areas within the wilderness shall not, of itself, preclude such activities or uses up to the boundary of the wilderness area.

SEC. 204. FILING OF MAPS AND DESCRIPTIONS.

As soon as practicable after enactment of this Act, a map and a legal description of such wilderness area designated in section 202 shall be filed with the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the House of Representatives, and each such map and description shall have the same force and effect as if included in this Act. Correction of clerical and typographical errors in each such legal description and map may be made. Each such map and legal description shall be on file and available for public inspection in the Office of the Chief of the Forest Service, Department of Agriculture, Washington, District of Columbia.

SEC. 205. RELEASE TO NONWILDERNESS USES.

The table contained in section 111(e) of the California Wilderness Act of 1984 (98 Stat. 1631) is amended by striking all lines pertaining to further planning areas on the Los Padres National Forest. These areas shall be released to nonwilderness uses in accordance with section 111 (except for subsection (e)) of such Act.

SEC. 206. DESIGNATION OF WILD AND SCENIC RIVERS.

In order to preserve and protect for present and future generations the outstandingly remarkable values of Sespe Creek, the Big Sur River, and the Sisquoc River, all in California, section 3(a) of the Wild and Scenic River Act (16 U.S.C. 1274(a)) is amended by adding the following new paragraphs at the end:

"( ) Sespe Creek, California.—The 4-mile segment of the main stem of the creek from its confluence with Rock Creek and Howard Creek downstream to its confluence with Trout Creek, to be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture as a scenic river; and the 27.5-mile segment of the main stem of the creek extending from its confluence with Trout Creek downstream to where it leaves section 26, township 5 north, range 20 west, to be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture as a wild river.

"( ) Sisquoc River, California.—The 31-mile segment of the main stem of the river extending from its origin downstream to its confluence with Burro Creek, to be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture as a wild river.

"( ) Big Sur River, California.—The main stems of the South Fork and North Fork of the Big Sur River from their headwaters to their confluence and the main stem of the river from the confluence of the South and North Forks downstream to the boundary of the Ventana Wilderness in Los Padres National Forest, for a total distance of approximately 14.4 miles, to be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture as a wild river.".

SEC. 207. STUDY RIVERS.

(a) Designation.—Section 5(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act (16 U.S.C. 1271-1287) is amended by adding the following new paragraphs at the end thereof:

"( ) Piru Creek, California.—The segment of the main stem of the creek from its source downstream to the maximum pool of Pyramid Lake and the segment of the main stem of the creek beginning 300 feet below the dam at Pyramid Lake downstream to the maximum pool at Lake Piru, for a total distance of approximately 49 miles.

"( ) Little Sur River, California.—The segment of the main stem of the river from its headwaters downstream to the Pacific Ocean, a distance of approximately 23 miles. The Secretary of Agriculture shall consult with the Big Sur Multiagency Advisory Council during the study of the river.

"( ) Upper Sespe Creek, California.—The Main stem from its headwaters downstream to its confluence with Rock Creek and Howard Creek, a distance of approximately 18.5 miles.

"( ) Matilua Creek, California.—The segment from its headwaters to its junction with Murietta Canyon, a distance of approximately 16 miles.

"( ) Lopez Creek, California.—The segment from its headwaters to Lopez Reservoir, a distance of approximately 11 miles.

"( ) Arroyo Seco River, California.—The segment from its headwaters to the forest boundary, a distance of approximately 16 miles.".

(b) Consultation.—The studies of the rivers and creeks named in subsection (a) shall be made in consultation with local government authorities and appropriate local agencies.

SEC. 208. VENTANA LAND EXCHANGE.

(a) Map.—The map entitled "New Los Padres Reservoir Enlargement Project—Forest and Wilderness Boundary Adjustment—Los Padres National Forest" dated September, 1989 (hereafter in this section referred to as the "map") shall describe the lands for which exchanges and other actions are authorized by this section. The map shall be on file and available for public inspection in the Office of the Chief, Forest Service, Washington, District of Columbia.

(b) Boundaries.—Upon completion of the exchange, the boundaries of the Ventana Wilderness and Los Padres National Forest are hereby modified as necessary to accommodate the land exchange authorized by this section.

(c) General Authority.—Subject to valid existing rights, the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to offer for exchange to the California-American Water Company the lands comprising Parcel A and to receive, in exchange for Parcel A, all right, title and interest in Parcel B, as generally depicted on the map. The title to Parcel B shall be in California-American Water Company and the title conveyed in the exchange shall be by general warranty deed and shall be otherwise acceptable to the Secretary. Such exchange is deemed to be an equal value exchange. Nothing in this section shall preclude the Secretary from exchanging Parcel A to the California-American Water Company in exchange for other lands utilizing existing exchange authorities in the event that the California-American Water Company does not acquire title to Parcel B.

(d) Management.—Upon acquisition by the United States, Parcel B shall be thereafter managed as National Forest Wilderness and shall be withdrawn from all forms of location and entry under the mining and mineral leasing laws and from the geothermal leasing laws.

SEC. 209. OFF ROAD VEHICLE TRAILS.

(a) Construction of Trails.—The Secretary of Agriculture shall construct in the area adjacent to the Chumash Wilderness Area interconnecting trails for off road vehicles connecting—

(1) Long Canyon and Sulphur Springs Trails, a distance of approximately 10 miles; and

(2) Lockwood Creek and the Dry Canyon Off Road Vehicle Trail, a distance of approximately 12 miles, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Proposed Off Road Vehicle Connector Trails" and dated June 1990.

(b) Closure of Trail.—The Toad Springs Off Road Vehicle Trail in the Chumash Wilderness Area shall not be closed until the construction of the trails described in subsection (a) has been completed and the trails are open for use by the public.

SEC. 210. MINERAL WITHDRAWAL.

(a) In General.—Subject to valid existing rights, federally owned lands and interests therein that are within and immediately adjacent to the California Coastal Zone depicted on a map entitled "Mineral Withdrawal Area, California Coastal Zone, Big Sur—Proposed" and dated June 1990 are withdrawn from entry or appropriation under mining laws of the United States, and from the operation of mineral leasing laws of the United States. On a case-by-case determination, the lands will remain open to the disposal of mineral materials under the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the disposal of materials on the public lands of the United States", approved July 31, 1947 (30 U.S.C. 601 et seq.) (commonly known as the "Materials Act of 1947").

(b) Mining Claims.—Subject to valid existing rights, all mining claims located within the withdrawal area depicted in the map described in subsection (a) shall be subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe to ensure that mining will, to the greatest practicable extent, be consistent with protection of scenic, scientific, cultural, and other resources of the area. The Secretary shall not approve any plan of operation prior to determining the validity of any unpatented mining claims. A patent for land within the withdrawal area that is issued after the date of enactment of this Act shall convey title only to the minerals together with the right to use the surface of lands for mining purposes subject to such regulations.

SEC. 211. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out this Act and amendments made by this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Vento] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from California [Mr. Lagomarsino] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Vento].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on S. 267, the Senate bill now being considered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this bill as passed by the Senate provides for the conveyance of about 80 acres of Federal lands near Kuna, ID, to Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Blevins. This conveyance would be by quitclaim deed, and any oil, gas, and other minerals would be reserved to the United States.

According to the Bureau of Land Management, in testimony before the Subcommittee on National Parks and Public Lands, the 80 acres involved here were part of a 160-acre tract for which a homestead entry was filed in 1904.

The westerly 80 acres of the tract was patented in 1919. However, the easterly 80 acres, now occupied by the Blevins, was never patented and is still under a Bureau of Reclamation withdrawal. In November 1929, that 80-acre tract was quitclaimed to a private party by the Ada County probate judge. Apparently the tract's status as a reclamation homestead was overlooked and the tract was assumed to be in private ownership. In 1961, the unpatented 80-acre tract was transferred to Kenneth Blevins' father, and in 1973, Kenneth Blevins received a warranty deed to this tract from his father. The Blevins family has occupied that 80-acre parcel since 1961 and has paid property taxes.

The administration has testified that no administrative remedies are available to remove the clouds on the title to these lands, and so legislation is necessary to accomplish this purpose.

Mr. Speaker, the bill as we bring it before the House also includes an additional title, title II, that consists of the text of H.R. 1473 as passed by the House nearly a year ago, on October 16, 1989. That bill, introduced by Representatives Lagomarsino and Gallegly, designates as wilderness certain lands in the Los Padres National Forest in California, designates several streams within the national forest for inclusion in the Wild and Scenic River System, and provides for wild and scenic river studies of certain other river segments in the area. These provisions are discussed in detail in House Report No. 101-286, the Interior Committee report to accompany H.R. 1473. We are including these provisions in this bill so as to facilitate their prompt consideration by the Senate.

I urge approval of this bill.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of S. 267. This bill would accomplish two very important purposes. First, it would resolve a private land ownership problem resulting from a bureau of reclamation land withdrawal. Second, this bill will designate approximately 340,000 acres of wilderness in California and designate approximately 210 miles in nine river segments as components or study rivers of the National Wild and Scenic River System.

As my colleagues may recall, the House passed a bill very similar to this second title almost 1 year ago. Since that time, I have continued to work with the various interest groups and Members of the other body to perfect and improve this bill. This a measure I originally introduced in the 100th Congress and I feel the final product we have before us today reflects a lot of hard work by a variety of individuals.

This bill is based on a thorough wilderness study conducted by the Forest Service. The public actively participated in that process which included 11 public hearings and over 1,800 written public comments. The current bill reflects a significant expansion of the wilderness proposal developed by the Forest Service. In fact, with the passage of this bill, approximately 45 percent of the Los Padres National Forest will be designated as wilderness. None the less, the final bill is supported by the administration.

Because this bill is a balanced and reasonable approach, it has a broad base of support. Although I certainly could not say that it has unanimous support from all interest groups, it does address the core concerns of a diverse range of interest groups from water interests to environmentalists. The final product we are passing today is a forestwide effort, far beyond the simple wilderness designation bill introduced several years ago.

I must convey to my colleagues a certain sense of urgency with respect to this bill. As you know, southern California is facing a serious water shortage. It is my belief that the current bill reflects a balanced approach to the water resource protection and development situation as we know it today. As this water shortage situation evolves over time, that balance may have to be shifted to accommodate new concerns and demands.

Therefore, I want to extend my appreciation to the chairman of the National Parks and Public Lands Subcommittee for providing this opportunity to reconsider this measure. I plan to continue to attempt to resolve any outstanding concerns with this measure and I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting it.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. Craig].

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague from California for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 267, a bill to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain lands in Idaho to Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Blevins of Kuna, ID. S. 267 rectifies a land conveyance problem that affects two of my constituents, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Blevins of Kuna, ID. Through no fault of their own 80 acres of land that the Blevins thought had been in private ownership since 1929 was indeed never patented and remained Federal land. To correct this error, S. 267 would authorize that ownership to the tract be conveyed to the Blevins.

The 80 acres of dry sagebrush land addressed in this bill were thought to have been in private ownership since the early part of this century. Indeed, the tract was quitclaimed to a predecessor in ownership to the Blevins by the ADA county probate judge in 1929. The land was then conveyed to Mr. Kenneth Blevin's father in 1961, and in 1973 the land was conveyed to Mr. Blevins. The Blevins family has occupied the 80 acre tract in question since 1961 and paid property taxes on the property since that time.

Equity in this matter calls for this land to be conveyed to the Blevins. The Department of the Interior testified during hearings that they have no objection to such a settlement.

I encourage support of S. 267.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Vento] that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 267, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill, as amended, was passed.

The title of the Senate bill was amended so as to read: "A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain lands in Idaho to Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Blevins of Kuna, Idaho, to provide for specified management of certain lands in California, and for other purposes.".

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BUDGET CONCERNS

(Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and to include extraneous material.)

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts. Mr Speaker, I rise to join in the ongoing debate on the shape of the budge that is currently being crafted by congressional leaders and in the variou committees. We in New England have been concerned about additiona energy taxes and in my area, there is concern about changes in the taxation of life insurance companies. Curren proposals seek to raise approximately $8 billion through a deferred acquisition cost tax. It is my belief that thi proposal has not received enough study. The impact on the life insurance industry has not been assessed.

Mr. Speaker, I will include for th Record a copy of an article from las Thursday's New York Times. Thi front-page article examines the current health of the life insurance industry. I urge all of my colleagues to rea this article before deciding on th DAC proposal. There has been th belief that the insurance industry ha the resources to absorb a new tax. Unfortunately, like many of the financia industries, the insurance companie are also suffering through an uncertain period. The downturn in rea estate and other investments has ha a huge impact on the insurance companies. If we hit this industry with new tax, we run the risk of pushin their investment funds out of th market and sliding the entire econom toward deep recession. As a member o the Banking Committee, I am als deeply concerned about the variou Government guarantees on investments, deposits, and pension fund This is a major tax—let's look befor we leap.

Life Insurers Jolted by Sharp Downturn in Real Estate Value

(By Peter Passell)

With real estate values going downhill an banks nationwide struggling to avoid bein buried in the slide, anxieties are focusing o yet another group of lenders: life insuranc companies.

Last week, the Travelers Corporation acknowledged large losses on its real estate investments and chopped its dividend. Th news prompted worried investors to se Travelers shares as well as those of othe major life insurers with sizable holdings of real estate and "junk bonds," sending their stock prices sharply lower.

Some analysts warn that troubled assets have grown so large at dozens of insurance companies that they could face the prospect of bankruptcy—especially if the economy weakens further. But most experts believe that a wave of bankruptcies putting large numbers of policyholders at risk remains unlikely. Even a lesser crisis of confidence in the life insurance industry, however, could tighten the credit noose on many business borrowers, deepening and lengthening the nowlikely recession.

"It would be disaster to lose a major source of capital," concludes Eden Sarfaty, the head of the National Organization of Health and Life Insurance Guarantee Associations.

Until the last decade, life insurance was the most predictable of financial industries. Much premium income was invested in bonds, mortgages and real estate, all of which were susceptible to fluctuations in value. But the death benefits and minimum investment returns promised to policyholders were based on such conservative assumptions that honestly managed insurance companies ran little risk of being unable to pay their obligations.

But since the early 1980's, said Terry Lennon a senior official in New York State's Department of Insurance, "life insurers have been forced to change because other financial institutions changed." Banks and savings and loans were freed to pay depositors any interest rate they chose, and the competition for savers' dollars grew hotter.

Companies guaranteed higher returns to policyholders, cutting margins for investment error. Yet in an effort to maintain profits, they sank more money in riskier assets, notably bonds from less-than-blue-chip borrowers. IDS Financial Services in Minneapolis estimates that "junk bond" holdings now represent 6.5 percent of life insurers' assets—a sum roughly equal to the industry's net worth.

As important, life insurers spread their nets wider in search of cash. Fixed annuities, effectively tax-deferred certificates of deposit, were marketed to tax-conscious investors. And guaranteed investment contracts—promises to pay fixed returns over periods as long as 10 years—were sold by the billions to pension funds.

VULNERABILITY STUDIED

Much of this new business was profitable. But it increased the probability that insurers would end up owing a lot of money at high interest rates, even as the income on their investments was falling. The savings and loan industry was trapped in just such a predicament in the early 1980's. Without the sense of security conferred by Federal insurance, many would have lost the confidence of depositers and been unable to attract new cash to meet old obligations.

IDS concludes that life insurers are how highly vulnerable to economy-wide shocks that raise interest rates, or force corporate borrowers into bankruptcy or undermine the value of commercial real estate. To test the degree of vulnerability, they estimated the likely losses of each of the 100 largest companies in the event of a moderate or a severe economic downturn.

In the "moderate loss" scenario, 18 would be at risk of insolvency, leaving state guarantee funds to pay policyholders about $3.1 billion. The "severe loss" scenario predicts that 34 companies might fail, with a total loss as high as $11.5 billion.

In a memo written at the request of John D. Dingell, chairman of a House committee that oversees financial industries, the American Council of Life Insurers disputes the assumptions behind the IDS analysis. Many of the junk bonds owned by insurers, the memo argues, are junk in name only; the corporations that borrowed the money are unlikely to default. And while the industry does indeed hold a lot of mortgages backed by sagging commercial real estate, much of its asset base is worth far more than book value.

WHOLESALE BANKRUPTCIES DOUBTED

"We're not saying everything is rosy," said Henri Bersoux, a spokesman for the association. "But it looks like it would require an unbelievably bad downturn" to lead to wholesale bankruptcies.

Mr. Lennon largely concurs: "You can't look at life insurers' assets without looking at their liabilities, too." In most cases, he points out, companies have years or even decades to pay claims. It is true that insurers' ultimate ability to pay depends on the recovery of real estate values. But a permanent slide in real estate, he argues, "is almost an Armageddon scenario."

If some big life insurance companies were to fail, would consumers' savings fall with them? Most policyholders are protected by state guarantees: State insurance commissions would levy taxes on solvent insurance companies to make good the losses. But Mr. Sarfaty of the insurance guarantee group notes that there are significant holes in the safety net.

Some 45 states have guarantee funds. Two, California and Alaska, will have guarantee systems by January. But three other states—New Jersey, Colorado and Louisiana—and the District of Columbia have no guarantee funds. Residents of these states would have to depend on the guarantee funds in the failed insurers' home states. And in 27 of these states, the funds are not obliged to compensate nonresidents.

INSOLVENCIES IN THE 80'S

From January 1985 through September 1989, 62 life insurance companies were declared insolvent by state regulators, according to the American Council of Life Insurance. Compensation for policyholders depends on state regulations. "The rules vary widely in terms of who is covered and to what extent," said Joseph M. Belth, a professor of insurance at the University of Indiana.

Guarantees in most states are limited to $300,000 in death benefits and $100,000 in cash value. And the prospects for pensioners whose security is based on guaranteed insurance contracts is even more problematic. Most state laws, Mr. Sarfaty points out, do not address the question of whether the pooled assets of individual pensioners are covered.

Ordinary "defined benefit" pensions, the kind in which a specific monthly check is guaranteed by the pension fund, are also protected by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, a Federal agency. But those with insurance company-backed assets locked up in other sorts of retirement plans, notably "401(k) salary reduction plans," would be left to make the case to state insurance commissioners.

To Mr. Sarfaty, this is all a reason for caution: "Choose an insurance company, whether large or small, with a good reputation and exprience in the type of policy you're buying."

Even the most pessimistic numbers on insurers' losses suggest, however, that most policyholders would eventually get their money back. State funds typically have the right to assess up to 2 percent of insurers' revenues. In a pinch, IDS estimates, the states could raise about $4 billion annually—enough to cover the most severe projected losses in about three years.

But other damage related to a solvency crisis in the life insurance industry could not be so easily undone. A loss of confidence in the industry could lead to a flurry of policy redemptions, the insurance industry equivalent of a run on banks.

It is not as easy to withdraw money from an insurance policy or an annuity as it is to withdraw deposits from a bank; substantial penalties would give policyholders good reason to think twice. But Robert Litan, an economist at the Brookings Institution, argues that "if you are really worried about solvency, you'd take the money out."

Fiduciaries responsible for managing the guaranteed insurance contracts held by pension plans are more sophisticated investors, and presumably less likely to panic. But there are only modest rewards to pension managers who take a chance and win, while the penalty for guessing wrong with other peoples' money is often a flood of lawsuits.

The consequences of even a minor run on the liabilities of the life insurers could be devastating to the economy. The industry channels tens of billions annually into corporate bonds and real estate. Without policy income, the flow would stop—or reverse.

The money previously going into insurance policies, Mr. Litan acknowledges, would not disappear unless total savings fell by the same amount. And eventually, one presumes, those corporations and builders would find alternate sources of capital.

But "eventually" could be a long time, Mr. Litan said.

HATS OFF TO CONGRESSMAN JERRY BRUCE

(Mr. ALEXANDER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, when I returned from Arkansas on Saturday evening around 11 o'clock and picked up the Washington Post, I was pleased to read on the front page an article that applauds the leadership and initiative of our colleague, the gentleman from Illinois, TERRY BRUCE, noting his work to insist upon clean fuels as a part of the clean air bill.

As a member of the U.S. Alternative Fuels Council, I feel a special need to applaud those leaders who rise out of the clamor and confusion of the current budgetary chaos gripping Washington to provide lasting and permanent leadership in addressing a preeminent issue which faces our Nation today—clean fuels and clean air.

My hat is off to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BRUCE].

POWER CHECK ON AIR BILL CRUSADER: SERVING HOME DISTRICT, REPRESENTATIVE BRUCE CROSSES HIS MENTOR

(By Michael Weisskopf)

On the wall of Rep. Terry L. Bruce's (D-Ill.) congressional office is a photograph of Rep. John D. Dingell (D-Mich.) peering over a chessboard Bruce hung the picture out of gratitude to Dingell for getting him on his Energy and Commerce Committee and as a tribute to a politician who knows how to exercise power.

If there is one lesson that Dingell has pounded home to his protege, it is the importance of building political coalitions to get what he wants. In his three terms in Congress, Bruce has applied the dictum to his advantage in many legislative fights, but never more effectively than last spring when, as the committee was drafting a new clean air bill, Bruce challenged the master himself.

In need of allies to accommodate the diverse interests of his downstate Illinois district, Bruce initially sided with Dingell's pro-industry coalition. But when their objectives parted, so did Bruce, defecting with farm bloc allies to the environmentalists after Dingell refused to carve out a big role for gasoline substitutes made from corn. Having outflanked Dingell, he went on to forge alliances wherever the needs of the 19th district took him, joining Texas lawmakers to shield low-producing oil wells from regulation, labor unions to save coal mining jobs from acid rain controls and conservative Republicans to protect small business from smog controls.

His coalition building not only benefited his own constituents, but helped bridge the deep divisions that have kept Congress from passing clean air bills for a decade. In the process, however, he forgot another fundamental Dingell lesson; No deals are final without the power to sustain them. And so when it came time for the chairman and chess master to select members of the conference committee that can change the product of months of painstaking negotiation in a few minutes, Dingell made sure that Bruce was not on it.

The education of Terry Bruce is not simply the story of a congressman's disappointment. It illustrates the difficulty of putting together lasting coalitions to pass complex legislation affecting a broad range of conflicting political and economic interests. It also suggests why final congressional passage of new clean air laws, after nearly 14 months of debate and approval by both the Senate and House, is far from certain by adjournment next week.

The first sign of progress in weeks in the conference committee occurred Wednesday when staff members reached a tentative agreement on auto pollution controls. The accord, if ratified by members, would remove a major obstacle. But since then talks bogged down over controls of industrial toxics, one of several thorny issues left for conferees as they struggle to finish work by the Monday deadline set by congressional leaders.

Passing the first new clean air bill since 1977 did not seem so forbidding a task in July 1989 when president Bush introduced the administration bill that would become the framework for the ensuring debate. The bill had three main objectives—curbing urban smog, imposing a nationwide cap on the ingredients of acid rain and limiting cancer-causing industrial emissions—that it is estimated would cost industry $25 billion to achieve through the installation of new technology and changes in manufacturing processes.

No one knows the political costs of clean air better than Bruce, 46, an ambitious, three-term congressman from the expansive farms and small, old-fashioned towns of south-eastern Illinois. Nearly every polluter targeted for controls in the bill—oil, auto, petrochemical, coal, utility, chlorofluorocarbons (DFCs) and consumer solvents—has plants and workers in his economically strapped district. But Bruce cannot survive politically by catering to industry. A Democrat in traditionally Republican Territory, he could not have won his seat in 1985 with out the backing of environmentalists concentrated at the University of Illinois in Champaign-Urbana.

If he was in a tighter box than most lawmakers in the clean air fight, Bruce, as a member of Dingell's committee, was also in a better position to extricate himself.

In the past, the 43-member committee has been a bottleneck of clean air legislation because of the heavy concentration of lawmakers from industrial states. As a protege of "the chairman," as he is always known, Bruce traditionally backed Dingell on clean air issues and opposed efforts by Rep. Henry A. Waxman (D-Calif.), an environmentalist and long-time Dingell rival. But with passage of legislation likely this year and pressures from his district mounting, Bruce knew he would need help, particularly since the bill would contain the first measures designed to fight acid rain.

In a district of so many concerns, acid rain seemed to touch most of them: environmentalists who want it cleaned up, utilities whose emissions are its cause and the miners who supply them coal.

Along with other midwestern congressmen, Bruce's first priority was seeing that the utilities received some financial assistance in return for any antipollution efforts they might be required to make. The subsidies they hoped to obtain would be used to limit rate increases for local homeowners and businesses and save jobs. Technology made affordable by the aid could clean up the emissions from the burning of high-sulfur coal by the uilities.

In February, Bruce helped Rep. Philip R. Sharp (D-Ind.) draft a proposal to pay for the subsidies by taxing industrial, non-utility sources of acid rain nationwide. Sharp had hoped to get approval from the subcommittee he chairs, and was promised help by Dingell if the vote was close. The indication was that Rep. Ralph M. Hall (D. Tex.), Dingell's local ally and fly-fishing buddy, could be persuaded to help the midwesterners in a pinch.

Nearing a majority, Sharp and Bruce turned to Waxman, who agreed to release one of his allies in exchange for three midwestern votes on an anti-smog provision.

Figuring that they were within a single vote of victory on the subsidies, the time was ripe to call in Dingell's pledge. But when Bruce went to get it, Dingell had bad news. "He said that he met with Hall and couldn't get him," recalled Bruce. "He said, 'There's nothing I can do for you.' "

Fresh from his disappointment on acid rain, Bruce focused on another issue of critical importance to his district—Bush's proposal to encourage the use of alternative fuels. Ethanol the grain-based substitute for gasoline, was seen by Illinois farmers as a way to open up a new market for their corn. Bruce wanted Dingell to increase the number of polluted cities where motorists would be required to use ethanol, and mad his case with the chairman. But when a aide came back with an answer, the new was again bad—he offered just 21 cities i stead of the 44 Bruce had pressed for.

Twice burned, Bruce and his allies met discuss strategy. Acid rain would be u again for consideration—this time by th full committee, the last major provision the bill on the agenda—and they feare that the process was moving so quickl with members cutting deals on other issu to satisfy their interests, that the midwes erners would have no leverage to get ar help.

If they were ever going to be able com back to the subsidy issue, they needed a ne ally. If Dingell refused to play, Waxma might, on clean fuels as well as acid rai Bruce said: "We weren't going to be goo soldiers and not get anything out of it. W intended to jolt [Dingell]."

By siding with Waxman's environment bloc on clean fuels, a motor vehicle issue i portant to Dingell and his Detroit-area d trict, they risked alienating the powerf chairman. But Dingell posed a real danger he felt betrayed on an issue so important automakers. Bruce decided to go ahe anyway, and joined with Waxman in su port of "reformulated gasoline," a clean burning fuel to be sold in 44 polluted cities twice as many as Dingell's latest offer.

Dingell called the committee into sessi an hour after the agreement. Apparent sensing that the momentum was swinging
Waxman on clean fuels, Dingell call Bruce to the podium. Leaning forward in h chair, he angrily reminded Bruce how got on the committee, how he had been vited to accompany Dingell on official tri to Europe and Central America and how h prospects to move up the ranks were in Di gell's hands.

With the opposition gaining, Ding quickly called the roll and won by a sing vote. But the victory was short-lived. Whe a month later, the bill finally got to t floor, where Dingell has less influence, t same coalition of farmers and environme talists was too powerful to stop and he w forced to accept the basic terms of t amendment.

When the committee turned to acid ra
Dingell was not in a much better positio having committed himself to members wi contradictory interests. The committee w split between lawmakers from "dirt states, such as Illinois and those fro
"clean" states, mostly in the West a Southwest, whose utilities had switched clean fuels or technology years ago at gre expense and were not about to share t cleanup costs of big polluters elsewhere.

Dingell declared his neutrality, but by l ting negotiations go on, he gave the m westerners time to overcome their large d advantage in voting strength and eventua wring key concessions from the clean stat

The very act of crossing Dingell on cle fuels appeared to have gotten his atte tion—as Bruce had predicted. Once vi parts of Dingell's coalition, the midweste ers' independence "showed they couldn't taken advantage of," said Rep. Jim Coop (D-Tenn.), a leader of the clean states.

Having abandoned any hope of outrig subsidies for antipollution devices at m western utilities, Bruce's group turned attention to a mechanism in the administ tion bill designed to partially reimburse t dirtiest plants, the ones targeted for the b gest cuts in emissions.

For every ton cut below emission limits, they would receive a credit to be banked for later use or sold to other utilities seeking to expand operations. There was no comparable mechanism that would allow plants that were already clean to expand unless they bought credits from polluters.

Committee members from the clean states wanted credits for their utilities without having to buy them. The midwestern contingent led by Bruce and Sharp wanted credits as a way for their utilities to cover their costs and didn't want their reward for cutting emissions given away.

The negotiations amounted more to a barter, and credits were on the block. Dirty states had them; clean states wanted them. So did a large number of relatively clean utilities in other states that claimed they were shortchanged in the amount of emissions they would be allowed every year.

As the talks began, Bruce instructed the staff: "Solve the problem, get the vote." The concessions—in the form of credits—were tucked into larger proposals sent to the Republican lounge, crafted in arcane legislative language intended to cover only the intended beneficiaries: 40,000 tons a year for Florida utilities to accommodate the state's spurt in population and appease Rep. Michael Bilirakis (R-Fla.); 8,900 tons a year to cover a Baltimore Gas & Eelctric plant under construction and win over Rep. Tom McMillen (D-Md.)

With the balance shifting in favor of the Midwest, Bruce decided to go after the vote of Rep. J. Alex McMillan (R-N.C.), who had lined up with the coalition of clean states. McMillan's utility, Duke Power, complained that the method for determining credits was unfair to the company and denied it a fair share. On the night of April 4, as dozens of lobbyists milled outside the committee room, Bruce's group floated a comprehensive proposal with a specific provision devised for Duke Power, offering what appeared to be 35,000 tons per year in credits.

"I went out to Duke Power's lobbyist and said, 'We've taken care of your problem. Make sure we get the vote,'" recalled Michael Bushman, a Bruce aide. "A half hour later, McMillan showed up in our room."

It turned out to be the final blow for the clean states—they had no choice but to compromise.

The negotiations ended with a package of concessions for midwestern utilities more generous than the Senate had approved. Plants would receive two credits for every ton of emissions they cut below the new limits by using technology—a major concession to high-sulfur coal—and another year in which to comply by using the devices. Governors would have the right to mandate use of coal mined in their states.

By playing Waxman against Dingell, Bruce ended up with more then he would have gained if he had lined up consistently with either. But he paid a high price for his independence when it came to the final and ultimately most critical-round in passing the bill, the conference.

In a heated meeting a few days before the team was announced in late June, Bruce got the news from his old mentor. According to Bruce, Dingell was blunt. If Bruce felt compelled to vote his district interests in committee, how could he be trusted to follow Dingell's lead through the thicket of conference issues?

Dingell, in an interview, said that loyalty was "one of the important tests" in his selection of conferees but that Bruce did not fit the geographic criteria or play a role in the kind of issues necessary to balance the House team.

All summer and now into the fall, Bruce has been relying on a network of supporters to protect his district's interests inside the conference. But that is no substitute for being at the negotiating table, where a quick decision to delete a line from the bill or add a phrase can cost a utility millions of dollars, close a coal mine or limit new markets for corn-based ethanol.

Dingell, of course, is at the head of the table.

"I played by one set of rules," Bruce said, "and he played by another. Good deeds do not get rewards unless they're his good deeds."

ANNUNZIO SAYS AIRPORT NOISE LEGISLATION WOULD ADD TO O'HARE'S PROBLEMS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, there is, in the other body, legislation which would compound the noise pollution problems already in place at O'Hare International Airport in Chicago. It is speeding through the Senate faster than the Concorde. And, I fear, it may soon come before the House.

The basic legislation would allow airports to charge passengers a so-called head tax of up to $6 per round trip to go toward airport construction and improvements. However, the bill also would end the slot system, in which the number of flights is limited and allocated to airlines and private aircraft on an hour-by-hour basis, at several high-density airports, including O'Hare. Such a provision, if enacted into law, will make the already severe congestion and safety hazards at O'Hare even worse.

The lifting of the so-called high-density rule at O'Hare is a frightening prospect for those living near the airport. The skies over Chicago are already dangerously overcrowded and the number of near-misses grows annually. Lifting the rule will threaten the safety of those who fly through O'Hare and those who live beneath its flight patterns.

During my 26 years in Congress, I also have opposed increasing the number of takeoffs and landings at O'Hare because of the environmental problems caused to citizens living near or beneath the flight paths at the Nation's busiest airport. For the same reason, I have opposed the construction of additional runways at the airport.

Mr. Speaker, O'Hare contains only 7,000 acres which lie in the middle of a densely populated suburban area with flight patterns over an urban area. As a consequence, hundreds of thousands of citizens suffer from the noise and air pollution. The Federal Government has a role in insuring that the United States maintains a modern and safe national and international aviation system. But, the Government also must be required to have local residents play an important and much larger role in developing a noise policy for the airports, including O'Hare. We must not permit our established residential areas to be forced to change to commercial or industrial areas to become compatible with the airport.

I am also opposed to shifting liability for noise-damage lawsuits from airlines to the Federal Government and result in a taxpayer bailout for the industry. The Federal Government has enough money problems. It does not need to be saddled with those of the airline industry if liability for Federal and State personal injury and property loss damage claims are transferred from the airports and airlines to the Federal Government.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the basic legislation passed by the House on August 2, has been changed into a package that would add to the noise pollution at O'Hare. And this has been done without any Senate hearings to give those affected by the noise and congestion to be heard. The legislation was then attached to the reconciliation bill which Congress must pass if the Government is to avoid another shutdown. These extras must be stripped from the legislation before the House acts.

INTRODUCTION OF TECHNICAL AND MISCELLANEOUS SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1990

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing H.R. 5828, the Technical and Miscellaneous Social Security Act Amendments of 1990, to make noncontroversial, minor, and technical amendments to the Human Resource, Social Security and Medicare Programs within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means. These changes are described in more detail below.

HUMAN RESOURCES

Title I of the bill contains 19 human resource amendments affecting the child support enforcement, unemployment compensation, supplemental security income [SSI], aid to families with dependent children [AFDC], child welfare, and foster care programs. Among these are several time-sensitive provisions, including a permanent extension of authority for the Internal Revenue Service to intercept, from tax refunds, overdue child support owed to non-AFDC families.

The bill also includes several low-cost amendments proposed by the administration, such as additional authority for the existing repatriaton program which permits the United States to bring home certain destitute Americans from overseas, optional monthly income reporting requirements for AFDC families, and more equitable treatment of foster care and adoption assistance payments in determining AFDC eligibility. The human resource provisions of the bill have a total direct spending cost over five years of $13 million.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Title II of the bill includes provisions which improve benefits for disabled widows, enhance Social Security Administration services and beneficiary protections, restore telephone access to the local offices of the Social Security Administration and reform the representative payee system. In addition, it streamlines the attorney fee payment process, eliminates certain retroactive benefits and makes permanent the continuation of disability benefits during appeal.

The package also includes several provisions to make technical corrections in the Social Security Act and Railroad Retirement Tax Act. This package of Social Security items is budget neutral.

MEDICARE

Title III of the bill includes provisions relating to the Medicare Program.

Subtitle A contains items to improve the administration and effectiveness of the Medicare Program with no cost. Provisions regarding patient-self determination and standards for Medigap insurance as well as a number of miscellaneous provisions are included in this substitle.

Subtitle B contains Medicare initatives. These items are supported on a pay-as-you-go basis by proposed reductions in Medicare spending in Subtitle C. Provisions of Subtitle B include revisions of payments for university nursing education programs, Community Health Centers and rural clinics and nurse anesthestists. The rates for ESRD dialysis facilities would be increased.

Subtitle C includes a number of provisions to reduce spending for Medicare services by a sufficient amount to exceed the estimated costs of the initiatives in Subtitle B. These items are generally similar to provisions of the Committee-reported reconciliation bill. Items in this Subpart include revisions to the hospital outpatient blend for ambulatory surgery and radiology, and payments for unsurveyed overpriced procedures. The secondary payer policy for ESRD beneficiaries would be extended to 18 months.

TRIBUTE TO SCOTT MATHESON

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Utah [Mr. OWENS] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. OWENS of Utah. Mr. Speaker, it is late and quiet in this Chamber, where a few of us have gathered to pay tribute to former Utah Gov. Scott Matheson, who died last week, by all accounts one of the Nation's finest governors over the last two decades—and our close personal friend.

Last Saturday, I attended a remarkable and moving memorial service for former Governor Matheson in Salt Lake City and heard 5 people close to him, 2 brothers, 1 son and 2 friends, speak movingly of their experiences with him.

Scott was a citizens' candidate and a citizens' Governor. He was a rare public servant, one who, despite his enormous popularity, voluntarily relinquished that role and returned to private life.

I will not recite the Governor's biography, although I will place several pieces from Salt Lake City's newspapers in the RECORD. I will also place statements from Senators GARN and HATCH and from Congressman MO UDALL, as well as a copy of the very moving eulogy given Saturday in Symphony Hall by the Governor's son, Scott Matheson, Jr.

After being active in democractic politics for many years—but generally unknown to the public—Scott Matheson ran for the governorship in 1976 and defied the odds and won in his first try for public office. His platform was broad and reasoned, including support for environmental protection, a commitment to vital social services, and a firm dedication to education. He followed through on these broad themes during his administration. Utah's protection and development always came first for him. Among other projects, he devoted a tremendous amount of energy to Project Bold, an effort to group the scattered Utah State land inholdings in Federal lands and make them economically productive. His influence extended to the national sphere, and he served from 1981 to 1983 as president of the National Governors' Association. Had the national political climate been a little warmer toward Democrats in the 1980's, he could well have been the Secretary of the Interior.

I knew Scott for 25 years. We were close friends as well as political allies. We both fought for compensation for victims in southern Utah of open-air nuclear testing, we both fought the MX rail-based system, we both fought against locating a nuclear waste repository near Canyonlands National Park, and we both fought for the survival of the Central Utah Project.

It is deeply ironic that the multiple myeloma to which the Governor succumbed may have been caused many years ago when he lived and worked as a young lawyer in southern Utah during the peak of the open-air atomic testing. Under the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act, which became law this morning, Governor Matheson would probably be covered under the bill he fought for over the years. I am committed to finishing the Governor's work on Project Bold by working through a piece of legislation next Congress that will fairly address the issue. The central Utah project, which the Governor rescued from near oblivion, was passed by the House just an hour ago.

Utah loves its Governor. He transcended party lines. He took outspoken stands, with only his integrity as a shield, and the Utah voters rewarded him for it. He had, as he would have said, what a politician most needs—"guts."

I wish I could eulogize him the way he deserves to be eulogized. He was committed and wise, and—perhaps the highest praise—a genuinely good man. He had "guts." I will miss him personally, the State will miss him, and the Nation will miss him as well. He had much more to give. His voice for moderation, good sense, and progress will not soon be replaced.

REMARKS OF REPRESENTATIVE MORRIS K. UDALL

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank our co league from Utah for taking out this speci order tonight on behalf of former Uta Governor Scott Matheson.

I consider it a great privilege to hav known Scott Matheson. I found him to bright and talented public servant wh could be counted on whenever called.

Recently, I made a call to Scott in which asked if he would serve as nuclear waste n gotiator for the President of the Unit States. I thought at the time, that there w no one more qualified or knowledgeable f the position. I regret that the Governor d clined, for personal reasons, to accept th post. I believe the country would have bee ably served by Scott Matheson.

I have been in public service for for years or so, and I take special notice of th stand outs in elected office. Scott Mathes was a stand out. He devoted all of h energy, character and great intellect to h home state. Utah is fortunate to have h his leadership.

I will not repeat Scott's numerous accor plishments here tonight. The Congre might never adjourn. Instead, I think it su ficient to note, that upon his retireme from public office, Scott held the highe popularity rating of any Utah Governor.

My most sincere condolences go out Scott's family.

REMARKS BY SENATOR GARN

The Nation and particularly the state Utah have lost a great leader with t recent passing of former Governor Sc Matheson. He was not only a dear lifeti friend, he was an esteemed colleague who I respected tremendously. To me, he w always be a symbol of a true statesman. was loved and honored by Utahns as one the state's finest governors. And, he was vered nationwide for his character, valu and unique leadership abilities. A man wi vision, courage, and integrity, he was t hallmark of a good public servant. It is wi sorrow and heartfelt fondness that we b him farewell. We are fortunate that his fluence and example will endure as a tribu to the outstanding life he led.

STATEMENT OF SCOTT MATHESON BY SENATO ORRIN G. HATCH

Scott Matheson was a man of great cap ity, wit, wisdom, and charm for whom I h great admiration. He leaves behind him career in politics and law marked by o standing achievement and compassion his fellow man. During his tenure as gov nor of the state of Utah, Matheson work through myriad problems ranging from t Great Salt Lake flooding in 1983 to battli the federal government over compensati for open-air nuclear testing victims. While is ironic that he died of the same bo cancer that he worked for so many years link to government nuclear testing in t Nevada desert, I am happy to say that efforts were not in vain, as the recen passed radiation victim compensation will attest. He was an outstanding govern and I personally am going to miss him. I thankful for the privilege of knowing him these later years. It was a wonderful expe ence.

SCOTT MILNE MATHESON, 1929-90

(Eulogy by Scott M. Matheson Jr.)

Thirty-two years ago my grandfather and I were walking on the grounds of East High School in Salt Lake City, across the street from where he lived. It was a warm Saturday in October, and he was my babysitter for the day. We were all alone, and then I was all alone. He suffered a fatal heart attack, and shortly afterward, I at age 5, had to tell my father of our profound loss. His father was 61. He was a great person. He was a good person.

Thirty years later, my father and I were walking on the streets of Parowan, Utah, and he spoke of his father, how intelligent he was, how wise, how caring, how decent, how wonderful. My father said he could only aspire to be the person his father was. He looked to his father for advice, for strength, for hope, and for love. He idolized his father.

A few days ago I asked Norma to describe the relationship between my father and his. She responded, "The same relationship you had with yours." The three of us were truly blessed.

How do you eulogize the person you loved and respected and admired as much as is possibly imaginable? His wisdom, compassion, and sincerity; his intelligence, wit, and humility; his leadership, statesmanship, and vision; his honesty and integrity; his absolute and total integrity—how can human communication, even with the assistance of poetry and the universal language of music, attempt to take full measure of this extraordinary person?

My father asked me to write many speeches for him. I was deeply honored to do so. I wanted to write this one, but I have never felt so inadequate for the task. Nonetheless, as he said last week when commenting on the painful, tragic circumstances he was facing, "No matter what it is, you just have to do the best you can." He always did. And so must we.

Over the last ten years or so, I have joined many others in affectionately referring to my father as "the Gov," and I will do so today as well. However, when we were together, I just called him "Dad." We had such a special relationship. We were very close.

My family is extremely fortunate that he was our husband, our father, our brother, our uncle, our cousin, our nephew, and, of course, our grandfather.

When he and his brothers were growing up, they slept in a basement room on three twin beds lined up side-by-side. His brother Steve decided he loved his brother Scott so much that he chained their beds together with a lock. No one was closer to his siblings than my father was to Bonnie, Alan, and Steve. Perhaps our friend Tom Greene, brother Greene (as we call him), had it right when he called Steve and Scott "the Matheson twins."

Steve's bed is at Aunt Carol's house in Parowan now along with the lock and chain. What Steve did is essentially what all of us did, doing everything we could to bind ourselves to him.

We have heard much this week of how the Gov received his renowned work ethic from his parents, who would send him to Parowan during his growing up years to herd sheep and do other chores. When he was ten years old and about to leave on the bus for Parowan, his father put a $1 bill in his pocket for spending money. As soon as the Gov came back to Salt Lake at the end of the summer, he pulled the same dollar out of his pocket and gave it back to his father—which should show once and for all that a Democrat can be a fiscal conservative.

Several years later when the Gov was a teenager, his parents departed on a vacation and left the Gov home to take care of his little brothers. They decided to remodel the kitchen and ripped out all the cabinets and the floor material. Then the Gov instructed Steve and Alan that they would have the rest of the week to finish the job while the Gov was busy dating Norma. This is an illustration of how at a young age he had mastered the art of delegating responsibility, and the "flounder principle," which Justice Zimmerman referred to, was born.

The Gov met Norma in high school, and they have lived a romance for over forty years. One memorable Christmas, the Gov presented Norma with a diamond engagement ring, while Norma's gift to him was a spare tire for his car. This simply goes to show that Norma was the more practical of the two, at least then.

Scott and Norma—it is hard to think of one without the other. They shared everything in their public and private lives together. Their enjoyment of each other was arresting, their respect for each other profound, their love for each other golden.

The Gov loved to tell the story about the speech he delivered in Cannonville, Utah on the Fourth of July a few years ago. Unbeknownst to an older couple in the audience, my brother Jim was sitting next to them. When the Gov completed his remarks, the husband turned to his wife and said, "That was a pretty good speech." To which his wife replied, "I guess so, but I've heard his wife speak, and she's much better."

The Gov also loved to point out that when he and my mother were married, Norma's parents put him on probation for the next 29 years, and he was taken off probation only when he was elected Governor—for the second time.

When he announced that he would not seek a third term as Govenor, my father said, "Norma's good judgment and advice, her tireless service to the people of this state (especially senior citizens), and, most of all, her love and support, have made me a better governor and this state a better place in ways that cannot be expressed adequately and that most will never know." I think most of us do know.

My mother meant everything to him, and he everything to her. Everyone knew that just by seeing them together. She will miss him much more than words can express because they achieved in their relationship the very best that life has to offer.

Lu, Jim, Tom, and I will take care of her because our father taught us well. He taught us so many things. Dad struck a delicate balance between supplying the guiding hand and letting us find our way. It seemed to work. He took pride in our accomplishments, large and small, but he was most pleased, regardless of outcome, when he knew we had done our best. He took an active role in our education, helping us get through algebra and trigonometry and chemistry even though we probably understood the subjects better at first than he did. Although he never taught in law school, he was the best law professor I ever had.

The one person who was always a step or two ahead of Dad was Tom. I think the Gov realized this when Tom was seven years old and ordered the complete Encyclopedia Britannica on his own and started reading it. Tom started a doctoral program in astrophysics at Berkeley this fall, and when the Gov received in the hospital a pint of blood that Tom had donated a few weeks ago, he joked he might begin to understand some of the things Tom was talking about.

My father adored his grandchildren and was one of our best babysitters, playing Barbie Dolls and Legos with the gusto you all would expect. He was thrilled in recent months teaching Heather how to play checkers, catching fish near Parowan with Scotty, watching Sarah Grace dance the boogie woogie, and seeing the irrepressible Briggs perform a rendition of one of the many songs he somehow has managed to memorize from the broadway musical "Cats." His grandchildren were his inspiration, his hope. They called him "Big Papa."

One of his favorite experiences occurred in Washington, D.C. in November 1982. He was there for a meeting on the MX missile issue. My daughter, his first grandchild, had been born there the day before. KSL-Television had asked him for an interview on MX, and he had agreed on the condition that KSL come to the hospital and videotape and broadcast pictures of the Governor and his granddaughter. He did it so Norma could see Heather Matheson on the six o'clock news. Heather was so beautiful, and the Gov and Norma were so proud.

The Gov would not allow anything to get in the way of his family life or of his friendships. He enjoyed a remarkable number of close, personal friends. One of them, of course, is John Rokich, or JR (as we call him), the Magna country lawyer turned judge, who on New Year's Day would offer the Gov and an entourage of friends his Catholic wardhouse, as John called it, for an annual volleyball game that stressed sportsmanship above all. I recall when the Gov introduced John Rokich to Vice President Mondale as the most famous hog farmer in Utah, because that's what friends are for.

My father's private life and his public life joined as one, I think, at a dinner with family and close friends at the Pagoda Restaurant in September of 1976. It was the night of the primary election for governor, and the public opinion polls predicted that Scott Matheson would lose. The dinner group was rather glum, so the Gov stood up and reminded us that we had fought the good fight, we had given it our best effort, and the important thing is that we would go on from here together. Soon thereafter we learned that Scott Matheson was the Democratic candidate for Governor, and there was no stopping him from there on.

On occasions like this that involve a public servant, it is customary to say that a person loved his country, and my father certainly loved his country. But, in his case, it is more appropriate to say that Governor Matheson loved his state; and, make no mistake about it, his love for the State of Utah was uncompromising.

He brought a lawyerlike duty of zealous representation and fearless dedication to the governorship. The citizens of the State of Utah were his client. He constantly asked himself the same question in making decisions: what is in the public interest of the State of Utah? Political popularity was never a consideration, although, as Steve mentioned, he achieved the highest job approval ratings of any elected official in the State of Utah.

On the day before his death, I told him of the federal system's inability to formulate a budget for this country. His response was short, simple, and typically the Gov: "No guts," he said. "No guts."

Unlike many politicians, he loved to make tough decisions, and he was never afraid to make them. Indeed, he was prepared to take a risk if it served the public interest. Eleanor Roosevelt said that regret and indecision are two of the greatest thieves in life. But, when the Gov made a decision, he never looked back.

He would go on to the next problem, and the next one, and the one after that. His energy and enthusiasm would never abate regardless of the issue. The Gov would discuss state budget hearings or a municipal water project in a small rural county with the same passion and interest he would bring to the MX missile controversy or appointing state court judges.

He brought great self-confidence to everthing he did, along with his genuine humility. There was nothing pretentious about him, and he always remembered who he was. What a wonderful combination, what exceptional character.

One of his great qualities as a decision-maker was his ability to keep an open mind and be willing to consult and learn from others from throughout the community. In particular, he relied a great deal on his talented and hard-working staff, department heads, and numerous public servants throughout state and local government. He admired every public employee who approached work as a public trust.

Many of you are here today. He had great confidence in you. He demanded hard work and accountability, but he never criticized you for taking risks because that's what he wanted you to do. He expected great things from you then, and, were he here today, he would tell you that he expects even greater things from you in the future.

Special mention and tribute must be made concerning Governor Calvin L. Rampton, my father's great friend, mentor, and role model. Governor Rampton also was and is "The Gov," and he showed my father the way. Governor Matheson always had great admiration and respect for you, Governor, and, on his behalf and all of us, we are grateful for the important role you played in his life.

It seemed like Governor Matheson was born for the job, but there was more to it than that. Although he didn't know it, he had been preparing for the Utah governorship his entire life. When he announced his candidacy for governor in 1976 in Aunt Carol's living room in Parowan, he declared, "I know the difference between managing a government and leading a state. That difference is purpose."

He managed state government efficiently and creatively, but he also led the state with purpose and moral courage nurtured through hard work and diverse experience ranging from his work as a sheep herder in Parowan to a grocery store bagger for Safeway to a painter for Mountain Fuel to a surveyor for BLM to a prosecutor for Iron and Salt Lake Counties to a corporate lawyer for Anaconda and Union Pacific, all the while serving the legal profession and community in a variety of roles, including youngest president ever of the Utah State Bar.

No one, including himself, could have anticipated the perfect match between the person and the office, but that is exactly what happened between Scott Matheson and the Utah governorship. He brought to the job the right combination of background, training, temperament, judgment, intellect, toughness, and values. He loved the job.

In its report of his death, the New York Times said that Scott Matheson was Governor of Idaho from 1977 to 1985. I think he would have been amused, citing this as yet another example of East Coast provincialism about the West. The New York Times got it right ten years ago, however, when it reported, "Matheson is acquiring a reputation as possibly the best of all western governors."

Professor Larry Sabato of the University of Virginia and one of the foremost authorities on the American governorship wrote the following a few years ago: "Scott Matheson is universally considered by political observers to have been one of the most outstanding governors produced by any American state in modern times."

As my Uncle Alan remarked to me about a week ago, "Isn't it wonderful that so many people think he was the best at what he did?"

He knew full well that he benefitted from a stroke of good fortune to be elected in 1976. The story is familiar now: an unknown railroad lawyer threw his hat in the ring and the rest is history. That was a Cinderella campaign. Indeed, his experience in elective politics is a storybook in itself.

That may account for the fact that Governor Matheson was a pragmatist about public policy but an idealist about politics. He believed in the Jeffersonian ideal that politics should be only a chapter in a person's life, that public office is something to move in to, then out of. This principle guided his decision to leave the Governor's Office after two terms rather than seek a third.

In an interview, he said, "I feel so strongly on a personal basis about non-career politics that it would be unseemly for me not to practice what I preach."

Indeed, he was a "citizen candidate" and served as a "citizen governor."

His idealism also was reflected in his concern, as he put it in his second inaugural address, with the erosion of "the decency and civility of our political debate," and he urged "[t]hose who seek public office to set a tone consistent with the values they defend." He always did.

Governor Matheson believed in a strong two-party system for American and Utah government, and for the years during and after he left office offered a strong, credible voice and an important perspective on many important issues.

The portrait of him would be unforgivably incomplete if I did not mention the following: Like his father before him, he was proud to be a Democrat.

He said in 1976 that he was running for the next generation, not the next election. I think that is the reason he spent so much time during his governorship with children, especially at their schools.

One powerful example stands out. In 1981 he received a request to deliver the commencement address to the graduating seniors at Trout Creek, Utah, located towards the western border of the state. It turned out there were only going to be two graduates. Not only did he agree to deliver the speech, his doing so resulted in pictures and news stories in the Boston Globe and the New York Times.

I was practicing law in Washington, DC., at the time, and my boss, Edward Bennett Williams, approached me and said, "I saw your old man in the paper today. What the hell was he doing giving a speech to a couple of kids?" The Gov knew exactly what he was doing. He worked hard for education in the State of Utah, but he wished he could have done much more.

He wanted to do more about a lot of things. Which brings me to the point I leave you with about the Gov and the rest of us

Several individuals this week have pointed to a compelling quality. Larry Sabato and Kent Briggs said it about his governorship Jim Lee and Randy Dryer said it about his law firm, Joe Williams said it about his board of director position, and Norma said it about his approach to life generally: Scott Matheson was constantly moving forward full of ideas and energy, planning ahead never satisfied with the status quo, trying to make things better, looking to the future with enthusiasm, creativity, and hope. He made people believe in the future, and in themselves. He played a pivotal role in so many lives.

That is the reason no one can put a period at the end of Scott Matheson's life. It is reflected in one of the many notes and letters that Norma received this week. The Burtenshaws of Logan wrote: "Dear Norma and Family, . . . You and your children will have to finish his shortened life."

Governor Matheson left an extraordinary legacy, but, more than that, he left all of us with the mandate "to finish his shortened life."

My father said as much in his first inaugural address: "We stay only a moment, and then we're gone. While we're here, we should do what we can to protect the past and secure the future. It is now our time and there is much to do."

It is now our time, and there is much to do.

SCOTT M. MATHESON

As a Democratic governor in a heavily Republican state, Scott M. Matheson faced some heavy odds. Yet he managed to win elections handily, becoming one of Utah' few chief executives with national statur and one of the most popular governors in Utah history. Matheson, who died this pas weekend at the relatively early age of 61 made an enduring contribution to his stat and nation.

Matheson served as the state's chief executive from January 1977 to January 1985 Many believe he could have easily been elected to a third term as was Democrati Gov. Calvin Rampton before him.

There were several unsuccessful efforts to persuade him to be a candidate for the U.S Senate, and many times he was regarded a an exceptional nominee for the president' cabinet, especially the Department of Interior.

Matheson was general solicitor for the Union Pacific Railroad at the time he ran for governor of Utah in 1976. Few predicte that Matheson, a political novice, would b able to defeat both the more experience Democratic rival, John Preston Creer, o two-term Republican Attorney-Genera Vernon B. Romney. But he did—and convincingly.

He was a man of principle who was respected by people of both political parties— despite occasionally being on the opposit side of a majority of Utahns on some issues Somehow, that did not hurt his popularity

Immediately after his election, he tackle the state's problems with gusto and mad no effort to disguise his love for the governorship, which he found emotionally, an physically exhilarating.

Although he was known as a modest man with an abundance of good humor, he was also articulate in political debate and could be eloquent in defending the state and its citizens against what he regarded as unfair treatment by the federal government. He spoke out forcefully against proposed transfer of 888 Weteye nerve gas bombs to Tooele. He took the nuclear fallout issue to Washington, DC, where he used the force of his office and personality to secure a federal grant so that the University of Utah could study the link between nuclear fallout and cancer.

He also fought the federal government on everything from MX missile basing, to land reform, to water development. Locally, he worked hard to provide property tax relief and increased expenditures for education.

A devoted family man to his beloved wife, Norma, and his four children, Scott M. Matheson, one of Utah's greatest governors, will be remembered with fondness by his native state.

[From the Standard-Examiner, Oct. 8, 1990]

Scott Matheson—A Distinguished Life

Scott Matheson was the political phenomenon of 1976. He came from virtual obscurity to be the Democratic candidate for governor, a race that swept him across the political landscape through a tough primary battle and past an early polls favorite Republican contender and into the statehouse.

He soon became one of the state's most popular chief executives, his intelligence, sense of humor, sharp legal mind, compassion and political acumen serving him well.

As Utah's 12th governor, he managed the state during a time of vast industrial growth and prosperity. He quickly earned a reputation as a combatant with the federal government over state's rights.

He was respected for his passion as "the people's governor" and was held in high regard nationally with his peers.

Today, Utahns are stunned and saddened over the passing of former Gov. Scott Matheson. His courage battle with cancer for the past year only became public a month ago.

Matheson was unknown outside of the inner Democratic circles when asked by former three-term governor, Calvin Rampton, to seek the party's nomination as his successor.

He was adequately served by his credentials: Graduate of Stanford University Law School, Parowan city attorney, deputy Salt Lake County attorney, legal officer for Anaconda Co. and Union Pacific Railroad and a stalwart with the Democratic Party, although his only campaigns for public office were governor in 1976 and 1980.

He became an instant success on the campaign trail. His debating style and wit charmed audiences.

His homespun western style, friendly demeanor easily converted voters. He frequently appeared at rallies in plaid shirts, western cut suits and cowboy boots. This personal preference for western apparel and a casual atmosphere carried through into the governor's office along with a hospitable open door policy.

As governor, his battles with the federal government were legend. His most famous challenge and victory came when he lead the opposition over the establishment of MX missile rail garrisons that were proposed for the western Utah desert.

Other Matheson battles with the federal government were of equal significance: The Intermountain Power Project, funding for the Central Utah Water Project, battling for reimbursement for cancer victims of the Nevada nuclear fallout and a plan to trade state-owned land for large blocks of federal land.

He was a tough and resolute manager of state matters. He had a commitment to the education of Utah's young people and he fought valiantly with the Legislature in behalf of educational funding.

When Utah was inundated with flood waters in 1983, Matheson was on the front lines battling the raging streams. When the Great Salt Lake began its untainable rise, it was Matheson who proposed the pumps as a solution. His successor carried out the unpleasant and costly task.

Matheson was an astute politician who didn't necessarily abide partisan politics. He mastered a viable relationship with the GOP-controlled Legislature with appeals for nonpartisanship.

It was Scott Matheson's personal decision to remove himself from elected office, although the polls indicated he was clearly the frontrunner for a third term.

His political activism did not end when he left the governor's office. He was co-chairman of the National Democratic Policy Commission in 1985 and was chief strategist for the state Democratic Party Central committee.

His disdain for federal interference in state's rights prompted him to write a book "Out of Balance" after he left office.

Matheson was unyielding to a commitment for public service. Just a month ago and despite his worsening health conditions, he agreed to chair a committee in behalf of not-for-profit hospitals in their battle to avoid payment of property taxes.

Scott Matheson leaves innumerable legacies of achievement in public and private service to his state, his party, his profession and his family. He was a selfless public servant. He was a man of principle and deep abiding integrity. He was the quintessential governor. He did not betray the confidence given him by voters. His popularity with the people never diminished.

The Standard-Examiner joins in expressing condolences to the Matheson family and especially his wife Norma on their loss. The state has a void with the death of one of its most distinguished citizens.

[From the Salt Lake Tribune, Oct. 9, 1990]

Scott M. Matheson Leaves Utah Legacy of Political Excellence

Scott Milne Matheson's death Sunday is a profound loss to Utahns. Here was a man whose seemingly boundless energy, integrity, positive personal values, keen intellect and good humor bridged ideological divisions and set a new high standard of leadership for the state.

The former governor's untimely death to bone marrow cancer, at age 61, does not conclude his remarkable civic contributions.

Thanks largely to the work of the two-term chief executive, whose administration began in 1977, Utahns have been spared the dubious honors of hosting both the MX missile and a national nuclear waste dump. And, with sad irony, Utahns have just recently received a belated apology from the federal government for the open-air nuclear tests that apparently caused many fatal cancers, possibly including his own.

Gov. Matheson, a lawyer in Southern Utah while testing was going on in nearby Nevada in the early 1950s, died of multiple myeloma, one of the cancers covered by the victim compensation bill that passed Congress Sept. 27. As governor, he had demanded federal research into the effects of the nuclear fallout.

Although a Democratic governor working with a Republican Legislature, Scott Matheson managed to make headway on numerous political fronts. He sponsored—and won—the largest real budget increase for education in Utah history, for example.

His legacy lives on in local concern for environmental responsibility, better job opportunities for women and the elderly, state aggressiveness in assuring that federal programs respect local interests, tax relief for the poor, a more responsive state court system, a growing mass-transit system and the survival of the Central Utah Project, the last major water project financed by the federal government.

Utah may yet reap other benefits of Scott Matheson's vision as well. Gov. Norm Bangerter and Congressman Wayne Owens again have taken up his charge to consolidate and swap state and federal lands for more efficient management. State leaders continue to reach for his goal of achieving public education excellence.

The former governor's influence also can continue in the civic consciousness of his wife, Norma Warenski Matheson, and their four children. As he made movingly clear on more than one occasion, Norma was no silent partner but an outspoken, supportive adviser with good judgment. She undoubtedly still has much to offer her community.

The straight-talking governor didn't shy from such politically risky positions as supporting Planned Parenthood and the Equal Rights Amendment and opposing cable television censorship. His courage proved that a Utah statesman needn't sacrifice personal convictions for political expediency.

Utah voters, liberal and conservative, loved their 12th governor. Even while giving Republican Ronald Reagan the greatest plurality vote of any state in 1980, they gave their own Democratic incumbent an overwhelmng vote of confidence in his gubernatorial re-election. If he'd chosen to run for a third term or some other public office, opinion polls revealed, his wish would have been granted.

But Gov. Matheson said he preferred to be a "citizen" governor rather than a professional politician. He returned to his law practice, helped develop the national Democratic Party's policy platform and lent his support to a number of state issues.

Scott M. Matheson was one of the brightest and best public servants Utah has ever produced. The state was exceedingly fortunate to have enjoyed the benefits of this unassuming man's wit and wisdom for the all-too-brief time he walked this Earth—in cowboy boots, no less.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to my colleague and friend, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Stallings].

Mr. STALLINGS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I do appreciate him scheduling this special order to honor a good friend of mine, a good friend of the Rocky Mountain West, former Gov. Scott Matheson.

It is an honor for me to be part of this special order to pay tribute to this great friend and statesman. The southern part of my State is very close to Utah. It shares a lot of commonalities, common religious groups, common news sources, common way of life, and Scott Matheson played a very significant role in the lives of the people of southern Idaho.

I remember in 1984, as a young man running for Congress, Governor Matheson, who at that time had relinquished the power of governorship of Utah, came to Pocatello and at that time commented on the number of experiences he had had in southern Idaho as a lawyer working for Union Pacific.

That evening as Scott spoke on my behalf, he gave people a very powerful lesson as to what public service was all about, that it is time for people not to just take from the system but to give something back, and I think he was an example of that.

Utah, Idaho, the entire West benefited from the leadership of Scott Matheson and, in fact, his legacy will live on. I was impressed with the way he fought for things he believed in. He sponsored one of the largest real budget increases for education in Utah history, and he battled for the central Utah water project, and I think that it is very fitting this evening, as we passed, this House passed, the central Utah water project, this is something that Scott fought for and would have liked to have seen during his life but knows how important it is to the people of Utah.

He showed great leadership in taking on some of the trends of the time when he fought against the placement of the MX missile silos in the State of Utah. There were not a lot of voices in opposition at that time, and Scott spoke out, spoke out very clearly, and in fact he was correct in that position.

He was one of the pioneers in advocating a strong partnership between State and Federal government to develop energy resources. In fact, when many people were critical of the role of the Federal Government when, in fact, many politicians won votes in running against and bashing the Federal Government, Scott recognized the importance of a partnership between the two agencies, the two entities of government and fought for cooperation. In fact, Utah became a leader in developing a number of energy resources.

He was also a leader in environmental issues and received special recognition for his management of the State's natural resources.

I also recognize and appreciate the efforts of Governor Matheson to build the Democratic Party both on a State and national level. The Democratic Party is growing stronger in States like Utah and Idaho because of the willingness to build and to work and to serve as exhibited by Governor Matheson.

Governor Matheson is remembered in an editorial published in Tuesday's Salt Lake Tribune as a man "whose seemingly boundless energy, integrity, positive personal values, keen intellect and good humor bridged the ideological divisions, and set a new high standard of leadership for the State."

I concur with this tribute. Mr. Speaker, on a personal level, I will miss Governor Matheson. The State of Utah, the intermountain West and the Nation have lost a distinguished principled leader.

I express my gratefullness to his family for sharing this great man with the Nation, and I certainly will miss him. The people have lost, in fact, a great public servant.

Mr. OWENS of Utah. I thank my colleague from Idaho for his moving remarks.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. OWENS of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the subject of my special order tonight.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Mazzoli). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah?

There was no objection.

AMENDMENTS

Under clause 6 of rule XXIII, proposed amendments were submitted as follows:

H.R. 5422

By Mrs. BOXER:

—Page 25, after line 18, insert the following new title:

TITLE VI—OVERSIGHT OF INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES

SEC. 601. REPEAL.

Section 662 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1981 (22 U.S.C. 2422) is hereby repealed.

SEC. 602. CONGRESSIONAL OVERSIGHT.

(a) In General.—Section 501 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 413) is amended to read as follows:

"CONGRESSIONAL OVERSIGHT

"Sec. 501. (a) The President shall ensure that the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives (hereinafter in this title referred to as the intelligence committees') are kept fully and currently informed of the intelligence activities of the United States, including any significant anticipated intelligence activities, as required by this title, except that—

"(1) nothing contained in this title shall be construed as requiring the approval of the intelligence committees as a condition precedent to the initiation of intelligence gathering activities. Initiation of covert actions shall require prior approval of the intelligence committees; and

"(2) nothing contained in this title shall be construed as conferring on the President any of the powers enumerated in the Constitution as reserved to the Congress, particularly the power to declare war, Const. Art. I, Sec. 8, Cl, 11; to raise and support military forces, Const. Art. I, Sec. 8., C1, 12; to appropriate funds, Const. Art. I, Sec. 9., Cl. 7; nor as limiting the foreign policy powers enumerated in the Constitution as reserved to the President, particularly the power to act as Commander in Chief of the armed forces once Congress has declared war, Const. Art. II, Sec. 2., Cl. 1; and the power to make treaties, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, Const Art. II, Sec. 2., cl. 2.

"(b) The President, upon being made aware of any allegations of illegal intelligence activity, shall immediately report such allegations to the intelligence committees and keep the intelligence committees informed of the ongoing investigations into such activities, such reports to encompass any measures taken to prevent a recurrence of such illegal activity, including the reporting of such activity to the Department of Justice for prosecution.

"(c) The President and the intelligence committees shall each establish procedures as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this title, including procedures to ensure that each is kept fully and currently informed of intelligence activities.

"(d) The House of Representatives and the Senate, in consultation with the Director of Central Intelligence, shall each establish, by rule or resolution of such House procedures to ensure that all members of the Congress are informed regarding intelligence activities to the extent consistent with the need to protect from unauthorized disclosure classified information and information relating to intelligence sources and methods furnished to the intelligence committees or to Members of Congress under this title. In accordance with such procedures, each of the intelligence committees shall promptly call to the attention of its respective House, or to any appropriate committee or committees of its respective House, any matter relating to intelligence activities requiring the attention of such House or such committee or committees.

"(e) As used in this section, the term 'intelligence activities' includes 'covert actions', as defined in section 503(e)."

(b) Information Required To Be Disclosed; Findings.—The National Security Act of 1947 is amended—

(1) by redesignating sections 502 and 503 as sections 505 and 506, respectively; and

(2) by inserting after section 501 the following:

"REPORTING INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES

"Sec. 502. To the extent consistent with due regard for the protection from unauthorized disclosure of classified information relating to sensitive intelligence sources and methods, the President shall—

"(1) keep the intelligence committees fully and currently informed of all intelligence activities which are the responsibility of, are engaged in by, or are carried out for or on behalf of the United States Government, including any significant anticipated intelligence activity and significant failures; and

"(2) furnish the intelligence committees any information or material concerning intelligence activities which is within their custody or control and which is requested by either of the intelligence committees in order to carry out its authorized responsibilities.

"APPROVAL AND REPORTING OF COVERT ACTIONS

"Sec. 503. (a) In setting forth the procedures regulating covert actions, this title shall not be construed as authorizing the use of convert operations as a routine means of conducting foreign policy or achieving foreign policy objectives.

"(b) The President may not conduct covert actions without prior approval by the intelligence committees, except as set forth in subsection (c)(6).

"(c) Approval of a covert action by the intelligence committees shall be predicated on the following:

"(1) The preparation of and delivery to the intelligence committees by the President of a written finding establishing that the convert action is necessary to meet an extraordinary threat to the national security of the United States and detailing the covert action proposed, the purposes of the action, the means by which the action is intended to be carried out, and the Federal agency, agencies, or personnel to be used in the convert action.

"(2) The convert action does not propose, intend, or otherwise include the use of any third party to fund or conduct the operation, be such third party a foreign country or any agent thereof, private contractor, or other entity which is not an element of the United States Government.

"(3) The convert action does not propose, intend, or otherwise include the use of any department, agency, or entity of the United States Government other than United States intelligence agencies, the Department of Defense, and Federal law enforcement agencies.

"(4) The covert action does not propose, intend, or otherwise result in the influencing of United States political processes, public opinion, policies, or media.

"(5) The convert action does not propose, intend, or otherwise include actions which violate the Constitution of the United States, any treaties, such as the United Nations Charter, which under the Constitution are the Supreme Law of the Land, Const. Art. VI, cl. 2, or any statutes of the United States.

"(6) The approval by the intelligence committees of each convert action must be obtained in writing before the covert action can commence, except that the President may under extraordinary and emergency conditions, when time is of the essence, initiate a covert action prior to receiving approval from the intelligence committees, but such covert action shall cease within 48 hours of initiation unless express written approval of the convert action is given by the intelligence committees pursuant to such procedures as the intelligence committees may adopt to ensure a prompt response in such circumstances. "(d) the President shall—

"(1) keep the intelligence committees fully and currently informed of the status of all convert actions which are carried out for or on behalf of the United States Government, including significant failures;

"(2) furnish to the intelligence committees any information or material concerning covert actions which is in the possession, custody, or control of the executive branch and which is requested by either of the intelligence committees; and

"(3) ensure that the intelligence committees are notified within 24 hours of any significant change in a previously approved covert action, including any change in the nature or scope of the threat which the covert action was designed to counter.

"(e) As used in this section, the term 'covert action' means an activity or activities conducted by the United States Government to meet an extraordinary threat to the national security of the United States so that the role of the United States Government is not intended to be apparent or acknowledged publicly, but does not include—

"(1) activities to protect United States citizens from imminent bodily harm or from being seized or held as a hostage;

"(2) activities the primary purpose of which is to acquire intelligence, traditional counterintelligence activities, traditional activities to improve or maintain the operational security of the United States Government programs, or administrative activities;

"(3) traditional diplomatic or military activities or routine support to such activities;

"(4) traditional law enforcement activities conducted by the United States Government law enforcement agencies or routine support to such activities; or

"(5) activities to provide routine support to the covert activities (other than activities described in paragraph (1), (2), (3), or (4) of other United States Government agencies abroad.

"PENALTIES FOR VIOLATION

"Sec. 504. Any person who knowingly initiates or participates in a covert action in violation of this title shall be guilty for a felony punishable by up to 20 years in Federal prison, a fine of $100,000, or both.".

(c) Availability of Funds Subject to Congressional Approval.—Section 505 of the National Security act of 1947, as redesignated by subjection (b)(1), is amended—

(1) by striking out "501" in subsection (a)(2) and inserting in lieu thereof "503"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) No appropriated funds may be obligated or expended, or may be directed to be obligated or expended, for any covert actions, as defined in section 503(e), until such time as the intelligence committees have given express written approval of the covert action in accordance with section 503(c).".

(A) for discharges occurring during the period beginning January 1, 1991, and ending September 30, 1991, apply a combined area wage index consisting of—

(i) 75 percent of the area wage index determined using the survey of the 1988 wages and wage-related costs of hospitals in the United States conducted under such section, and

(ii) 25 percent of the area wage index applicable to the hospital for discharges occurring during fiscal year 1990, as determined using the survey of the 1984 wages and wage-related costs of hospitals in the United States conducted under such section; and

(B) for discharges occurring during fiscal year 1992 and fiscal year 1993, apply the area wage index otherwise applicable to the hospital under such section for discharges occurring during such fiscal year.

(4) Study of area wage index adjustments based on professional occupational component.—

(A) Collection of data.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall collect data on employee compensation and paid hours of employment for employees of subsection (d) hospitals (as defined in section 1886(d)(1)(B) of the Social Security Act) in various occupational categories, and shall provide such data to the Prospective Payment Assessment Commission.

(B) Report to congress.—Not later than September 1, 1993, the Prospective Payment Assessment Commission shall, using the data provided by the Secretary under subparagraph (A), prepare and submit a report to Congress analyzing methods to adjust the area wage index applicable to a hospital under section 1886(d)(3)(E) of such Act to take into account variations in occupational categories included in such index.

(5) Permanent extension of regional floor on standardized amounts.—

(A) In general.—Section 1888(d)(1)(A)(iii) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww(d)(1)(A)(iii)) is amended by striking "during the period" and all that follows through "1990" and inserting "on or after April 1, 1988,".

(B) Extension made on budget-neutral basis.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall make any adjustments resulting from the amendment made by subparagraph (A) in the amount of the payments made to hospitals under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act in a fiscal year for the operating costs of inpatient hospital services in a manner that ensures that the aggregate payments under such section are not greater or less than those that would have been made in the year without such adjustments.

(C) Effective date.—The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall apply to discharges occurring on or after October 1, 1990.

(6) Elimination of hospital off-set for services of physician assistants.—

(A) In general.—Section 9338 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1986 is amended by striking subsection (d).

(B) Effective date.—The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall take effect as if included in the enactment of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1986.

(7) Determination of reasonable costs relating to swing beds.—(A) Section 1883(a)(2)(B)(ii)(II) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1395tt(a)(2)(B)(ii)(II)) is amended by striking "the previous calendar year" and all that follows through the period and inserting "the most recent year for which cost reporting data are available with respect to such services (increased in a compounded manner by the applicable increase for payments for routine service costs of skilled nursing facilities under section 1888 for subsequent cost reporting periods and up to and including such calendar year) under this title to freestanding skilled nursing facilities in the region (as defined in section 1886(d)(2)(D)) in which the facility is located.".

(B) If, as a result of the amendment made by subparagraph (A), the reasonable cost of routine services furnished by a hospital during a calendar year (as determined under section 1883 of the Social Security Act) is less than the reasonable cost of such services determined under such section for the previous calendar year, the reasonable cost of such services furnished by the hospital during the calendar year under such section shall be equal to the reasonable cost determined under such section for the previous calendar year.

(C) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall apply to services furnished on or after October 1, 1990.

(b) Administration of Hospital Payment System.—

(1) Uniform reporting requirements for certain hospitals.—

(A) Requirements.—Each hospital described in subparagraph (B) shall, in accordance with the uniform system for reporting by medicare participating hospitals developed by the Secretary of Health and Human Services under section 4007(c) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987, report the information described in paragraph (2) of such section to the Secretary.

(B) Hospitals subject to requirement.—Each of the following hospitals is subject to the requirement of subparagraph (A):

(i) A hospital receiving an additional payment under section 1886(d)(5)(F) of the Social Security Act (relating to payments to disproportionate share hospitals).

(ii) A hospital classified by the Secretary of Health and Human Services as a sole community hospital under section 1886(d)(5)(D) of such Act.

(iii) A hospital classified by the Secretary as a regional referral center under section 1886(d)(5)(C) of such Act.

(iv) A hospital classified by the Secretary as a medicare-dependent, small rural hospital under section 1886(d)(5)(G) of such Act.

(v) A hospital designated by the Secretary as an essential access community hospital under section 1820(i)(1) of such Act.

(C) Effective date.—The requirement of subparagraph (A) shall apply to hospitals with respect to cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1990.

(2) Responsibilities and reporting requirements of prospective payment assessment commission.—

(A) Expansion of responsibilities.—Section 1886(e)(2) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 139ww(e)(2)) is amended—

(i) by striking "(2)"and inserting "(2)(A)", and

(ii) by adding at the end the following new subparagraphs:

"(B) In order to promote the efficient and effective delivery of high-quality health care services, the Commission shall, in addition to carrying out its functions under subparagraph (A), study and make recommendations for each fiscal year to the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives regarding changes in each existing reimbursement policy under this title under which payments to an institution are based upon prospectively determined rates and the development of new institutional reimbursement policies under this title, including recommendations relating to—

"(i) payments during each fiscal year under the prospective payment system established under this section for determining payments for the operating costs of inpatient hospital services, including changes in the number of diagnosis-related groups used to classify inpatient hospital discharges under subsection (d), adjustments to such groups to reflect severity of illness, and changes in the methods by which hospitals are reimbursed for capital-related costs, together with general recommendations on the effectiveness and quality of health care delivery systems in the United States and the effects on such systems of institutional reimbursements under this title;

"(ii) payments to hospitals located in large urban areas, including the appropriate treatment of bad debt and charity care and the relation between payments to hospitals under this section and payments under programs that reimburse hospitals for providing inpatient care to low-income individuals;

"(iii) payments to hospitals located in rural areas, including appropriate responses to problems relating to low hospital occupancy rates, the quality of care provided by such hospitals, and the access of individuals living in rural areas high-quality health care services; and

"(iv) changes in the insurance program established by this title that will constrain the costs to private employers of providing health care to employees.

"(C) By not later than June 1 before the beginning of each fiscal year, the Commission shall submit a report to the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives containing a description of its activities during the preceding fiscal year.".

(B) REPORTING REQUIREMENTS FOR COMMISSION AND SECRETARY; ELIMINATION OF OTA REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—Section 1886 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww) is amended—

(i) by striking subparagraph (D) of subsection (d)(4);

(ii) in the second sentence of subsection (e)(2)(A), as amended by paragraph (1)(A), by striking "In addition" and all that follows through "the Commission" and inserting "The Commission";

(iii) in subsection (e)(3)(A)—

(I) by striking "the Secretary" and inserting "the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives", and

"(ii) for cost reporting periods beginning in fiscal year 1993, 175 percent of the median of all approved FTE amounts for hospitals under this paragraph for cost reporting periods beginning in such fiscal year, adjusted by the area wage index applicable to the hospital under subsection (d)(3)(E) during such cost reporting period; and

"(iii) for cost reporting periods beginning in fiscal year 1994 or any subsequent fiscal year, 150 percent of the median of all approved FTE amounts for hospitals under this paragraph for cost reporting periods beginning in such fiscal year, adjusted by the area wage index applicable to the hospital under subsection (d)(3)(E) during such cost reporting period.".

SEC. 12005. PPS-EXEMPT HOSPITALS.

(a) REDUCTION IN PAYMENT FOR CAPITAL-RELATED COSTS.—Section 1886(g)(3) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww(g)(3)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(C) In determining the amount of the payments that may be made under this title with respect to the capital-related costs of inpatient hospital services of a hospital that is not described in subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall reduce the amount of such payments otherwise established under this title by 15 percent for payments attributable to portions of cost reporting periods or discharges (as the case may be) occurring during fiscal year 1991 or fiscal year 1992.".

(b) DEVELOPMENT OF NATIONAL PROSPECTIVE PAYMENT RATES FOR CURRENT NON-PPS HOSPITALS.—

(1) DEVELOPMENT OF PROPOSAL.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall develop a proposal to modify the current system under which hospitals that are not subsection (d) hospitals (as defined in section 1886(d)(1)(B) of the Social Security Act) receive payment for the operating and capital-related costs of inpatient hospital services under part A of the medicare program or a proposal to replace such system with a system under which such payments would be made on the basis of nationally-determined average standardized amounts. In developing any proposal under this paragraph to replace the current system with a prospective payment system, the Secretary shall—

(A) take into consideration the need to provide for appropriate limits on increases in expenditures under the medicare program;

(B) provide for adjustments to prospectively determined rates to account for changes in a hospital's case mix, severity of illness of patients, volume of cases, and the development of new technologies and standards of medical practice;

(C) take into consideration the need to increase the payment otherwise made under such system in the case of services provided to patients whose length of stay or costs of treatment greatly exceed the length of stay or cost of treatment provided for under the applicable prospectively determined payment rate;

(D) take into consideration the need to increase payments under the system to hospitals that treat a disproportionate share of low-income patients, teaching hospitals, and hospitals located in geographic areas with high wages and wage-related costs; and

(E) provide for the appropriate allocation of operating and capital-related costs of hospitals not subject to the new prospective payment system and distinct units of such hospitals that would be paid under such system.

(2) REPORTS.—(A) By not later than February 1, 1991, the Secretary shall submit the proposal developed under paragraph (1) to the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives.

(B) By not later than May 1, 1991, the Prospective Payment Assessment Commission shall submit an analysis of and comments on the proposal developed under

"(2) The standards and criteria established under paragraph (1) shall include—

"(A) with respect to claims for services furnished under this part by any provider of services other than a hospital—

"(i) whether such agency or organization is able to process 75 percent of reconsiderations within 60 days (except in the case of fiscal year 1989, 66 percent of reconsiderations) and 90 percent of reconsiderations within 90 days, and

"(ii) the extent to which such agency or organization's determinations are reversed on appeal; and

"(B) with respect to applications for a reconsideration of the target amount applicable under section 1886(b) to a hospital that is not a subsection (d) hospital (as defined in section 1886(d)(1)(B))—

"(i) if such agency or organization receives a completed application, whether such agency or organization is able to process such application not later than 60 days after the application is filed, and

"(ii) if such agency or organization receives an incomplete application, whether such agency or organization is able to return the application with instructions on how to complete the application not later than 60 days after the application is filed.".

"(B) Section 1886(b)(4)(A) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww(b)(4)(A)) is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "The Secretary shall announce a decision on any request for an exemption, exception, or adjustment under this paragraph not later than 120 days after receiving a completed application for such exemption, exception, or adjustment, and shall include in such decision a detailed explanation of the grounds on which such request was approved or denied.".

"(2) STANDARDS FOR ASSIGNMENT OF NEW BASE PERIOD.—Section 1886(b)(4) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww(b)(4)) is amended—

(A) by redesignating subparagraph (B) as subparagraph (C); and

(B) by inserting after subparagraph (A) the following new subparagraph:

"(B) In determining under subparagraph (A) whether to assign a new base period which is more representative of the reasonable and necessary cost to a hospital of providing inpatient services, the Secretary shall take into consideration—

"(i) changes in applicable technologies, medical practices, or case mix severity that increase the hospital's costs;

"(ii) whether increases in wages and wage-related costs in the geographic area in which the hospital is located exceed the average of the increases in such costs paid by hospitals in the United States; and

"(iii) such other factors as the Secretary considers appropriate in determining increases in the hospital's costs of providing inpatient services.".

"(3) GUIDANCE TO INTERMEDIARIES AND HOSPITALS.—The Administrator of the Health care financing Administration shall provide guidance to agencies and organizations performing functions pursuant to section 1816 of the Social Security Act and to hospitals that are not subsection (d) hospitals (as defined in section 1886(d)(1)(B) of such act) to assist such agencies, organizations, and hospitals in filing complete applications with the Administrator for exemptions, exceptions, and adjustments under section 1886(b)(4)(A) of such act.

(4) EFFECTIVE DATES.—The amendments made by paragraph (1) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act,. and the amendments made by paragraph (2) shall take effect as if included in the enactment of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989.

"(2) Designated summons.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) In general.—The term 'designated summons' means any summons issued for purposes of determining the amount of any tax imposed by this title if—

"(i) such summons is issued at least 60 days before the day on which the period prescribed in section 6501 for the assessment of such tax expires (determined with regard to extensions), and

"(ii) such summons clearly states that it is a designated summons for purposes of this subsection.

"(B) Limitation.—A summons which relates to any return shall not be treated as a designated summons if a prior summons which relates to such return was treated as a designated summons for purposes of this subsection.

"(3) Judicial enforcement period.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'judicial enforcement period' means, with respect to any summons, the period—

"(A) which begins on the day on which a court proceeding with respect to such summons is brought, and

"(B) which ends on the day on which there is a final resolution as to the summoned person's response to such summons."

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to any tax (whether imposed before, on, or after the date of the enactment of this Act) if the period prescribed by section 6501 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 for the assessment of such tax (determined with regard to extensions) has not expired on such date of the enactment.

SEC. 13202. ACCURACY-RELATED PENALTY TO APPLY TO SECTION 482 ADJUSTMENTS.

(a) General Rule.—Subsection (e) of section 6662 (defining substantial valuation overstatement under chapter 1) is amended to read as follows:

"(e) Substantial Valuation Misstatement Under Chapter 1.—

"(1) In general.—For purposes of this section, there is a substantial valuation misstatement under chapter 1 if—

"(A) the value of any property (or the adjusted basis of any property) claimed on any return of tax imposed by chapter 1 is 200 percent or more of the amount determined to be the correct amount of such valuation or adjusted basis (as the case may be), or

"(B)(i) the price for any property or services claimed on any such return in connection with any transaction between persons described in section 482 is 200 percent or more (or 50 percent or less) of the amount determined under section 482 to be the correct amount of such price, or

"(ii) the net section 482 transfer price adjustment for the taxable year exceeds $10,000,000.

"(2) Limitation.—No penalty shall be imposed by reason of subsection (b)(3) unless the portion of the underpayment for the taxable year attributable to substantial valuation misstatements under chapter 1 exceeds $5,000 ($10,000 in the case of a corporation other than an S corporation or a personal holding company (as defined in section 542)).

"(3) Net section 482 transfer price adjustment.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'net section 482 transfer price adjustment' means, with respect to any taxable year, the net increase in taxable income for the taxable year (determined without regard to any amount carried to such taxable year from another taxable year) resulting from adjustments under section 482 in the transfer price for any property or services. For purposes of the preceding sentence, rules similar to the rules of the last sentence of section 55(b)(2) shall apply."

(b) Conforming Amendments.—

(1) Paragraph (3) of section 6662(b) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) Any substantial valuation misstatement under chapter 1."

(2) Subparagraph (A) of section 6662(h)(2) is amended to read as follows:

"(A) any substantial valuation misstatement under chapter 1 as determined under subsection (e) by substituting—

"(i) '400 percent' for '200 percent' each place it appears,

"(ii) '25 percent' for '50 percent', and

"(iii) '$20,000,000' for '$10,000,000',".

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years ending after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 13203. TREATMENT OF PERSONS PROVIDING SERVICES.

(a) General Rule.—Subsection (n) of section 6103 (relating to certain other persons) is amended—

(1) by striking "and the programming" and inserting "the programming", and

(2) by inserting after "of equipment," the following "and the providing of other services,".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 13204. APPLICATION OF AMENDMENTS MADE BY SECTION 7403 OF REVENUE RECONCILIATION ACT OF 1989 TO TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING ON OR BEFORE JULY 10, 1989.

(a) General Rule.—The amendments made by section 7403 of the Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1989 shall apply to—

(1) any requirement to furnish information under section 6038A(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as amended by such section 7403) if the time for furnishing such information under such section is after the date of the enactment of this Act,

(2) any requirement under such section 6038A(a) to maintain records which were in existence on or after March 20, 1990,

(3) any requirement to authorize a corporation to act as a limited agent under section 6038A(e)(1) of such Code (as so amended) if the time for authorizing such action is after the date of the enactment of this Act, and without regard to when the taxable year (to which the information, records, authorization, or summons relates) began. Such amendments shall also apply in any case to which they would apply without regard to this section.

(4) any summons issued after such date of enactment,

(b) Continuation of Old Failures.—In the case of any failure with respect to a taxable year beginning on or before July 10, 1989, which first occurs on or before the date of the enactment of this Act but which continues after such date of enactment, section 6038A(d)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as amended by subsection (c) of such section 7403) shall apply for purposes of determining the amount of the penalty imposed for 30-day periods referred to in such section 6038A(d)(2) which begin after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 13205. OTHER REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) General Rule.—Subpart A of part III of subchapter A of chapter 61 (relating to information concerning persons subject to special provisions) is amended by inserting after section 6038B the following new section:

"SEC. 6038C. INFORMATION WITH RESPECT TO FOREIGN CORPORATIONS ENGAGED IN U.S. BUSINESS.

"(a) Requirement.—If a foreign corporation (hereinafter in this section referred to as the 'reporting corporation') is engaged in a trade or business within the United States at any time during a taxable year—

"(1) such corporation shall furnish (at such time and in such manner as the Secretary shall by regulations prescribe) the information described in subsection (b), and

"(2) such corporation shall maintain (at the location, in the manner, and to the extent prescribed in regulations) such records as may be appropriate to determine the liability of such corporation for tax under this title as the Secretary shall by regulations prescribe (or shall cause another person to so maintain such records).

"(b) Required Information.—For purposes of subsection (a), the information described in this subsection is—

"(1) the information described in section 6038A(b), and

"(2) such other information as the Secretary may prescribe by regulations relating to any item not directly connected with a transaction for which information is required under paragraph (1).

"(c) Penalty for Failure To Furnish Information or Maintain Records.—The provisions of subsection (d) of section 6038A shall apply to—

"(1) any failure to furnish (within the time prescribed by regulations) any information described in subsection (b), and

"(2) any failure to maintain (or cause another to maintain) records as required by subsection (a), in the same manner as if such failure were a failure to comply with the provisions of section 6038A.

"(d) Enforcement of Requests for Certain Records.—

"(1) Agreement to treat corporation as agent.—The rules of paragraph (3) shall apply to any transaction between the reporting corporation and any related party who is a foreign person unless such related party agrees (in such manner and at such time as the Secretary shall prescribe) to authorize the reporting corporation to act as such related party's limited agent solely for purposes of applying sections 7602, 7603, and 7604 with respect to any request by the Secretary to examine records or produce testimony related to any such transaction or with respect to any summons by the Secretary for such records or testimony. The appearance of persons or production of records by reason of the reporting corporation being such an agent shall not subject such persons or records to legal process for any purpose other than determining the correct treatment under this title of any transaction between the reporting corporation and such related party.

"(2) Rules where information not furnished.—If—

"(A) for purposes of determining the amount of the reporting corporation's liability for tax under this title, the Secretary issues a summons to such corporation to produce (either directly or as an agent for a related party who is a foreign person) any records or testimony,

"(B) such summons is not quashed in a proceeding begun under paragraph (4) of section 6038A(e) (as made applicable by paragraph (4) of this subsection) and is not determined to be invalid in a proceeding begun under section 7604(b) to enforce such summons, and

"(C) the reporting corporation does not substantially comply in a timely manner with such summons and the Secretary has sent by certified or registered mail a notice to such reporting corporation that such reporting corporation has not so substantially complied, the Secretary may apply the rules of paragraph (3) with respect to any transaction or item to which such summons relates (whether or not the Secretary begins a proceeding to enforce such summons). If the reporting corporation fails to maintain (or cause another to maintain) records as required by subsection (a), and by reason of that failure, the summons is quashed in a proceeding described in subparagraph (B) or the reporting corporation is not able to provide the records requested in the summons, the Secretary may apply the rules of paragraph (3) with respect to any transaction or item to which the records relate.

"(3) Applicable rules.—If the rules of this paragraph apply to any transaction or item, the treatment of such transaction (or the amount and treatment of any such item) shall be determined by the Secretary in the Secretary's sole discretion from the Secretary's own knowledge or from such information as the Secretary may obtain through testimony or otherwise.

"(4) Judicial proceedings.—The provisions of section 6038A(e)(4) shall apply with respect to any summons issued under paragraph (2)(A); except that subparagraph (D) of such section shall be applied by substituting 'transaction or item' for 'transaction'.

"(e) Definitions.—For purposes of this section, the terms 'related party', 'foreign person', and 'records' have the respective meanings given to such terms by section 6038A(c)."

(b) Conforming Amendments.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 6038A(a) is amended by striking "or is a foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States".

(2) The table of sections for subpart A of part III of subchapter A of chapter 61 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 6038B the following new item:

"Sec. 6038C. Information with respect to foreign corporations engaged in U.S. business."

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to—

(1) any requirement to furnish information under section 6038C(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as added by this section) if the time for furnishing such information under such section is after the date of the enactment of this Act,

(2) any requirement under such section 6038C(a) to maintain records which were in existence on or after March 20, 1990,

(3) any requirement to authorize a corporation to act as a limited agent under section 6038C(d)(1) of such Code (as so added) if the time for authorizing such action is after the date of the enactment of this Act, and

(4) any summons issued after such date of enactment, without regard to when the taxable year (to which the information, records, authorization, or summons relates) began.

SEC. 13206. STUDY OF SECTION 482.

(a) General Rule.—The Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate shall conduct a study of the application and administration of section 482 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. Such study shall include examination of—

(1) the effectiveness of the amendments made by this part in increasing levels of compliance with such section 482,

(2) use of advanced determination agreements with respect to issues under such section 482,

(3) possible legislative or administrative changes to assist the Internal Revenue Service in increasing compliance with such section 482, and

(4) coordination of the administration of such section 482 with similar provisions of foreign tax laws and with domestic nontax laws.

(b) Report.—Not later than March 1, 1992, the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate shall submit to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate a report on the study conducted under subsection (a), together with such recommendations as he may deem advisable.

Subtitle C—Retiree Health Provisions

Part I—Treatment of Reversions of Qualified Plan Assets to Employers

SEC. 13301. INCREASE IN REVERSION TAX.

Section 4980(a) (relating to tax on reversion of qualified plan assets to employer) is amended by striking "15 percent" and inserting "20 percent".

SEC. 13302. REQUIREMENT OF REPLACEMENT PLAN FOR PORTION OF EXCESS ASSETS.

(a) In General.—Section 4980 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) Increase in Tax for Failure to Establish Replacement Plan or Increase Benefits.—

"(1) In General.—Subsection (a) shall be applied by substituting '40 percent' for '20 percent' with respect to any employer reversion from a qualified plan unless—

"(A) the employer establishes or maintains a qualified replacement plan, or

"(B) the plan provides benefit increases meeting the requirements of paragraph (3).

"(2) Qualified replacement plan.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualified replacement plan' means a qualified plan established or maintained by the employer in connection with a qualified plan termination (hereinafter referred to as the 'replacement plan') with respect to which the following requirements are met:

"(A) Participation requirement.—Substantially all of the active participants in the terminated plan are active participants in the replacement plan.

"(B) Asset transfer requirement.—

"(i) 20 percent cushion.—A direct transfer from the terminated plan to the replacement plan is made before any employer reversion in an amount equal to the excess (if any) of—

"(I) 20 percent of the maximum amount which the employer could receive as an employer reversion without regard to this subsection, over

"(II) the amount determined under clause (ii).

"(ii) Reduction for increase in benefits.—The amount determined under this clause is an amount equal to the present value of the aggregate increases in the nonforfeitable accrued benefits under the terminated plan of any participants (including nonactive participants) pursuant to a plan amendment which)—

"(I) is adopted during the 60-day period ending on the date of termination of the qualified plan, and

"(II) takes effect immediately on the termination date.

(III) Treatment of amount transferred.—In the case of the transfer of any amount under clause (i)—

(I) such amount shall not be includable in the gross income of the employer,

"(II) no deduction shall be allowable with respect to such transfer, and

"(III) such transfer shall not be treated as an employer reversion for purposes of this section.

"(iv) Special rule for electing employers.—If an employer makes an election under paragraph (3)(A)(iii), the amount required to be transferred under this subparagraph shall be the amount determined under such paragraph (and no reduction shall be made in such amount under clause (i)(I)).

"(C) Allocation requirements.—

"(i) In general.—In the case of any defined contribution plan, the portion of the amount transferred to the replacement plan under subparagraph (B)(i) is—

"(I) allocated under the plan to the accounts of participants in the plan year in which the transfer occurs, or

"(II) credited to a suspense account and allocated from such account to accounts of participants no less rapidly than ratably over the 7-plan-year period beginning with the year of the transfer (or, if any limitation under section 415 applies, the period allowable under such section).

"(ii) Treatment of income.—Any income on any amount credited to a suspense account under clause (i)(II) shall be allocated to accounts of participants no less rapidly than ratably over the remainder of the period determined under such clause.

"'(iii) Unallocated amounts at termination.—If any amount credited to a suspense account under clause (i)(II) is not allocated as of the termination date of the plan—

"(I) such amount shall be allocated to the accounts of participants as of such date, except that any amount which may not be allocated by reason of any limitation under section 415 shall be allocated to the accounts of other participants, and

"(II) if any portion of such amount may not be allocated to other participants under subclause (I) by reason of such limitation, such portion shall be treated as an employer reversion to which this section applies.

"(3) Benefit increases.—The requirements of this paragraph are met if either of the following requirements are met:

"(A) Pro rata increase in benefits.—

"(i) In general.—A plan amendment to the terminated plan is adopted in connection with the termination of the plan which provides pro rata increases in the nonforfeitable accrued benefits of all participants (including nonactive participants) which—

"(I) have an aggregate present value not less than 25 percent of the maximum amount which the employer could receive as an employer reversion without regard to this subsection, and

"(II) take effect immediately on the termination date.

"(ii) Pro rata increase.—For purposes of clause (i), a pro rata increase is an increase in the nonforfeitable accrued benefit of each participant (including nonactive participants) in an amount which bears the same ratio to the aggregate amount determined under clause (i)(I) as—

"(I) the present value of such participant's a nonforfeitable accrued benefit (determined without regard to this subsection), bears to

"(II) the aggregate present value of nonforfeitable accrued benefits of the terminated plan (as so determined).

Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, the aggregate increases in the nonforfeitable accrued benefits of nonactive participants shall not exceed 40 percent of the aggregate amount determined under clause (i)(I).

"(iii) Election of replacement plan for active participants.—An employer may elect, in lieu of providing benefit increases under this subparagraph to active participants, to establish or maintain a qualified replacement plan with respect to active participants. For purposes of paragraph (2)(B), the amount required to be transferred to such qualified replacement plan shall be an amount equal to the aggregate present value of the increases in nonforfeitable accrued benefits of active participants which (but for this clause) would be required under this subparagraph.

"(B) Benefit increase of 30 percent or greater.—The aggregate present value of the increases in nonforfeitable accrued benefits described in paragraph (2)(B)(ii) is 30 percent or more of the maximum amount which the employer could receive as an employer reversion without regard to this subsection.

"(4) Coordination with other provisions.—

"(A) Limitations.—A benefit may not be increased under paragraph (2)(B)(ii) or (3)(A), and an amount may not be allocated to a participant under paragraph (2)(C), if such increase or allocation would result in a failure to meet any requirement under section 401(a)(4) or 415.

"(B) Treatment as employer contributions.—Any increase in benefits under paragraph (2)(B)(ii) or (3)(A), or any allocation of any amount (or income allocable thereto) to any account under paragraph (2)(C), shall be treated as an employer contribution for purposes of section 415.

"(C) 10-year participation requirement.—Except as provided by the Secretary, section 415(b)(5)(D) shall not apply to any increase in benefits by reason of this subsection to the extent that the application of this subparagraph does not discriminate in favor of highly compensated employees (as defined in section 414(q)).

"(5) Definitions and special rules.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) Nonactive participant.—The term 'nonactive participant' means an individual who—

"(i) is a participant in pay status as of the termination date,

"(ii) is a beneficiary who has a nonforfeitable right to an accrued benefit under the terminated plan as of the termination date, or

"(iii) is a participant not described in clause (i) or (ii)—

"(I) who has a nonforfeitable right to an accrued benefit under the terminated plan as of the termination date, and

"(II) whose service, which was creditable under the terminated plan, terminated during the period beginning 3 years before the termination date and ending with the date on which the final distribution of assets occurs.

"(B) Present value.—Present value shall be determined as of the termination date and on the same basis as liabilities of the plan are determined on termination.

"(C) Reallocation of increase.—Except as provided in paragraph (2)(C), if any benefit increase is reduced by reason of the last sentence of paragraph (3)(A)(ii) or paragraph (4), the amount of such reduction shall be allocated to the remaining participants on the same basis as other increases (and shall be treated as meeting any allocation requirement of this subsection).

"(D) Aggregation of plans.—The Secretary may provide that 2 or more plans may be treated as 1 plan for purposes of determining whether there is a qualified replacement plan under paragraph (2).

"(6) Subsection not to apply to employer in bankruptcy.—This subsection shall not apply to an employer who, as of the termination date of the qualified plan, is in bankruptcy liquidation under chapter 7 of title 11 of the United States Code."

(b) Amendments to Employee Retirement Income Security Act.—

(1) Fiduciary responsibility.—Section 404 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1104) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d)(1) If, in connection with the termination of a single-employer plan, an employer elects to establish or maintain a qualified replacement plan, or to increase benefits, as provided under section 4980(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, a fiduciary shall discharge the fiduciary's duties under this title and title IV in accordance with the following requirements:

"(A) In the case of a fiduciary of the terminated plan, any requirement—

"(i) under section 4980(d)(2)(B) of such Code with respect to the transfer of assets from the terminated plan to a qualified replacement plan, and

"(ii) under section 4980(d)(2)(B)(ii) or 4980(d)(3) of such Code with respect to any increase in benefits under the terminated plan.

"(B) In the case of a fiduciary of a qualified replacement plan, any requirement—

"(i) under section 4980(d)(2)(A) of such Code with respect to participation in the qualified replacement plan of active participants in the terminated plan,

"(ii) under section 4980(d)(2)(B) of such Code with respect to the receipt of assets from the terminated plan, and

"(iii) under section 4980(d)(2)(C) of such Code with respect to the allocation of assets to participants of the qualified replacement plan.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) any term used in this subsection which is also used in section 4980(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall have the same meaning as when used in such section, and

"(B) any reference in this subsection to the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall be a reference to such Code as in effect on January 1, 1991."

(2) Conforming amendments.—

(A) Section 404(a)(1)(D) of such Act (29 U.S.C. 1104(a)(1)(D)) is amended by striking "or title IV" and inserting "and title IV".

(B) Section 4044(d)(1) of such Act (29 U.S.C. 1344(d)(1)) is amended by inserting ", section 404(d) of this Act, and section 4980(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as in effect on January 1, 1991)" after "paragraph (3)".

SEC. 13303. EFFECTIVE DATE.

(a) In General.—Except as provided in subsection (b), the amendments made by this subpart shall apply to reversions occurring after September 30, 1990.

(b) Exception.—The amendments made by this subpart shall not apply to any reversion after September 30, 1990, if—

(1) in the case of plans subject to title IV of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, a notice of intent to terminate under such title was provided to participants (or if no participants, to the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation) before October 1, 1990, or

(2) in the case of plans subject to title I (and not to title IV) of such Act, a notice of intent to reduce future accruals under section 204(h) of such Act was provided to participants in connection with the termination before October 1, 1990.

Part II—Transfers to Retiree Health Accounts

SEC. 13311. TRANSFER OF EXCESS PENSION ASSETS TO RETIREE HEALTH ACCOUNTS.

(a) In General.—Part I of subchapter D of chapter 1 (relating to pension, profit-sharing, and stock bonus plans) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subpart:

"Subpart E—Treatment of Transfers to Retiree Health Accounts

"Sec. 420. Transfers of excess pension assets to retiree health accounts.

"SEC. 420. TRANSFERS OF EXCESS PENSION ASSETS TO RETIREE HEALTH ACCOUNTS.

"(a) General Rule.—If there is a qualified transfer of any excess pension assets of a defined benefit plan (other than a multiemployer plan) to a health benefits account which is part of such plan—

"(1) a trust which is part of such plan shall not be treated as failing to meet the requirements of subsection (a) or (h) of section 401 solely by reason of such transfer (or any other action authorized under this section),

"(2) no amount shall be includible in the gross income of the employer maintaining the plan solely by reason of such transfer,

"(3) such transfer shall not be treated—

"(A) as an employer reversion for purposes of section 4980, or

"(B) as a prohibited transaction for purposes of section 4975, and

"(4) the limitations of subsection (d) shall apply to such employer.

"(b) Qualified Transfer.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) In general.—The term 'qualified transfer' means a transfer—

"(A) of excess pension assets of a defined benefit plan to a health benefits account which is part of such plan in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1990,

"(B) which does not contravene any other provision of law, and

"(C) with respect to which the plan meets—

"(i) the use requirements of subsection (c)(1),

"(ii) the vesting requirements of subsection (c)(2), and

"(iii) the minimum benefit requirements of subsection (c)(3).

"(2) Only 1 transfer per year.—

"(A) In general.—No more than 1 transfer with respect to any plan during a taxable year may be treated as a qualified transfer for purposes of this section.

"(B) Exception.—A transfer described in paragraph (4) shall not be taken into account for purposes of subparagraph (A).

"(3) Limitation on amount transferred.—The amount of excess pension assets which may be transferred in a qualified transfer shall not exceed the amount which is reasonably estimated to be the amount the employer maintaining the plan will pay (whether directly or through reimbursement) out of such account during the taxable year of the transfer for qualified current retiree health liabilities.

"(4) Special rule for 1990.—

"(A) In general.—Subject to the provisions of subsection (c), a transfer shall be treated as a qualified transfer if such transfer—

"(i) is made after the close of the taxable year preceding the employer's first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1990, and before the earlier of—

"(I) the due date (including extensions) for the filing of the return of tax for such preceding taxable year, or

"(II) the date such return is filed, and

"(ii) does not exceed the expenditures of the employer for qualified current retiree health liabilities for such preceding taxable year.

"(B) Reduction in deduction.—The amount of the deductions otherwise allowable under this chapter to an employer for the taxable year preceding the employer's first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1990, shall be reduced by the amount of any qualified transfer to which this paragraph applies.

"(C) Coordination with reduction rule.—Subsection (e)(1)(B) shall not apply to a transfer described in subparagraph (A).

"(5) Expiration.—No transfer in any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1995, shall be treated as a qualified transfer.

"(c) Requirements of Plans Transferring Assets.—

"(1) Use of transferred assets.—

"(A) In general.—Any assets transferred to a health benefits account in a qualified transfer (and any income allocable thereto) shall be used only to pay qualified current retiree health liabilities (other than liabilities of key employees not taken into account under subsection (e)(1)(D)) for the taxable year of the transfer (whether directly or through reimbursement).

"(B) Amounts not used to pay for health benefits.—

"(i) In general.—Any assets transferred to a health benefits account in a qualified transfer (and any income allocable thereto) which are not used as provided in subparagraph (A) shall be transferred out of the account to the transferor plan.

"(ii) Tax treatment of amounts.—Any amount transferred out of an account under clause (i)—

"(I) shall not be includible in the gross income of the employer for such taxable year, but

"(II) shall be treated as an employer reversion for purposes of section 4980.

"(C) Ordering rule.—For purposes of this section, any amount paid out of a health benefits account shall be treated as paid first out of the assets and income described in subparagrpah (A).

"(2) Requirements relating to pension benefits accruing before transfer.—

"(A) In general.—The requirements of this paragraph are met if the plan provides that the accrued pension benefits of any participant or beneficiary under the plan become nonforfeitable in the same manner which would be required if the plan had terminated immediately before the qualified transfer (or in the case of a participant who separated during the 1-year period ending on the date of the transfer, immediately before such separation).

"(B) Special rule for 1990.—In the case of a qualified transfer described in subsection (b)(4), the requirements of this paragraph are met with respect to any participant who separated from service during the taxable year to which such transfer relates by recomputing such participant's benefits as if subparagraph (A) had applied immediately before such separation.

"(3) Minimum benefit requirement.—

"(A) In general.—The requirements of this paragraph are met if each health plan or arrangement under which applicable health benefits are provided provides that the applicable employer cost for each taxable year during the benefit maintenance period shall not be less than the higher of the applicable employer costs for each of the 2 taxable years immediately preceding the taxable year of the qualified transfer.

"(B) Applicable employer cost.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'applicable employer cost' means, with respect to any taxable year, the amount determined by dividing—

"(i) the qualified current retiree health liabilities of the employer for such taxable year determined—

"(I) without regard to any reduction under subsection (e)(1)(B), and

"(II) in the case of a taxable year in which there was no qualified transfer, in the same manner as if there had been such a transfer, by

"(ii) the number of individuals to whom coverage for applicable health benefits was provided during such taxable year.

"(C) Election to compute cost separately.—An employer may elect to have this paragraph applied separately with respect to individuals eligible for benefits under title XVIII of the Social Security Act at any time during the taxable year and with respect to individuals not so eligible.

"(D) Benefit maintenance period.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'benefit maintenance period' means the 5 taxable year period beginning with the taxable year in which the qualified transfer occurs. If a taxable year is in 2 or more overlapping benefit maintenance periods, this paragraph shall be applied by taking into account the highest applicable employer cost required to be provided under subparagraph (A) for such taxable year.

"(d) Limitations on Employer.—For purposes of this title—

"(1) Deduction limitations.—No deduction shall be allowed—

"(A) for the transfer of any amount to a health benefits account in a qualified transfer (or any retransfer to the plan under subsection (c)(1)(B)),

"(B) for qualified current retiree health liabilities paid out of the assets (and income) described in subsection (c)(1), or

"(C) for any amounts to which subparagraph (B) does not apply and which are paid for qualified current retiree health liabilities for the taxable year to the extent such amounts are not greater than the excess (if any) of—

"(i) the amount determined under subparagraph (A) (and income allocable thereto), over

"(ii) the amount determined under subparagraph (B).

"(2) No contributions allowed.—An employer may not contribute after December 31, 1990, any amount to a health benefits account or welfare benefit fund (as defined in section 419(e)(1)) with respect to qualified current retiree health liabilities for which transferred assets are required to be used under subsection (c)(1).

"(e) Definition and Special Rules.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) Qualified current retiree health liabilities.—For purposes of this section—

"(A) In general.—The term 'qualified current retiree health liabilities' means, with respect to any taxable year, the aggregate amounts (including administrative expenses) which would have been allowable as a deduction to the employer for such taxable year with respect to applicable health benefits provided during such taxable year if—

"(i) such benefits were provided directly by the employer, and

"(ii) the employer used the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the rule of section 419(c)(3)(B) shall apply.

"(B) Reductions for amounts previously set aside.—The amount determined under subparagraph (A) shall be reduced by any amount previously contributed to a health benefits account or welfare benefit fund (as defined in section 419(e)(1)) to pay for the qualified current retiree health liabilities.

"(C) Applicable health benefits.—The term 'applicable health benefits' means health benefits which are provided to—

"(i) former employees who, immediately before the qualified transfer, are entitled to receive benefits through the account by reason of their participation under the plan, and

"(ii) their spouses and dependents.

"(D) Key employees excluded.—If an employee is a key employee (within the meaning of section 416(i)(1)) with respect to any plan year ending in a taxable year, such employee shall not be taken into account in computing qualified current retiree health liabilities for such taxable year.

"(2) Excess pension assets.—The term 'excess pension assets' means the excess (if any) of—

"(A) the amount determined under section 412(c)(7)(A)(ii), over

"(B) the greater of—

"(i) the amount determined under section 412(c)(7)(A)(i), or

"(ii) 125 percent of current liability (as defined in section 412(c)(7)(B)).

The determination under this paragraph shall be made as of the most recent valuation date of the plan preceding the qualified transfer.

"(3) Health benefits account.—The term "health benefits account" means an account established and maintained under section 401(h).

"(4) Coordination with section 412.—In the case of a qualified transfer to a health benefits account—

"(A) any assets transferred in a plan year after the valuation date for such year shall, for purposes of section 412(c)(7), be treated as assets in the plan as of the valuation date for the following year, and

"(B) the plan shall be treated as having a net experience loss under section 412(b)(2)(B)(iv) for the plan year in which such transfer occurs in an amount equal to the amount of such transfer, except that such section shall be applied to such amount by substituting '10 plan years' for '5 plan years'."

(b) Conforming Amendment.—Section 401(h) is amended by inserting ", and subject to the provisions of section 420" after "Secretary".

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to transfers in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1990.

SEC. 13312. APPLICATION OF ERISA TO TRANSFERS OF EXCESS PENSION ASSETS TO RETIREE HEALTH ACCOUNTS.

(a) Exclusive Benefit Requirement.—Section 403(c)(1) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1103(c)(1)) is amended by inserting ", or under section 420 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as in effect on January 1, 1991)" after "insured plans)".

(b) Fiduciary Duties.—Section 404(a)(1) of such Act (29 U.S.C. 1104(a)(1)) is amended by inserting "and subject to section 420 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as in effect on January 1, 1991)," after "4044,".

(c) Exemptions From Prohibited Transactions.—Section 408(b) of such Act (29 U.S.C. 1108(b)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(13) Any transfer in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1996, of excess pension assets from a defined benefit plan to a retiree health account in a qualified transfer permitted under section 420 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as in effect on January 1, 1991)."

(d) Funding Limitations.—Section 302 of such Act (29 U.S.C. 1082) is amended by redesignating subsection (g) as subsection (h) and by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) Qualified Transfers to Health Benefit Accounts.—For purposes of this section, in the case of a qualified transfer (as defined in section 420 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986)—

"(1) any assets transferred in a plan year after the valuation date for such year shall, for purposes of subsection (c)(7), be treated as assets in the plan as of the valuation date for the following year, and

"(2) the plan shall be treated as having a net experience loss under subsection (b)(2)(B)(iv) for the plan year in which such transfer occurs in an amount equal to the amount of such transfer, except that such subsection shall be applied to such amount by substituting '10 plan years' for '5 plan years'."

(e) Notice Requirements.—

(1) In general.—Section 101 of such Act (29 U.S.C. 1021) is amended by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f) and by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

"(e) Notice of Transfer of Excess Pension Assets to Health Benefits Accounts.—

"(1) Notice to participants.—Not later than 60 days before the date of a qualified transfer by an employee pension benefit plan of excess pension assets to a health benefits account, the administrator of the plan shall notify (in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe) each participant and beneficiary under the plan of such transfer. Such notice shall include information with respect to the amount of excess pension assets, the portion to be transferred, the amount of health benefits liabilities to be funded with the assets transferred, and the amount of pension benefits of the participant which will be vested immediately after the transfer.

"(2) Notice to secretaries, administrator, and employee organizations.—

"(A) In general.—Not later than 60 days before the date of any qualified transfer by an employee pension benefit plan of excess pension assets to a health benefits account, the employer maintaining the plan from which the transfer is made shall provide the Secretary, the Secretary of the Treasury, the administrator, and each employee organization representing participants in the plan a written notice of such transfer. A copy of any such notice shall be available for inspection in the principal office of the administrator.

"(B) Information relating to transfer.—Such notice shall identify the plan from which the transfer is made, the amount of the transfer, a detailed accounting of assets projected to be held by the plan immediately before and immediately after the transfer, and the current liabilities under the plan at the time of the transfer.

"(C) Authority for additional reporting requirements.—The Secretary may prescribe such additional reporting requirements as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this section.

"(3) Definitions.—For purposes of paragraph (1), any term used in such paragraph which is also used in section 420 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall have the same meaning as when used in such section."

(2) Penalties.—

(A) Section 502(c)(1) of such Act (29 U.S.C. 1132(c)(1)) is amended by inserting "or section 101(e)(1)" after "section 606".

(B) Section 502(c)(3) of such Act (29 U.S.C. 1132(c)(3)) is amended—

(i) by inserting "or who fails to meet the requirements of section 101(e)(2) with respect to any person" after "beneficiary" the first place it appears, and

(ii) by inserting "or to such person" after "beneficiary" the second place it appears.

(f) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to qualified transfers under section 420 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 made after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Subtitle D—Employment Tax Provisions

SEC. 13401. DEPOSITS OF PAYROLL TAXES.

(a) In General.—Subsection (g) of section 6302 is amended to read as follows:

"(g) Deposits of Social Security Taxes and Withheld Income Taxes.—If, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, a person is required to make deposits of taxes imposed by chapters 21 and 24 on the basis of eighth-month periods, such person shall make deposits of such taxes on the 1st banking day after any day on which such person has $100,000 or more of such taxes for deposit.".

(b) Technical Amendment.—Paragraph (2) of section 7632(b) of the Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1989 is hereby repealed.

Subtitle B—Treatment of Social Security and the Balanced Budget Act

SEC. 14-201. FINDINGS AND DECLARATION.

(a) Findings.—The Congress finds that—

(1) Social Security is the bedrock of America's retirement system;

(2) Social Security today provides security to nearly 40 million Americans, with benefits going to older Americans, as well as to those who are disabled and to families of the elderly and disabled;

(3) Social Security has enabled older Americans to escape the specter of poverty and to live their lives in a manner that is productive and beneficial to society;

(4) the Social Security system must be protected, not only for those currently receiving benefits, but for Americans now in and entering the labor force;

(5) the large cohort of today's workers known as the "baby boom" generation will be retiring starting in the second decade of the next century;

(6) these workers are now accumulating Social Security retirement credits and will be entitled to benefits upon retirement;

(7) the Congress in amending the Social Security Act in 1983, following the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, provided for the accumulation of balances in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, in anticipation of the payments due in the next century;

(8) the balances in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund should be protected and used solely for the purpose of assuring future benefits; and

(9) the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law) has provided fiscal discipline and has resulted in a reduction in the Federal deficit since its enactment.

(b) Declaration.—The Congress declares that removing Social Security from Federal deficit calculations, protecting Social Security's reserves for the future of the Social Security's system, and balancing the Federal deficit exclusive of the Social Security trust funds will lead to a reduction of Federal debt and an increase in national savings, thereby providing long-term economic growth, the key to assuring that Social Security benefits will continue to be paid over the long-term.

SEC. 14-202. SOCIAL SECURITY'S BUDGETARY TREATMENT.

The Congress and the President hereby reaffirm that—

(1) the receipts, except receipts of interest earned on investments in U.S. securities, and disbursements of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund are off-budget; and

(2) the receipts, except receipts of interest earned on investments in U.S. securities, and disbursements of the Federal Old Age Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund shall not be included in the calculation of the Federal deficit for fiscal year 1991 and thereafter under the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985.

"(1) the enactment of such bill or resolution;

"(2) the adoption and enactment of such amendment; or

"(3) the enactement of such bill or resolution in the form recommended in such conference report, would cause a reduction in the present value actuarial balance of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, measured over the ensuing 5-year period (in the case of the Senate) or 5-year or 75-year period (in the case of the House of Representatives) as a result of changes to title II of the Social Security Act, or changes to sections 86, 1401(a), 3101(a), 3111(a), 3201(a), 3211(a), or 3221(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or chapter 1 of such Code (to the extent attributable to changes in section 86 of such Code). In the Senate, the Committee on Finance shall issue a report indicating the effect on 75-year actuarial balances at the time such bill, resolution, amendment, or conference report is reported.

"(b) Present Value Actuarial Balance Defined.—For purposes of this section, the term 'present value actuarial balance' with respect to a period of years means the difference between—

"(1) the sum of the actuarial present value of expected future income to the Trust Funds during the period and the assets of the Trust Funds at the beginning of the period, expressed as a percentage of the present value of expected future taxable payroll over the same period; and

"(2) the actuarial present value of expected disbursements from the Trust Funds, expressed as a percentage of the present value of expected future taxable payroll over the same period. Interest or earnings income from instruments other than interest-bearing securities issued by the Federal Government shall not be included in the determination of the present value of expected future income.

"(c) Determination of Present Value Actuarial Balance.—For the purposes of this section, the determination of changes in the present value actuarial balance shall be determined on the basis of estimates made by the Committee on the Budget of the House of Representatives or of the Senate, in consultation with the Congressional Budget Office and the Chief Actuary of the Social Security Administration.".

(2) Table of contents.—The table of contents of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974 is amended in title IV by—

(A) redesignating section 407 as section 408; and

(B) inserting after the item for section 406 the following:

"Section 407. Point of order against spending the social security reserves for purposes other than now required by the law.".

(b) Waiver of Point of Order.—Section 904 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 is amended by—

(1) redesignating subsection (d) as subsection (e); and

(2) inserting after subsection (c) the following new subsection:

"(d)(1) Section 407 of this Act may be waived or suspended in the Senate only by the affirmative vote of 60 Senators, duly chosen and sworn."

"(2) Section 407 of this Act may be waived or suspended in the House of Representatives only by the affirmative vote of 261 House Members, duly chosen and sworn.".

(c) Appeals of Rulings.—Subsection (c) of section 271 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 is amended by striking "or 311(a)" and inserting in lieu thereof "311(a), or 407".

(d) CBO Assistance to Congressional Committees.—Section 202(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 is amended by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (4) and inserting after "revenue conditions," the following: "(3) projections of changes in the present value actuarial balance of the Social Security trust funds as described in section 407 of this Act,".

(E) Effective Date.—Subsections (a), (b), and (c) of this section are effective for fiscal years following fiscal year 1990.

SEC. 14-205. DEFICIT REDUCTION REQUIREMENTS TO PROTECT THE OASDI RESERVES.

(a) Budget Baseline.—Section 251(a)(6) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 is amended by—

(1) striking "and" after the semicolon in subparagraph (J);

(2) striking the period at the end of subparagraph (K) and inserting "; and"; and

(3) adding at the end thereof the following:

"(L) adding to the baseline (notwithstanding section 710(a) of the Social Security Act or section 3(6) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974) the aggregate amount by which the Social Security annual reserve has been estimated (at the time of enactment of legislation that affects the Social Security annual reserve) to have been reduced for such fiscal year as a result of enactment of legislation enacted on or after October 18, 1992;

"(M) assuming, for purposes of this paragraph, paragraph (3)(A)(i), and the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, and notwithstanding section 710(a) of the Social Security Act, that receipts of interest by the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund shall be included in the totals of the budget;".

(b) Definition.—Section 257 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(15) The term 'Social Security annual reserve' means the combined expected receipts of the Federal Old-Age Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund less the combined expected disbursements of the Federal Old-Age Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund for any given fiscal year.".

(c) Effective Date.—This section shall apply with respect to fiscal years beginning October 1, 1990 and thereafter.

SEC. 14-206. MODIFICATION OF THE PERSONAL EARNINGS AND BENEFITS STATEMENT.

Section 1142(a)(2) of the Social Security Act, as added by section 10308 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989, is amended—

(a) by redesignating subparagraphs (C) and (D) as subparagraphs (D) and (F), respectively;

(b) by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph (C):

"(C)(i) an estimate of the percentage of contributions described in subparagraph (B) needed for the payment of current old-age, survivors, and disability insurance benefits (determined by attributing interest and other income of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund to such current benefits), and

"(ii) an estimate of the percentage of such contributions that will be placed into reserve in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund;";

(c) by adding at the end of subparagraph (B) before the semicolon the following: "separately identifying the portion of contributions that are expected to be used to pay the benefits of current old-age, survivors, and disability insurance beneficiaries, and the portion being placed in reserve (under the percentages determined in subparagraph (C))"; and

(d) by inserting after subparagraph (D), as redesignated, the following new subparagraph:

"(E) a description of the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance reserve, including—

"(i) the reserve's current and near term expected accumulation;

"(ii) the reserve's importance to long-run actuarial soundness and future retirement benefits; and

"(iii) a summary of the effect recent legislation has had upon the anticipated building of the reserve and long-run actuarial soundness;".

Subtitle C—STRENGTHENING THE BALANCED BUDGET AND EMERGENCY DEFICIT CONTROL ACT

SEC. 14-301 DEFICIT TARGETS NOT AFFECTED BY SPECIFIED ACTIVITIES.

(a) Amendments to the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974—After the second sentence of paragraph (6) of section 3 of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, add the following:

"Section 251(a)(6) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 shall apply to calculations of budget authority, budget outlays, and budget totals and the deficit.".

(b) Amendments to the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985—Section 251(a)(6) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Act of 1985 is amended by adding after subsection (M) (as added by this Act) the following:

"(N) assuming, for purposes of this paragraph and paragraph 3(A)(i), and notwithstanding section 406(b) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the transactions, under the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989, in the following accounts, shall not alter the deficit or produce any change in the budget baseline:

(1) RTC Revolving Fund (22-4055, 51-1100, 51-1400);

(2) FSLIC Resolution Fund (51-4065; 20-0176);

(3) Bank Insurance Fund (51-4064); and

(4) Savings Association Insurance Fund (51-4066).

"(O) assuming, for purposes of this pargraph and pargraph 3(A)(i), and notwithstanding section 406(b) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the transactions for the following purposes shall not alter the deficit or produce any change in the budget baseline:

(1) supplemental funding for Operation Desert Shield; and

(2) forgiveness of Egpytian debt incurred under the Arms Export Control Act.

(3) amounts of appropriations requested by the President for emergencies declared by the President.

(c) The amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) shall apply with respect to fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1990.

SEC. 14-302 ADJUSTMENTS TO THE MAXIMUM DEFICIT AMOUNT AND BUDGET AGREEMENT CATEGORY AMOUNTS.

(a) March 1991 Update to Reflect Actual Performance of the Economy—

(1) The President shall report to the Congress on or before March 31, 1991 on the actual performance of the economy during calendar year 1990. The report shall indicate the extent to which projected outlays, revenues, and the resulting deficit for fiscal years 1991 through 1995 differ from the amounts that would have resulted if the economic assumptions specified in section 101(b) of this Act had been realized. The difference between the maximum deficit amount for each fiscal year, 1991 through 1995, specified in section 3(7) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, and the deficit amount calculated using the revised projections for each fiscal year, based on actual economic performance during calendar year 1990, will be identified as the economic deficit adjustment for such fiscal year.

(2) The maximum deficit amount for each fiscal year, 1991 through 1995, specified in section 3(7) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, shall be automatically adjusted by the corresponding economic deficit adjustment identified pursuant to paragraph (1). The adjusted maximum deficit amounts shall be included in the report required in paragraph (1).

(3) The budget agreement category amounts set forth in section 101(a) of this Act shall be automatically adjusted to be mathematically consistent with the economic deficit adjustment identified pursuant to paragraph (1). The amount of the adjustment and the adjusted category amounts for each category shall be included in the report required in paragraph (1).

(4) The assumptions used in the report required by this subsection also shall be used in the report issued in July 1991 pursuant to section 1106 of title 31, United States Code.

(b) Technical Assumptions for Fiscal Year 1993.—The technical assumptions to be used for calculating the budget baseline for fiscal year 1993 pursuant to section 251(a)(6) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 shall be the assumptions used in the July 1991 report referred to in paragraph (a)(4).

(c) Changes in Economic and Technical Assumptions for Fiscal Years 1994 and 1995

(1) In January 1993, a committee consisting of the members identified in paragraph (2) shall meet to review, consider, and make recommendations to the Congress and the President concerning economic and technical assumptions to be used in reports issued pursuant to sections 251 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, for fiscal years 1994 and 1995. If the committee unanimously agrees upon changes in economic and technical assumptions for fiscal years 1994 and 1995 and such changes are enacted into law, then the maximum deficit amount set forth in section 3(7) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, and budget agreement category amounts set forth in section 101(a) of the Budget Process Reform Act of 1990 shall be adjusted accordingly.

(2) The membership of the committee referred to in paragraph (1) shall consist of: the Speaker of the House; the House and Senate Majority and Minority Leaders; the Chairman and Ranking Minority Member from the House and Senate Committees on the Budget, Appropriations, Ways and Means, and Finance; the Director of the Office of Management and Budget; the Secretary of the Treasury; and a member of the President's staff, as designated by the President.

(d) Exclusion of Offsetting Collections Resulting From This Act.—For purposes of calculating whether any bill, resolution, or amendment exceeds budget agreement category amounts, offsetting collections resulting from this Act shall not offset budget authority and outlays in such category in any year covered by this agreement. To the extent offsetting collections resulting from this Act are used to fund what would otherwise be funded by discretionary appropriations, such offsetting collections would be recorded as discretionary budget authority and outlays for the budget agreement category.

(e) Adjustments for Conversion to Credit Reform Budgeting.—

(1) The President shall specify, in his budget submitted pursuant to 31 USC 1105(a) for fiscal year 1992, adjustments to the maximum deficit amount as set forth in Section 3 of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974 and estimates of the adjustments necessary to the budget agreement categories set forth in section 101 of this Act to implement credit reform budgeting as provided in section 401 of this Act. These adjustments shall be identified as the credit reform budgeting adjustments. Such budget shall also specify the subsidy rates assumed in calculating the required adjustments.

(2) The maximum deficit amount and the budget agreement category amounts for fiscal years 1992, 1993, 1994, and 1995 shall be adjusted to reflect the credit reform budgeting adjustments reported under paragraph (1). The amount of the adjustments and the adjusted amounts also shall be included in the report required in paragraph (1) of section (b) of this Act.

(3) The President's budget for fiscal year 1993 shall specify subsidy rates revised to reflect additional data on loan performance, and shall indicate the extent to which the maximum deficit amount and budget agreement category amounts would be modified based on the revised subsidy rates. The revision to the estimates required to reflect revised subsidy rates will be identified as the subsidy rate adjustment.

(4) The maximum deficit amount and the budget agreement category amounts for fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995 shall be revised to reflect the subsidy rate adjustment reported under paragraph (3).

SEC. 14-303. CHANGE IN MEDICARE MAXIMUM PERCENTAGE REDUCTION.

The Balanced Budget and Deficit Reduction Act of 1985, as amended, is further amended by substituting "4" for "2" in section 252(a)(4)(B)(ii) and in 256(d)(1)(B).

SEC. 14-304 TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS TO THE BALANCED BUDGET AND EMERGENCY DEFICIT CONTROL ACT OF 1985 AND OTHER CONFORMING CHANGES.

(a) Section 251 of The Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 is amended as follows—

(1) Section 251(a)(2)(B)(i)(II) is repealed, and (III) is renumbered (II).

(2) Section 251(a)(2)(B)(ii) is repealed.

(3) Section 25(a)(2)(B) (iii) and (iv) are repeated.

(4) Section 251(a)(6)(B) is amended by deleting "do expire" and inserting in lieu thereof, "are extended at the lesser of current levels or current rates (unless such provisions of law specifically indicate that they should not be assumed to be extended for purposes of this Act)".

(5) Section 251(a)(6)(C)(i) is amended by deleting the parenthetical and inserting, "(funding for such pay adjustments are assumed to be provided for in such Act unless indicated to the contrary in such Act)".

(6) Section 251(a)(6)(C)(ii) is amended by deleting "(without absorption)" and inserting before "II" the following, ", including adjustments to remove absorption explicitly indicated in such previous fiscal year appropriations,".

(7) Section 251(a)(6)(C)(ii)(III) is amended by deleting "increased to cover the increased" and inserting, "adjusted to cover the changed".

(8) Section 251(b) is amended by deleting "Federal Register" both times it occurs and inserting, "Government Printing Office".

(9) Section 251(d)(3)(C) is amended by deleting the phrase "October 10, 1987, in the case of fiscal year 1988," and substituting "25" for "15".

(b) Section 251 is further amended, and 252 is amended, to require program, project, and activity level of detail only in the final accompanying message and only to the extent full-year appropriations have been enacted and a sequester is required, as follows—

(1) Section 251(c)(1)(A) is amended by adding to the end thereof "and".

(2) Section 251(c)(1)(B) is amended by deleting ", and" and inserting in lieu thereof "."

(3) Section 251(c)(1)(C) is repealed.

(4) Section 251(c)(2) is amended by deleting the final sentence, which begins "In addition,".

(5) Section 252(a)(5) is amended by deleting "initial order" and inserting in lieu thereof, "final order indicating a sequester is required".

(6) Section 252(a)(5) is further amended by deleting "paragraph (2)" and inserting in lieu thereof, "Section 252(a)(2)".

(7) Section 252(a)(5)(A) is amended by inserting after "account" the first time it occurs, "for which annual appropriations or full-year continuing appropriations have been enacted".

(8) Section 252(a)(5) is renumbered to Section 252(b)(4).

(9) Section 252(b)(4) is repealed.

(10) Section 252(c)(1) is amending by deleting "(a)(5)" and inserting in lieu thereof, "(b)(4)".

(c) Title III of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 is amended by adding the following new section:

"PROHIBITION OF COUNTING AS SAVINGS THE TRANSFER OF GOVERNMENT ACTIONS FROM ONE YEAR TO ANOTHER.

Sec. 312. Any law or regulation promulgated as final that has the effect of transferring an outlay, receipt, or revenue of the United States from one fiscal year to an adjacent fiscal year shall not be treated as reducing the deficit or producing net deficit reduction in any fiscal year for purposes of this Act."

(d) Section 306 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 is amended by adding, after "House" the first place it appears, the following: ", including matters that amend or have the effect of amending the Budget Process Reform Act of 1990, this Act, or the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, as amended,".

Subtitle D—Enforcement Procedures

SEC. 14-401. ENFORCEMENT OF BUDGET AGREEMENT—AUTOMATIC OFFSETS TO ELIMINATE EXCESS AMOUNTS.

(a) Except as provided in subsections (d), (e), and (f)—

(1) Budget agreement caps—Whenever enactment of any Act or joint resolution results in the provision of budgetary resources for a budget agreement category, as defined in section 3(11) (A) or (B) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, that is in excess of the budget authority or outlays for such budget agreement category as set forth in section 101(a) of the Budget Process Reform Act of 1990, the President shall issue an order that automatically eliminates the excess amount that would occur in any fiscal year determined for such budget agreement category within that budget agreement category in that fiscal year.

(2) Entitlement/mandatory spending.—Whenever enactment of any Act or joint resolution providing entitlement/mandatory spending, as defined in section 3(12)(A) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, results in increases in the deficit in any year which are not offset fully by entitlement/mandatory spending reductions, revenue increases, or a combination of both in such Act or resolution for each such fiscal year, the President shall issue an order that automatically eliminates the increased spending for each year within the entitlement/mandatory spending category.

(b) Timing of Automatic Offsets.—

(1) For Acts and joint resolutions enacted during the period beginning on October 1 and ending on June 30 of that fiscal year, the order of the President shall be issued not later than 15 calendar days after enactment of such Act or resolution.

(2) For Acts and joint resolutions enacted during the period beginning July 1 and ending September 30 of that fiscal year, the order of the President shall be issued on October 1 of that calendar year.

(c) The required reductions shall be made on a uniform percentage basis so as to reduce all budgetary resources within the category that would be subject to sequester under the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 to the extent necessary to eliminate the excess amount within such budget agreement category.

(d)(1) For fiscal years 1991, 1992, and 1993, any appropriations bill or conference report on such bill shall not be subject to section 302(f) or section 311(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 if such bill or report exceeds any budget agreement category amounts, or budget resolution consistent with the budget agreement category amounts, solely by reason of, and only to the extent that, such bill or conference report contains amounts identified under and in compliance with paragraph (2), where the outlay amounts resulting from such budget authority are identified as and are within the amounts set forth in subsection (e), taking into account other acts, bills, or conference reports which have identified amounts as within paragraph (2).

(2) aggregate budget authority for the budget agreement categories, as defined in section 3(11)(A) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, for fiscal years 1991, 1992, and 1993 (together) may exceed the three budget agreement category amounts set forth in section 101(a) of the Budget Process Act of 1990 for such budget agreement categories by not more than 0.4 percent for all three such budget agreement categories, provided that no such excess may at any time include an excess for any one budget agreement category of more than 0.2 percent of the amount of the aggregate of the three budget agreement category amounts.

(3) The outlay amounts set forth in subsection (e)(1) for a fiscal year shall be reduced by the amount of any outlays identified in a bill or conference report to which paragraph (1) has been applied.

(e)(1) For fiscal years 1992 and 1993, automatic reductions otherwise required by subsections (a) and (b) shall not be implemented solely due to outlays exceeding the amount of outlays set forth for in section 101(a) of the Budget Process Reform Act of 1990, resulting from changes between the outlays estimated for enacted budget authority and the spendout rate assumed in the relationship between budget authority and outlays set forth in section 101, for any of the budget agreement categories for such fiscal year, unless the outlays for any budget agreement category exceed the amounts specified by such section by $2,500,000,000 for the national defense discretionary category, $1,500,000,000, for the international discretionary category, or $2,500,000,000 for the domestic discretionary category.

(2) For fiscal years 1994 and 1995 automatic reductions otherwise required by subsections (a) and (b) shall not be implemented solely due to outlays exceeding the amount of outlays set forth for in section 101(a), resulting from changes between the outlays estimated for enacted budget authority and the spendout rate assumed in the relationship between budget authority and outlays set forth in section 101, for the budget agreement categories for such fiscal year unless such outlays exceed the amount specified by such section by $6,500,000,000.

(3) The margin set forth in section 257(10) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, as amended, shall be reduced to the exent that the outlay excess is offset under paragraphs (1) and (2) above.

(f) Exception for Presidentially-Declared Emergencies.—This section shall not apply to appropriations requested by the President for emergencies declared by the President.

(g) This section applies notwithstanding the Impoundment Control Act of 1974.

SEC. 14-402. BUDGET SUBMISSION BY THE PRESIDENT.

Section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, is amended by striking "the first Monday after January 3" and inserting in lieu thereof "February 1".

SEC. 14-403. REVIEW OF REPORTS AND ORDERS.

Subsections (e), (g), and (h) of section 274 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 shall apply to the reports and orders of the President under this Act in the same manner and to the same extent as they apply to the reports and orders referred to in such subsections.

Subtitle E—Credit Reform

SEC. 14-501. COST OF LOANS AND LOAN GUARANTEES.

(a) As used in this subtitle—

(1) The term "direct loan" means a disbursement of funds by the Federal Government to a non-Federal borrower under a contract that requires the repayment of such funds with or without interest. It includes purchase of or participation in a loan made by another lender. It excludes acquisition of a federally guaranteed loan in satisfaction of default claims, and the price support loans of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

(2) The term "loan guarantee" means any guarantee, insurance, or other pledge with respect to the payment of all or a part of the principal or interest on any debt obligation of a non-Federal borrower to a non-Federal lender in the event the borrower defaults. It excludes the insurance of deposits, shares, or other withdrawable accounts in financial institutions.

(3) The term "cost", "cost of loans", or "cost of loan guarantees" means the cost to the Government of any direct loan or loan guarantee, including the cost of, and receipts from insurance purchased by the Government, except indirect costs such as administrative costs or any effect on revenues, and shall be calculated as follows:

(A) DIRECT LOANS.—For a direct loan to the public made by the Government, the difference between the face value of the loan and the net present value, of the repayments of principal and payments of interest and other payments to the Government by the borrower over the life of the loan, after adjusting for estimated defaults, prepayments, fees, penalties, and any other recoveries.

(B) LOAN GUARANTEES.—For a loan made by a non-Federal lender that is guaranteed as to principal or interest, in whole or in part, by the Government, the net present value, of (i) estimated payments by the Government to cover defaults or delinquencies, (ii) any interest payments made by the Government, and (iii) receipts (including origination and other fees, penalties, and other recoveries by the Government.

(C) ACTIONS THAT ALTER COSTS.—Any Government action that alters estimated loan or loan guarantee costs (except modifications within the terms of a loan contract that had already been included in calculating the cost), including reestimates of costs after direct and guaranteed loans have been made, shall be accounted as adjusting the cost to the Government of such loans or loan guarantees. In calculating the costs of altering loans, the calculation shall include the current estimated present value of the loan.

(D) DISCOUNT RATE.—The estimated average interest rate on new issues of marketable Treasury securities of similar maturity to the loans being made shall be used as the discount to present value.

SEC. 14-502. BUDGETARY ACCOUNTING.

(a) BUDGET AUTHORITY.—In the case of direct and guaranteed loans, budget authority, as defined in subsection 3(2) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, shall mean the cost, including alterations of cost, as defined in section 402 of this Act, of such direct or guaranteed loans.

(b) OUTLAYS.—Outlays resulting from new budget authority referred to in subsection (a) shall be recorded in the fiscal year in which a loan is disbursed or its cost altered.

(c) RESIDUAL CASH FLOW.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—All flows of cash deriving from new budget authority described in subsection (a), other than the outlays recorded pursuant to subsection (b), shall be a means of financing.

(2) IMPLEMENTATION.—This is authorized to establish such nonbudgetary accounts (which shall have the authority to borrow from or lend to the Treasury under terms and conditions to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury provided that such lending shall be uninvested funds) as may be appropriate to implement the accounting required by the previous provisions of this section.

SEC. 14-503. CONGRESSIONAL CONTROL OF LOAN COSTS.

(a) APPROPRIATIONS REQUIRED.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, new direct loan obligations may be incurred, new loan guarantee commitments may be made, and alterations to the cost of direct loans or loan guarantees may be made after September 30, 1991, only to the extent that appropriations of budget authority to cover their costs are made in appropriations Acts enacted after January 1, 1991. Exception shall be made for any new direct loan obligations or any new loan guarantee commitments made after September 30, 1991, by deposit insurance agencies and the agencies created by Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989 to dispose of insolvent savings institutions. However, the cost of any such direct loans and loan guarantees shall be estimated, reported in the Budget, and reestimated annually in accord with the other provisions of this subtitle.

(b) EXEMPTION FOR MANDATORY PROGRAMS.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to any loan or loan guarantee program that constitutes an entitlement/mandatory spending requirement.

SEC. 14-504. EXECUTIVE BRANCH COST ESTIMATES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—For the executive branch, all estimates required by this subtitle shall be made by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget after consultation with the agencies that administer loan or loan guarantee programs (or by the agencies, if such authority is delegated by the Director), and shall be based upon guidelines, regulations, or criteria (consistent with the definitions in this subtitle) established after consultation with the Director of the Congressional Budget Office.

(b) IMPROVING COST ESTIMATES.—The Office of Management and Budget and the Congressional Budget Office shall work together to develop accurate data on the historical performance of loan and loan guarantee programs. They shall annually review loan portfolios and guaranteed loans outstanding to improve estimates of loan costs.

(c) IMPROVING QUALITY OF DATA AVAILABLE.—The Secretary of the Tresaury, the Office of Management and Budget, and the Congressional Budget Office shall work together to improve the quality of financial information available for improving the cost estimates in support of the implementation of credit reform.

(d) ACCESS TO DATA.—The Office of Management and Budget, the Treasury, and the Congressional Budget Office shall have access to all agency data that may facilitate the development or improvement of loan and loan guarantee cost estimates and improved financial information on loan or loan guarantee programs.

SECTION. 14-505. BUDGET PRESENTATION OF COSTS.

(a) ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—All funding for an agency's administration of a loan or loan guarantee program shall be included in the same budget account as the program's loan or loan guarantee cost.

(b) LOAN AND LOAN GUARANTEE COSTS BEFORE FISCAL YEAR 1992.—The Office of Management and Budget shall, to the extent possible, make summary estimates of loan and loan guarantee costs incurred in years before fiscal year 1992 and shall make such information available to supplement historical data for such years.

SEC. 14-506. EFFECTIVE DATES.

(a) PRESIDENT'S BUDGET.—This subtitle shall apply to budget estimates for fiscal year 1992 and thereafter presented in the budget submitted by the President under section 1105 (a) of title 31, United States Code.

(b) CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET.—This subtitle shall apply to budget estimates contained in concurrent resolutions on the budget reported after the date of enactment of this title for fiscal years 1992 and thereafter.

SEC. 14-507. STUDY OF FEDERAL INSURANCE ACCOUNTING.

(a) The Director of the Office of Management and Budget and the Director of the Congressional Budget Office shall each study whether the accounting for Federal insurance programs, including deposit insurance programs, should be on a cash basis, on the same basis as loan guarantees, or on some other basis. Each Director shall report findings and recommendations to the President and the Congress by September 30, 1991.

(b) ACCESS TO DATA.—The Office of Management and Budget and the Congressional Budget Office shall have access to all agency data that may facilitate these studies.

Subtitle F—THE GOVERNMENT-SPONSORED ENTERPRISE REPORTS ACT

SEC. 14-601. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Government-sponsored Enterprises Reports Act of 1990".

SEC. 14-602. REPEAL OF PROVISION REQUIRING STUDIES OF RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN PUBLIC DEBT AND ACTIVITIES OF GOVERNMENT-SPONSORED ENTERPRISES.

Section 1404 of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989 (12 U.S.C. 1811, note) is hereby repealed.

SEC. 14-603. IN GENERAL.

In order to better manage the bonded indebtedness of the United States, the Secretary shall conduct annual studies, that shall include an objective assessment of the financial safety and soundness of the activities of all Government-sponsored enterprises, and an assessment of the adequacy of the existing regulatory structure for Government-sponsored enterprises and the risk of financial exposure to the Federal Government posed by the Government-sponsored enterprise. There are authorized to be apportioned such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

SEC. 14-604. ACCESS TO INFORMATION.

(a) INFORMATION FROM GSE's—Each Government-sponsored enterprise shall provide full and prompt access to the Secretary to its books and records, and shall promptly provide any other information requested by the Secretary.

(b) INFORMATION FROM SUPERVISORY AGENCIES.—In conducting the studies under this section, the Secretary may request information from, or the assistance of, any Federal department or agency authorized by law to supervise the activities of any Government-sponsored enterprise.

(c) CONFIDENTIALITY OF INFORMATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall determine and maintain the confidentiality of any book, record, or information made available under this section in a manner generally consistent with the level of confidentiality established for the material by the Government-sponsored enterprise involved.

(2) EXEMPTION FROM PUBLIC DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS.—The Department of the Treasury shall be exempt from section 552 of title 5, United States Code, with respect to any book, record, or information made available under this section and determined by the Secretary to be confidential. This exemption shall continue to apply to any such book, record, or information provided to a nationally recognized rating organization or another Federal agency pursuant to subsection (d).

(3) PENALTY FOR UNAUTHORIZED DISCLOSURE.—Any officer or employee of the Department of the Treasury shall be subject to the penalties set forth in section 1906 of title 18, United States Code, if:

(A) by virtue of this employment of official position, he has possession of or access to any book, record, or information made available under this section and determined by the Secretary to be confidential under paragraph (1); and

(B) he discloses the material in any manner other than;

(i) to an officer or employee of the Department of Treasury; or

(ii) pursuant to the exception set forth in such section 1906.

(C) Notwithstanding the provisions of any other provision of law, the Secretary is authorized to provide to any nationally recognized statistical rating organization for the purpose of obtaining a credit rating of any Government-sponsored enterprise, or to any other Federal agency in order to facilitate the preparation of any study or report by the Secretary pursuant to this section, any information made available under this subsection, including any information made available under this subsection, including any information determined by the Secretary to be confidential. Whenever information determined by the Secretary to be confidential is so provided, the nationally recognized statistical rating organization or Federal agency, and its respective officers and employees, shall be subject to the penalties set forth in section 190c of title 18, United States Code for unauthorized disclosure of the information provided,

SEC. 14-603. CBO REPORT.

The Congressional Budget Office shall prepare a report that will include the following: (1) the perspective of the Congressional Budget Office on the types of risks that each Government-sponsored enterprise assumes, ways in which the Congress can improve its understanding of such risks, and the risks to the budget posed by Government-sponsored enterprises; (2) an evaluation of the adequacy of the current Government-sponsored enterprise supervision and regulation with respect to risk management; and (3) proposed alternative models of oversight, with particular emphasis on the costs and benefits of each alternative on the Federal Government and to the Government-sponsored enterprise beneficiaries.

SEC. 14-604. REPORTS TO CONGRESS.

The following reports shall be submitted to Congress: (1) by April 30, 1991, the Secretary shall submit a report setting forth the results of any annual study conducted under this Act and shall submit on behalf of the Administration a legislative proposal with respect to Government-sponsored enterprise safety and soundness; (2) by April 30, 1992, and April 30 of each year thereafter, the Secretary shall submit a report setting forth the results of any annual study conducted under this Act; and (3) by April 30, 1991, the Congressional Budget Office shall submit the report required under this Act."

SEC. 14-605. LEGISLATION.

The Speaker of the House and Majority Leader of the Senate shall refer the reports required by paragraphs 1 and 3 of section 6 above to the appropriate Congressional committees and each such committee shall consider the reports, including the Administration's legislative proposal, and shall report no later than September 15, 1991, to the full House and Senate, respectively, legislation to ensure the financial soundness of the Government-sponsored enterprises and to minimize the possibility that any Government-sponsored enterprise might require future Federal assistance.

SEC. 14-606. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this section:

(a) GOVERNMENT-SPONSORED ENTERPRISE.—The term "Government-sponsored enterprise" means:

(1) the Federal National Mortgage Association, the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation, the Federal Home Loan Bank System, the Farm Credit Banks, the Banks for Cooperatives, the Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corporation, the Student Loan Marketing Association, the College Construction Loan Insurance Association, and any of their affiliated or member institutions; and

(2) any other government-sponsored enterprise, as designated by the Secretary.

(b) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate.

TITLE (XV)—ADDITIONAL BUDGET PROCESS REFORM

Subtitle—Statement of Congressional Purpose

SEC. 15-101. IMPROVEMENT IN DECISION-MAKING PROCESS.

Because the Federal budget process is the principal vehicle by which many of the most fundamental policy choices in Government are made, the purpose of this Act is to facilitate rational, informed, and timely decisions by the Congress in the course of that process.

SEC. 15-102. REFORM OF FISCAL MANAGEMENT.

It is the sense of the Congress that a properly functioning Federal budget process should focus the attention of policymakers and the public on the aggregate impact of Federal spending on the economy, and on the tradeoffs that must be made among priorities in order to control overall levels of spending. To this end, the Act is intended to establish a budget process that, in each fiscal period—

(1) requires the adoption of a budget before, not after, any spending begins;

(2) produces decisions on that budget early in the budgeting cycle;

(3) encourages cooperation between Congress and the President in adopting the budget;

(4) ties each subsequent spending decision to an overall, binding budget total;

(5) requires regular, periodic decisions on appropriate spending levels for all Federal programs, not just those arbitrarily deemed "controllable"; and

(6) produces a bias in favor of fiscal responsibility that can be overcome only if the Congress expressly determines to do so.

SEC. 103. SAFEGUARDS AGAINST DELAY AND INACTION.

The Congress further finds that a properly functioning budget process should contain safeguards against delay and inaction, so that temporary shut-downs of the Federal Government may be avoided when the President and the Congress fail to complete work on the budget prior to the beginning of a fiscal period. Accordingly, this Act is intended to provide an enforcement mechanism that gives meaning and importance to the timely adoption of a budget, and a sustaining mechanism that ensures a continuation of the Government should the political process produce deadlock or a failure to act in a timely fashion.

SUBTITLE B—BINDING BUDGET LAW

SEC. 15-201. JOINT RESOLUTION ESTABLISHING BINDING BUDGET LAW.

To encourage early consultation and cooperation between the Congress and the President on decisions concerning overall spending levels for all Federal programs, the Congress shall enact a binding budget law, in the form of a joint resolution, by April 15 of the calendar year before that in which the fiscal period commences. The technical amendments contained in title I and section 15-001 of this Act are intended to assist in the establishment of this requirement. The budget law itself shall fit on a single page, which sets forth specific budget ceilings in the following 19 major functional categories, which altogether comprise the entire Federal budget.

Function 050: National Defense
Function 150: International Affairs
Function 250: General Science, Space and Technology
Function 270: Energy
Function 300: Natural Resources and Environment
Function 350: Agriculture
Function 400: Transportation
Function 450: Community and Regional Development
Function 500: Education, Training, Employment and Social Services Function 550: Health
Function 570: Medicare
Function 600: Income Security
Function 650: Social Security
Function 700: Veterans Benefits and Services
Function 750: Administration of Justice
Function 800: General Government
Function 900: Net Interest
Function 920: Allowances
Function 950: Undistributed Offsetting Receipts.

By thus requiring that the budget process begin with highly generalized macroeconomic decisions about spending in 19 overall categories, this section is intended to facilitate agreement within Congress itself, and between Congress and the President, on how much the Federal Government should spend in the ensuing fiscal period.

SEC. 15-202. BUDGET REQUIRED BEFORE SPENDING BILLS MAY BE CONSIDERED.

Unless and until a joint resolution on the budget is enacted with respect to any major functional category for a fiscal period, it shall not be in order in either the House of Representatives or the Senate, or any committee or subcommittee thereof, to consider any spending bill affecting spending in that category, except as provided in Title III of this Act. The purpose of this provision is to ensure that until the budget is signed into law, no authorization or appropriations bill shall be considered in the Congress.

SEC. 15-203. "BASELINE" BUDGETING PROHIBITED: UNADJUSTED YEAR-TO-YEAR COMPARISONS REQUIRED IN BUDGET LAW.

Section 301(e) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 is amended by—

(1) inserting after the second sentence the following: "The starting point for any deliberations in the Committee on the Budget of each House on the joint resolution on the budget for the next fiscal period shall be the estimated level of outlays for the current period in each function and subfuncation. Any increases or decreases in the Congressional budget for the next fiscal period shall be from such estimated levels.";

(2) striking paragraphs (2) and (3) and inserting the following:

"(2) a comparison of level for the current fiscal period with proposed spending for the subsequent fiscal periods along with the proposed increase or decrease of spending in percentage terms for each function and subfunction;

"(3) information, data, and comparisons indicating the manner in which, and the basis on which, the committee determined each of the matters set forth in the joint resolution, including information on outlays for the current fiscal period and the decisions reached to set funding for the subsequent fiscal years;";

(3) inserting "and" after the semicolon in paragraph (7);

(4) striking paragraph (8); and

(5) redesignating paragraph (9) as paragraph (8).

The technical amendments contained elsewhere in this Act are intended to apply the same prohibition against "baseline" budgeting to the budgets prepared by the President and the Congressional Budget Office reports to the Budget Commitees.

Subtitle C—Enforcement Mechanisms

SEC. 15-301. TWO-THIRDS REQUIREMENT FOR ALL SPENDING BILLS IN ABSENCE OF BUDGET LAW.

Unless and until a joint resolution on the budget is enacted with respect to any major functional category for a fiscal period, it shall not be in order in either the House of Representatives or the Senate or any committee or subcommittee thereof, to consider any spending bill affecting spending in that category unless it is approved by the affirmative vote of two-thirds of the Members voting, a quorum being present.

SEC. 15-302. TWO-THIRDS REQUIREMENT FOR OVER-BUDGET SPENDING BILLS.

(a) DETERMINATION OF BUDGET EFFECT OF ALL PROPOSED SPENDING BILLS.—The Congressional Budget Office shall provide to either House of Congress (or the appropriate committee, subcommittee, or conference thereof) as soon as practicable after the introduction of any spending bill, its estimate of the costs in each major functional category attributable to that bill during the fiscal period in which it is to become effective and in each of the next 4 fiscal years, together with the basis for such estimate. The Congressional Budget Office report shall not be required, however, if the Congressional Budget Office certifies that a spending bill will likely result in applicable costs of less than $10,000,000. For purposes of estimating the costs attributable to any spending bill that includes new credit authority, the report shall deem the market value of any loan (if it were sold by the Federal Government) or the assumption cost of any guarantee (if it were assumed at market rates) to be the costs attributable to such loan or guarantee in the fiscal period in which it is made.

(b) CBO REPORT REQUIRED BEFORE CONSIDERATION OF SPENDING BILLS.—It shall not be in order in either the House of Representatives or the Senate, or in any committee thereof, to consider any spending bill, unless and until the report referred to in subsection (a) has been made available to that House of Congress or the appropriate committee or subcommittee thereof.

(c) TWO-THIRDS REQUIREMENT FOR ALL OVER-BUDGET SPENDING BILLS.—It shall not be in order in either the House of Representatives or the Senate, or in any committee, subcommittee, or conference to consider any spending bill for a fiscal period that the report referred to in subsection (a) indicates would in such fiscal period exceed a budget ceiling, unless such bill is approved by the affirmative vote of two-thirds of the Members voting, a quorum being present.

(d) DETERMINATION OF SPENDING IN A CATEGORY.—A spending bill shall be deemed to break a budget ceiling if—

(1) its cost in any major functional category as estimated in the report referred to in subsection (a); and

(2) all other budget authority, budget outlays, and entitlement authority, if any, in that major functional category for the relevant fiscal period contained in any previously enacted legislation for the fiscal period; and

(3) to the extent that new budget authority or entitlement authority for the relevant fiscal period has not been granted (or modified from the level of the previous fiscal period) in any other enacted legislation for any program within such major functional category, the amounts of budget authority and entitlement authority for such major functional category (or part thereof) for the previous fiscal period; exceed the budget ceiling for such major functional category.

SEC. 15-303. TWO-THIRDS REQUIREMENT FOR WAIVER OF THIS ACT.

No waiver of any provision of this Act, including the calendar deadlines for completion of Congressional action and the provisions concerning over-budget spending, shall be effective unless approved by the affirmative vote of two-thirds of the Members of the House of Representatives or the Senate, as the case may be, a quorum being present. No committee of either the House of Representatives or the Senate shall have jurisdiction to report a rule governing procedures for consideration of spending bills covered by this Act, if such rule would violate the provisions of this section. Nothing in this provision shall be deemed to require a supermajority vote to amend this Act.

Subtitle D—Limited Enhanced Rescission Authority

SEC. 15-401. RESCISSION AUTHORITY LIMITED TO SPENDING ABOVE LIMITS OF CONGRESSIONAL BUDDGET LAW.

The Impoundment Control Act of 1974 (2 U.S.C. 681 et seq.) is amended by redesignating sections 1013 through 1017 as sections 1014 through 1018, respectively, and inserting after section 1012 the following new section:

"RESCISSION OF SPENDING ABOVE LIMITS OF CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET LAW

"SEC. 1013. (a) TRANSMITTAL OF SPECIAL MESSAGE.—The President may transmit to both Houses of Congress for consideration in accordance with this section one or more special messages to rescind (in whole or in part) items of budget authority or entitlement authority sufficient to ensure that the levels of budget authority, entitlement authority, and outlays in a functional category do not exceed the levels stated in the budget law for the applicable fiscal period (or, in the absence of a budget law, do not exceed such levels in the previous fiscal period).

"(b) LIMITATIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) continuing appropriations made pursuant to section 1311 of title 31, United States Code, shall be treated as continuing appropriations for an entire fiscal period; and

"(2) the levels of budget authority, entitlement authority, and outlays shall be determined on the basis of the reports made by the Congressional Budget Office pursuant to section 202 of the Budget Process Reform Act of 1990.

"(c) CONTENTS OF SPECIAL MESSAGE.—Each special message transmitted under subsection (a) shall specify, with respect to each item of budget authority to be rescinded, the matters referred to in paragraphs (1) through (5) of section 1012(a).

"(d) REQUIREMENT NOT TO MAKE AVAILABLE FOR OBLIGATION.—Any item of budget authority to be rescinded as set forth in such special message shall not be made available for obligation unless, within the prescribed 45-day period, Congress completes action on a rescission bill disapproving the rescission of the amount to be rescinded. Funds made available for obligation under this procedure may not be included in a special message again.

"(e) PROCEDURES.—

"(1)(A) Before the close of the third day beginning after the day on which a special message to rescind an item of budget authority is transmitted to the House of Representatives and the Senate under subsection (a), a bill may be introduced (by request) by the majority leader or minority leader of the House of the Congress in which the appropriation Act providing the budget authority originated to disapprove the rescission set forth in the special message. If such House is not in session on the day on which a special message is transmitted, the bill may be introduced in such House, as provided in the preceding sentence, on the first day thereafter on which such House is in session.

"(B) A bill introduced in the House of Representatives or the Senate pursuant to subparagraph (A) shall be referred to the Committee on Appropriations of such House. The committee shall report the bill without substantive revision (and with or without recommendation) not later than 15 calendar days of continuous session of the Congress after the date on which the bill is introduced. A committee failing to report a bill within the 15-day period referred to in the preceding sentence shall be automatically discharged from consideration of the bill and the bill shall be placed on the appropriate calendar.

"(C) A vote on final passage of a bill introduced in a House of the Congress pursuant to subparagraph (A) shall be taken on or before the close of the 25th calendar day of continuous session of the Congress after the date of the introduction of the bill in such House. If the bill is agreed to, the Clerk of the House of Representatives (in the case of a bill agreed to in the House of Representatives) or the Secretary of the Senate (in the case of a bill agreed to in the Senate) shall cause the bill to be engrossed, certified, and transmitted to the other House of the Congress on the same calendar day on which the bill is agreed to.

"(2)(A) A bill transmitted to the House of Representatives or the Senate pursuant to paragraph (1)(C) shall be referred to the Committee on Appropriations of such House. The committee shall report the bill without substantive revision (and with or without recommendation) not later than 10 calendar days of continuous session of the Congress after the bill is transmitted to such House. A committee failing to report the bill within the 10-day period referred to in the preceding sentence shall be automatically discharged from consideration of the bill and the bill shall be placed upon the appropriate calendar.

"(B) A vote on the final passage of a bill transmitted to a House of the Congress pursuant to paragraph (1)(C) shall be taken on or before the close of the 10th calendar day of continuous session of the Congress after the date on which the bill is transmitted to such House. If the bill is agreed to in such House, the Clerk of the House of Representatives (in the case of a bill agreed to in the House of Representatives) or the Secretary of the Senate (in the case of a bill agreed to in the Senate) shall cause the engrossed bill to be returned to the House in which the bill originated, together with a statement of the action taken by the House acting under this paragraph.

"(3)(A) A motion in the House of Representatives to proceed to the consideration of a bill under this section shall be highly privileged and not debatable. An amendment to the motion shall not be in order, nor shall it be in order to move to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to.

"(B) Debate in the House of Representatives on a bill under this section shall be limited to not more than 2 hours, which shall be divided equally between those favoring and those opposing the bill. A motion further to limit debate shall not be debatable and shall require an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the Members voting, a quorum being present. It shall not be in order to move to recommit a bill under this section or to move to reconsider the vote by which the bill is agreed to or disagreed to.

"(C) All appeals from the decisions of the Chair relating to the application of the Rules of the House of Representatives to the procedure relating to a bill under this section shall be decided without debate.

"(D) Except to the extent specifically provided in the preceding provisions of this subsection, consideration of a bill under this section ahall be governed by the Rules of the House of Representatives applicable to other bills in similar circumstances.

"(4)(A) A motion in the Senate to proceed to the consideration of a bill under this section shall be privileged and not debatable. An amendment to the motion shall not be in order, nor shall it be in order to move to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to.

"(B) Debate in the Senate on a bill under this section, and all debatable motions and appeals in connection therewith, shall be limited to not more than 2 hours. The time shall be equally divided between, and controlled by, the majority leader and the minority leader or their designess.

"(C) Debate in the Senate on any debatable motion or appeal in connection with a bill under this section shall be limited to not more than 1 hour, to be equally divided between, and controlled by, the mover and the manager of the bill except that in the event the manager of the bill is in favor of such motion or appeal, the time in opposition thereto shall be controlled by the minority leader or his designee. Such leaders, or either of them, may, from time under their control on the passage of a bill, allot additional time to any Senator during the consideration of any debatable motion or appeal.

"(D) A motion in the Senate to further limit debate on a bill under this section is not debatable. A motion to recommit a bill under this section is not in order.

"(f) AMENDMENTS PROHIBITED.—No amendment to a bill considered under this section shall be in order in either the House of Representatives or the Senate. No motion to suspend the application of this subsection shall be in order in either House, nor shall it be in order in either House for the presiding officer to entertain a request to suspend the application of this subsection by unanimous consent.".

SEC. 15-402. APPLICATION.

The amendments made by section 15-401 section shall apply to items of budget authority (as defined in subsection (g)(1) of section 1013, as added by section 103(b) of this Act) provided by appropriation acts (as defined in subsection (g)(3) of such section) that become law after the date of enactment of this Act.

Subtitle 5—"Blank Check" Appropriations Prohibited

SEC. 15-501. INTENT OF CONGRESS.

It is the intent of Congress, by this provision, to put an end to open-ended, "blank-check" appropriations, which typically authorize the spending of "such sums as may be necessary." By requiring explicit decisions concerning the desired level of spending for each federal program (except Social Security and interest on the debt), it is intended that currently uncontrolled programs will be brought within the discipline of an overall budget.

SEC. 15-502. FIXED-DOLLAR APPROPRIATIONS REQUIRED.

For every account except Social Security and interest on the debt, every appropriation for a fiscal period for any program, project, or activity shall be for a specific, fixed dollar amount. Any appropriations of "such sums as may be necessary" (except with respect to the automatic continuing resolution provided for by section 15-701 of this Act) are hereby prohibited.

SEC. 15-503. AGENCY-ADJUSTED BENEFITS.

The head of each Executive agency that administers any entitlement program is authorized to adjust benefit levels and eligibility requirements, or both, with respect to the program such that aggregate outlays for a fiscal period do not exceed the fixed-dollar appropriation proved pursuant to this title such fiscal period. Such adjustment shall b made by rule or, pending adoption of appr priate rules, informal guideline. The pu pose of any such rule or guideline shall b to ensure that the fixed-dollar appropri tions for the program authorized by Congress are not exceeded.

Subtitle F—"Pay As You Go" Requiremen for New Spending

SEC. 15-601. SPENDING OFFSETS REQUIRED.

It shall not be in order in either th House of Representatives or the Senate t consider any supplemental appropriatio measure, or any other bill, resolution, o amendment which authorizes, requires, o provides new entitlements/mandator spending as defined in section 3 (12)(A) o the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, or which autho izes spending for a fiscal period that th report referred to in section 15-302(a) o this Act indicates would in such fisca period exceed a budget ceiling, any such increased spending called for therein is offse fully in each such fiscal period in suc measure, bill, resolution or amendent by a equal amount of reductions in existin spending.

SEC. 15-602. TWO-THIRDS VOTE REQUIRE TO WAIV POINT OF ORDER.

The point of order established by this subtitle may be waived or suspended in th Senate or in the House of Representative and an appeal the ruling of the Chair on point of order raised under this section ma be sustained, only by the affirmative vote o two-thirds of the Members voting, a quorum being present.

Subtitle G—Sustaining Mechanism

SEC. 15-701. AUTOMATIC CONTINUING RESOLUTION

Chapter 13 of title 31, United States Code is amended by inserting after section 131 the following new section:

"S1311. Continuing appropriation

"(a) If for an account an appropriation fo a fiscal period does not become law befor the beginning of such fiscal period, ther are hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and out of applicable corporate or other revenues, receipts, and funds, such sums a may be necessary to continue any program project, or activity provide for in the mos recent appropriation Act at a rate of operations not in excess of the rate of operation provided for such program, project, or activity in such Act. In no case shall the tota dollar amount of appropriations for an program, project or activity pursuant to thi section exceed the appropriation for such program, project, or activity in the mos recent appropriation Act, determined on fiscal-period basis.

"(b) Amounts appropriated pursuant to subsection (a) for a program, project, or activity shall be available during a fisca period until the earlier of—

"(1) the day on which the appropriation bill for such fiscal period which would include the program, project, or activity take effect; or

"(2) the last day of such fiscal period.

SEC. 15-702 CONTINGENCY REGULATIONS.

Chapter 13 of title 31, United States Code is amended by inserting after section 131 the following new section:

"S1312. Contingency regulations

"(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law and except as provided by subsection (b), the head of each Executive agency tha administers any entitlement program shall by rule, (or informal guideline, pending adoption of appropriate rules), provide for the adjustments of benefit levels or eligibility requirements, or both, with respect to the program such that aggregate outlays for a fiscal period do not exceed the fixed-dollar appropriation provided pursuant to section 314 (requiring fixed-dollar appropriations) or section 401 (providing for an Automatic Continuing Resolution) of this Act for such fiscal period.

"(b) In the case of social safety net programs, the rules shall provide each State the option of receiving an aggregate amount for the fiscal period for such programs equal to the amount it received for the preceding fiscal period for such programs (in which case such State could, in its discretion, allocate the benefits among such programs to best meet the needs of recipients in its State) or the amounts it received for each such program for such preceding fiscal period.

"(c) as used in this section—

"(1) the term 'Executive agency' has the meaning given such term in section 105 of title 5, United States Code;

"(2) the term 'entitlement program' means any spending authority as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974; and

"(3) the term 'social safety net programs' means the following programs: family support payments, adoption assistance, child support enforcement, food stamps, foster care, medicaid, child nutrition programs, social services block grant, and Supplemental Security Income (SSI).'"

SEC. 15-703. UNAUTHORIZED APPROPRIATIONS PROHIBITED.

Section 401(b) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) CONTROLS ON LEGISLATION PROVIDING FUNDING.—(1) It shall not be in order in either the House of Representatives or the Senate to consider any bill, resolution, or conference report that provides budget authority or spending authority described in subsection (c)(2)(C) except a bill or resolution reported by the Committee on appropriations of that House or a conference report made by a committee or conference all of whose conferees are members of the Committee on Appropriations.

"(2) Paragraph (1) shall not apply to benefits payable under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program established under title II of the Social Security Act."

Subtitle H—Protection of Social Security

SEC. 15-801. BENEFITS PROTECTED AGAINST DEFICIT REDUCTION.

Nothing in this Act shall be construed to require or permit reductions in Social Security benefits otherwise payable pursuant to applicable law or regulations.

SEC. 15-802. CONFORMING AMENDMENT.

Chapter 13 of title 31, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 1313 the following new section:

"S1314. Protection of Social Security from budget deficit reduction measures

"No reductions in benefits payable under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program established under title II of the Social Security Act shall be made as a consequence of the Budget Process Reform Act [of 1990.]".

Subtitle I—Budget Process Calendar

SEC. 15-901. REVISION OF TIMETABLE.

Section 300 (2 U.S.C. 631) is amended to read as follows:

"TIMETABLE

"SEC. 300. The timetable with respect to the Congressional budget process for any Congress (beginning with the One Hundred Second Congress) is as follows:

"On or before:	Action to be completed:
Fifteenth day after the session begins.	President submits budget recommendations.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

HOLDING KIDS TO A HIGHER STANDARD

HON. LOUIS STOKES

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Speaker, much has been written and numerous studies have been conducted on the problems confronting our Nation's youth. Many have wondered how we can break the cycle of crime, peer pressure and lack of values and positive role models that confront a majority of our youth.

Recently, Washington Post columnist William Raspberry highlighted the efforts of Kent Amos, an exceptional individual who is reaching out to troubled youth and making a difference in many of their lives. For the past 9 years, this former Xerox executive has welcomed young people into the Amos "family," where they receive counseling, tutoring, and positive reinforcement in a family type setting.

Amos believes, however, that the key to success for young people is the enforcement of strong values. These values he said, will "protect you from the things that can destroy you, while miraculously letting through the things that are necessary for life." Putting this theory to work, he has successfully changed the lives of more than 57 members of the Amos "family."

Mr. Speaker, I read the article on Kent Amos and his family with great interest. Mr. Amos is to be commended for his dedication, commitment, and special efforts on behalf of our youth. I am pleased to share this article which is entitled, "Holding Kids to a Higher Standard" with my colleagues. It is certainly worthwhile reading.

HOLDING KIDS TO A HIGHER STANDARD

(By William Raspberry)

It started nine years ago when Kent Amos's son, newly enrolled at Coolidge High School, came home with a couple of new friends.

"The boys were OK," says Amos, who heads a Washington consulting firm, "but they just weren't the kind of kids I thought my son ought to be spending his time with. I mean they were rude and poorly spoken; they weren't interested in academics or anything else except sports and running around."

His first thought, he says, was to forbid Wesley to associate with these rough-cut youngsters lest they drag him down. Then he had a second thought: Why not lift them up to where they ought to be.

The upshot was the Amos "family," a group of high school students who meet nightly at Amos's Northwest Washington town house to study and talk. Since those early days, the "family" has embraced 57 young people, most of whom have cleaned up their language and attitudes, abandoned the path that was leading to wasted lives and prison, and, most important to Amos, embraced the values that produce decent behavior and success.

Values. The word crops up in virtually every serious conversation Amos has. Talk to this former Xerox executive about the problems young Washingtonians face and he'll tell you lack of constructive outlets for their energies, or the dearth of decently paid legitimate jobs, is only a minor part of the trouble. The main source, he says, is that the youngsters have not been taught the values that will help them withstand the temptation to trouble.

Talk to him about the trial of D.C. Mayor Marion Barry, and his comments are not about what the judge or the prosecutor or the jury did but what the failure of the decent blacks to hold public officials to a higher standard of decency has done to the values of our children, "Talk to him about his adopted "family," and he talks about values.

"I try to help these youngsters enjoy themselves in positive ways, but I also insist that they devote serious time to study," he said in a recent interview. "I insist that they work when they're not in school, and that they do something positive for their communities. . . .

"We try to make our children believe that we are in control, but it's not true. The children themselves have the ultimate decision on almost everything they do, starting at a very young age. All I am doing is trying to get them to internalize a set of values. . . ."

It doesn't always work. A few kinds yield to peer pressure and outside temptation and drop out of the Amos "family." Some get into trouble and have to start over again. And once or twice, parents have questioned Amos' intensive approach.

"One mother who didn't even live in the area called me disturbed about what I was doing with her child," he recalls. "That was during his second year in the program. I reassured her that I was only interested in letting the young man reach his potential. We later met—at his graduation, with honors.

Most parents, though, are pleased to have their boys and girls join the Amos family, once they learn how seriously Amos takes his self-appointed mission. (Not only has he spent an estimated $250,000 of his own money on the program, but he has also enlisted his wife, Carmen, as hostess and cook for the study sessions.)

"I really do take the position that these are my kids," he told me. "I'm available to them around the clock. Just last week, one of the older boys tore up his knee playing basketball, and he had no insurance. I called my friend Tony Rankin (an orthopedic surgeon) and Tony took care of him for me. I have cried at their family funerals, and I have gotten kids out of jail. Once I was called away from Constitution Hall, where I was attending graduation exercises for some of my kids, to come get another one out of jail. That kid has now graduated from college."

It was no surprise to Amos that the values he had taught finally kicked in.

"The best thing that serious concerned adults can do for our children is to give them a clear, unequivocal set of values," he says. "Values are like ozone. They prote you from the things that can destroy yo while miraculously letting through th things that are necessary for life."

CHARLES PRUDHOMME, M.D.

HON. MERVYN M. DYMALLY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. DYMALLY. Mr. Speaker, I am please to bring to the attention of Members an inte esting article about Dr. Charles Prudhomme, past vice president of the American Psychia ric Association, which appeared in the Psych atric News, October 5, 1990.

[From Psychiatric News, Oct. 5, 1990]

CHARLES PRUDHOMME OVERCAME MUCH TO A PSYCHIATRIST

(By Lucy Ozarin, M.D.)

The APA Archives contains two pieces autobiographical material on Dr. Charl Prudhomme (1908–88), one of the first bla physicians to enter psychiatry and probab the second black psychoanalyst in the U. He was also a vice president of APA in 197 71, the first black to hold elected office the Association.

One of the items is a taped talk he gave May 1972 at the Washington Psychoanaly ic Society, and the other is an oral histo taped in 1975 by Jean Jones, then APA brarian. Both are fragmented, and nam mentioned by Dr. Prudhomme are misspe in the transcript (and hence unidentifiabl but the difficulties and rebuffs suffered Dr. Prudhomme because of his color con through loud and clear.

Dr. Prudhomme was born in Opelous LA. His maternal grandfather was Puer Rican and his grandmother black. H grandfather had opened a country sto that his father later took over. Wh Charles was 3 years old, his father dev oped tuberculosis and the family began migration ostensibly destined for Denver.

One of the stops along the way w Kansas City, MO, where Charles and h mother remained while his father mov on. Charles became a fine baseball play and graduated from high school second his class.

Charles entered the University of Kans in 1925 but remained only a short time. B cause of segregation practices, he was n allowed to take certain courses, and could not use the college swimming pool. obtained a scholarship to Howard Univer ty with the aid of an interested alumn and for the next six years alternated b tween college and work. After graduating 1931, he entered Howard University Medic School. He was able to complete his studi there in 1935 with scholarship money fro the State of Missouri—Missouri did n allow blacks at the state university but d pay out-of-state tuition. Dr. Prudhomme r counts that he asked for help from his sen tor at the time, Harry S Truman, and r ceived it. He served an internship at Freedman's Hospital in 1936–37.

During his years at Howard, he had numerous contacts at St. Elizabeths Hospital, forging strong ties to several physicians there. One is identified as Dr. Kaufman. This is probably Dr. Ben Karpman, an analyst and prolific writer on forensic psychiatry and head of psychiatry at Howard from 1921 to 1941. He required seniors to write a paper on a psychiatric subject, and Dr. Prudhomme wrote on suicide in the American Negro, a paper later published in the Psychoanalytic Review (1938).

Dr. Prudhomme had hoped to intern and take residency at St. Elizabeths Hospital, but he was told that the legislation that had established the hospital in 1855 enforced segregation (the law remained in force until 1954). He talks of a Dr. Craven at St. Elizabeths who was interested in the dreams of black people. Under the guise of providing analysis, Dr. Craven obtained those dreams. Dr. Prudhomme says that he produced prepared dreams for Dr. Craven.

In 1937 Dr. Prudhomme obtained a fellowship at the University of Chicago, but he was dismayed to learn that he was slated to work at Providence Hospital for black people. He had contacts with analysts like Franz Alexander and determined that he, too, would be an analyst. He returned to Washington to try again to get into St. Elizabeths, "using my Senator, Harry S Truman, for all he was worth."

Truman arranged for him to go to Tuskegee in 1940, where Dr. Prudhomme met a number of black psychiatrists who had been trained in Boston by Dr. Solomon Carter Fuller, the first black psychiatrist in the U.S. Dr. Prudhomme remained at Tuskegee until the Army transferred him in 1943 to Howard University to head the Army Specialized Training Program. That year he registered at the Washington School of Psychiatry, where one of his teachers was Frieda Fromm-Reichman. She took him on for analysis, and later he received supervision from Edith Weigert.

It was not an easy road to be admitted to the Washington Psychoanalytic Society. He thought he had completed the requirements when he was told that since his supervised cases were women, he needed to work with a male patient. He was finally admitted in 1958.

Dr. Prudhomme practiced psychoanalysis in Washington for a number of years and continued his teaching at Howard. He recounts numerous incidents related to racism. He tells of having a confirmed reservation in a hotel in Cincinnati for an APA meeting in the early 1950's but was sent instead to a hotel for blacks. He dwells on his rejection for a position at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

One wishes that the material on Dr. Prudhomme in APA's Archives was less fragmented and relayed more of his philosophy and thoughts on being a black pioneer in psychiatry and psychoanalysis. He was truly a trailblazer for the education of black psychiatrists and often pointed out the importance of cultural patterns in the practice of psychiatry. The material strongly conveys, however, a sense of the many difficulties he encountered because of racism and the aggressiveness he needed to achieve his goals.

Dr. Jeanne Spurlock, deputy medical director for minority and national affairs at APA, supplied several additional notes. She said that Dr. Prudhomme had told her of his disappointment in not being allowed to play with white baseball teams in his youth. And when he was in Chicago, he had a bitter disagreement with a prominent neuropathologist who insisted that blacks do not contract multiple sclerosis after Dr. Prudhomme had correctly diagnosed the illness.

A SALUTE TO MARTIN PATRICK "PAT" CARTER

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to salute an entrepreneur who has employed his skills and talents to enrich his community, Martin Patrick "Pat" Carter.

After serving in the U.S. Army during World War II, "Pat" began his career in insurance by developing and installing group programs in worker's compensation, health, property, and specialized programs for individuals and trade associations. In 1953, Pat cofounded the Irving Weber Association, Inc. As president and chief executive officer, of this insurance firm, Pat earned a national reputation for his expertise in all phases of the insurance industry.

Since 1982, Pat specializes in the design and administration of risk management programs for small cities, incorporated villages, and other public entities.

Over the past 30 years, Pat has been involved in many civic organizations. As a founder of the United Democratic Club, his organization and persuasion skills have been used in a variety of community based efforts including voter registration drives, community organization projects, and charitable programs.

COMMUNITY GOAL BECOMING REALITY

HON. DON SUNDQUIST

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. SUNDQUIST. Mr. Speaker, the residents of a neighborhood in Germantown are coming together to rebuilt a small church that was destroyed by arsonists last year. This is not a common example of a community joining together for a cause. This is a community that has come together for a purpose: the purpose of rebuilding a small congregation's place of worship. It is not only the members of this church contributing money, time, and care; it is the whole community, and that is why I feel they need to be recognized. These citizens are defining the true meaning of community.

I ask this House to join me in offering this tribute to this neighborhood in Germantown, TN, and I request that the article from the Commercial Appeal, Thursday, April 12, 1990, be entered following my remarks in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

[From the Commercial Appeal, Apr. 12, 1990]

RESIDENTS HELP CONGREGATION TO REBUILD CHURCH

(By Clay Bailey)

Residents of an affluent Germantown neighborhood are organizing efforts to rebuild a small church burned last year by teenage arsonists.

Insurance money—between $60,000 and $100,000—won't be enough to rebuild the Taylor Chapel CME Church at 2645 Forest Hill-Irene Road, much less replace pews, hymnals, choir robes and other furnishings destroyed in the Dec. 19 fire. Another $25,000 probably is needed, organizers of the rebuilding effort said.

The shortfall has led neighbors and other churches in Germantown to rally around the small, black congregation and help with the restoration. Professionals have donated their services, churches have raised money and neighbors have organized the effort.

"We just love it," said Rev. William Moore, pastor of Taylor Chapel. "Thank the Lord our neighbors are so kind towards us. Everything is going real well."

But more help is needed, said Betty Millar, who lives about a half-mile from the church and started the campaign. No exact figure was available, but Mrs. Millar believes about half of the estimated $25,000 needed to complete the church has been donated.

"Riding past there and seeing it was a shock the first time," Mrs. Millar said. "I just decided something had to be done. We were so embarrassed and distressed that it happened. It's one of the oldest churches in the area, and they are beautiful people."

All that remains on the property after the fire is the concrete parking lot. Two juveniles, one 14 and the other 15, have been charged with arson and burglary in the fire. Their case is pending in Juvenile Court, but some restitution could be involved in the outcome.

Actually, the church was part of the Forest Hill community before many of the residents. There is some disagreement over exactly how long the church had stood on the property. Mr. Moore, pastor of the church for the past three years, said the land was deeded to the congregation in 1903, but some documents state that the building was between 110 and 125 years old.

"There's a lot of historic interest in that church," said Frank Uhlhorn, a builder who will oversee rebuilding the church. "They've been a wealth of information for the neighborhood. A lot of parents of the people active in the church remember a lot about this area before people moved out here."

In addition to Mrs. Millar's efforts and Uhlhorn's offer to help rebuild the sanctuary at cost, others along Forest Hill-Irene have contributed to the cause. Former Germantown Mayor Warner Hodges III, an attorney, has represented the church's interest in the Juvenile Court hearings and in negotiations with the insurance company. Mrs. Millar has asked local garden clubs to help with the landscaping and Uhlhorn had an architect, whom he did not identify, draft the plans without charge. The city cleared the burned debris from the church lot.

Uhlhorn said it probably will cost about $120,000 to rebuild the church.

"The insurance will cover what it can, and we hope for donations and volunteers to finish it out," Uhlhorn said. "We'll be able to get the building back up and under cover, but as far as any floor covering and curtains and things like that, it will take some more money or help."

Uhlhorn said it would take about four to five months to complete the reconstruction.

Mrs. Millar said a fund has been established at the Community Bank of Germantown, and donations to help with the church can be sent to the bank earmarked for the Taylor Chapel Rebuilding Fund.

A SALUTE TO DOUGLAS ALEXANDER

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, Today I rise to pay honor to a man who has spent an enormous amount of time and effort in the development of our young people, Mr. Dougas X. Alexander, a native of Brooklyn, NY.

Mr. Alexander has put his belief in education and service to the community in action throughout his career. After receiving undergraduate training from New City Community College and Baruch College, Doug Alexander received his degree in marketing in 1975.

Douglas has served the community in a variety of efforts. His contributions have enriched the lives of many people. He is the immediate past president of the Bedford Stuyvesant Lions Club, having served two 1 year terms. He is currently serving his second year as a zone chairman in Lions District 20 K1. He serves on the board of directors of several community organizations including the Brooklyn Advisory Board of the New York Urban League and the East New York Local Development Corp.

Doug has used his talents to assist the growth of individuals and the community. He has employed his knowledge and expertise to assist prospective entrepreneurs in establishing business enterprises.

In his desire to contribute to the development of our youth, he has served as the sustaining membership enrollment chairman for the Boy Scouts of America and has consistently volunteered with Big Brothers of America. Over the years, he has served as a big brother to several students from P.S. 73. In an effort to provide guidance to a broad spectrum of young people, Doug regularly speaks to young people about career choice in annual Career Day presentations. Finally, he has served as a consultant to Junior Achievement by teaching a weekly junior high school class in business. In addition to participating in the community, Doug has also infused his workplace with the same spirit of active involvement. In his role as fundraising captain for the United Negro College Fund, he has obtained significant support for the fund from his colleagues at Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co.

Douglas X. Alexander is an assistant vice president and branch manager of Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. He is married to Terry Kirkland and the father of two lovely daughters, Tiffany and Courtney.

SECOND BUDGET RESOLUTION FAIR AND EQUITABLE

HON. ROMANO L. MAZZOLI

OF KENTUCKY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, last week the House had before it the proposed fiscal year 1991 budget and deficit reduction package developed in the White House-congressional budget summit.

Congratulations are in order for all the summiteers, but especially for Speaker FOLEY and Majority Leader GEPHARDT and Minority Leader MICHEL for the endless hours they spent over the past 5 months to develop a budget package.

However, while the summit package correctly sought to reduce sharply the deficit—by some $500 billion over 5 years—I did not believe that the package was as fair and equitable as it could have been nor that it spread the burdens of added revenues and spending cuts as evenly and broadly as required.

I was especially concerned about the increased Medicare costs, the growth-incentive package and the distribution of the taxes contemplated by the first budget and deficit reduction package.

Accordingly, but with sadness on my part because of all the time, energy, and good faith our leaders had invested in the package, I voted against the first budget resolution. It was, as we all know now, rejected by a broad vote.

However, Mr. Speaker, a few days later, we were presented with an alternative budget resolution which I could and did support.

This revised blueprint—unlike its predecessor—was modified in several important ways. It was made more equitable and more fair, and it gave House and Senate committees of jurisdiction the responsibility to decide how to meet these targets, and it gave them also the flexibility to meet the amended targets in ways which do not penalize any one group of citizens or taxpayers.

Specifically, and importantly, the revised budget and deficit reduction proposal for fiscal year 1991 reduces the burdens to be borne by Medicare beneficiaries and eliminates some of the more questionable elements in the earlier package, such as the 2-week delay in issuance of unemployment compensation checks and the growth provisions which, when analyzed were not so much growth incentives as tax loopholes.

Mr. Speaker, these have been difficult and tense times for us all. But, if from all the tension and tumult a more fair and equitable budget for America and its citizens emerges, then it will have richly been worth the effort.

TRIBUTE TO REV. MSGR. ALOYSIUS J. WELSH ON THE GOLDEN JUBILEE OF HIS ORDINATION

HON. ROBERT A. ROE

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, on Saturday, October 27, 1990, residents of my Eighth Congressional District and the State of New Jersey will join the friends of the Guild of Saint Joseph the Worker and the parish community of Saint Peter's Church in Belleville, NJ, and Rev. Msgr. Aloysius J. Welsh in celebration of the 50th anniversary of his consecreation into the sacrament of holy orders.

Mr. Speaker, the faith and devotion of our people in a full communion of understanding—ever caring and respecting the individual beliefs of our fellow man—has been the lifeline of the individual on to great achievements and purpose in pursuing the fulfillment of his or her dreams and ambitions. The exemplary leadership and outstanding efforts to our citizens so important to our quality of life are in the vanguard of the American dream and today we express our appreciation to Rev. Msgr. Aloysius J. Welsh, whose esteemed dedication and unselfish devotion in promulgating spiritual guidance, goodwill, fellowship, and brotherhood in service to God have truly enriched our community, State, and Nation.

Reverend Monsignor Welsh has maintained the highest standards of excellence throughout his lifetime and we are pleased to share the pride of his family, many friends, and parishioners in the distinguished achievements so unselfishly dedicated to the betterment of mankind. There is so much that can be said of the love, affection, and reverence with which Reverend Monsignor Welsh is held by all who have had the good fortune to know him.

Mr. Speaker, we are so proud to have Reverend Monsignor Welsh with us in Belleville, NJ. He was ordained on December 20, 1940, at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington. A native of Belleville, he studied at Seton Hall University, Immaculate Conception Seminary, and the Pontifical Gregorian University in Rome. He received his doctor of sacred theology degree from Catholic University of America in Washington in 1942.

At the seminary he founded the home study course, a catechism-by-mail program, through which hundreds have been introduced to the church. Monsignor Welsh founded the Guild of St. Joseph the Worker and the Pope Pius XII Institute of Social Education. Through the years his special apostalate has been the field of labor-management relations and social justice.

After 18 years of teaching at the seminary, he was named social action director with headquarters at Essex Catholic High School in 1964. Monsignor Welsh accepted the challenge of the pastorate of St. Joseph's Church on West Market Street, Newark—a poverty-stricken parish whose parishoners were moving out as fast as financial means permitted. The racial difficulties in Newark's inner city of 1967 and 1968 found Monsignor. Welsh in a position of spiritual leader and conciliator.

Mr. Speaker, his experiences and ability prompted the American Catholic Bishops to chose Monsignor Welsh as the executive director of the National Catholic Task Force on Urban Problems, which was a forerunner and catalyst of the present Campaign for Human Development.

On his return from 2 years of service at the Washington office of the U.S. Catholic Conference, Monsignor Welsh became the executive director of the New Jersey Catholic Confernce, Trenton-based coordinating office for contacts by five New Jersey dioceses with New Jersey legislature and executive branch; from March of 1972 to May of 1977, Msgr. Welsh was the pastor of St. Aloysius Parish, Caldwell, New Jersey. His most recent assignment was a executive director of the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice with headquarters in Washington, DC.

Mr. Speaker, as Rev. Monsignor Aloysius J. Welsh celebrates the 50th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood, I know that you and all of our colleagues here in the Congress will want to join me in extending our warmest greetings and felicitations for the excellence of his service to his church, our Nation, and all mankind. We do indeed salute an esteemed pastor, exemplary clergyman, and great American—Rev. Msgr. Aloysius J. Welsh, of Belleville, NJ.

REALIZING THE PEACE DIVIDEND

HON. LOUIS STOKES

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Speaker, in recent months, there has been much debate and much has been written about the proper focus of our Nation's budget priorities. In light of the dramatic changes taking place in Eastern Europe, the Soviet Union, and elsewhere around the globe, many believe that the time has come to shift our priorities from a huge Defense budget to a budget that reinforces our commitment to addressing pressing domestic demands. For many years the basic human needs of our citizens—education, employment, health care, and housing—have gone unmet while we have engaged in the largest peacetime military buildup in U.S. history.

Mr. Speaker, the National Association of Social Workers has taken a great interest in this important issue. Recently, the Cleveland chapter of the peace and welfare committee drafted a resolution concerning the peace dividend and economic conversion. I believe the resolution is very timely and makes a powerful statement. I am pleased to share the resolution with my colleagues and urge them to take a moment to read it. I also take this opportunity to commend Mr. Jack Emmer, a member of the peace and social justice committee, for the development of this document and the organization's longstanding commitment to economic and social justice.

REALIZING THE PEACE DIVIDEND

Whereas, the changing political climate, particularly in Eastern Europe, offers the United States an opportunity to end the "cold war" and adopt a policy of peaceful negotiation of differences; and

Whereas, our relationship with the Soviet Union is increasingly characterized by diplomacy, accommodation, and compromise; and

Whereas, the countries of Central America have clearly signaled their intent to manage their own affairs without military intervention by the United States; and

Whereas, the 46-year-old arms race has created a fragile and unbalanced economy, characterized by the growing affluence of the few and devastating poverty for an increasing underclass; and

Whereas, the enormous expenditures on military production and research have hurt the competitive position of the U.S. and kept investment in the civilian economy inordinately low; and

Whereas, after years of neglect, the nation's infrastructure is failing to support a modern industrial society; and

Whereas, our increasing international debt and trade imbalance are reducing our country to a second-rate economic power; and

Whereas, our society is threatened by growing crises in education, health, crime, substance abuse, racism, homelessness, hunger, inequality, and the environment; and

Whereas, the President's proposed budget perpetuates and exacerbates these problems by achieving its "debt reduction" mainly out of domestic programs; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the National Association of Social Workers adopt the following policies:

1. Reaffirm our commitment to the NASW National Social Agenda for American Families which alone can validate our mission as professional social workers;

2. Determine that our highest priority for the next triennium shall be to lobby for the transfer of a major share of our national resources from military to domestic programs; to work for a comprehensive national health plan, quality child care available to all families, decent affordable housing for all Americans, and an end to hunger and malnutrition;

3. Mobilize all social workers to ensure the realization of a PEACE DIVIDEND in the next three years.

RESOLUTION TO 1990 NASW DELEGATE ASSEMBLY ECONOMIC CONVERSION

Whereas: Economic Conversion Planning for a peace-time economy is needed to help repair decay in U.S. industry, infrastructure and human services, and to counter fears that peace means depression

Whereas: Military spending has helped create an enormous Federal Budget deficit

Whereas: The U.S. ranks first among industrial countries in military spending and research and development but only eleventh in economic growth

Whereas: Plans have already been made to greatly reduce the number of military bases; such reduction in bases or industries can have calamitous impact on communities affected, including the loss of thousands of military and civilian jobs, unless anticipated by planful conversion

Whereas: A lead-time of at least two-years will be needed to introduce conversion of defense-related industries in our country

Resolved: That NASW do the following:

---

1. Accept a mandate to commit its resources to support, advocate and lobby for economic conversion from a military to a civilian peace-time economy.

2. (a) Support legislation sponsored by Ted Weiss, Democrat, New York City and 64 more House members, HR 101, "Defense Economic Adjustment Act."

(b) Urge NASW lobbyists to contract our Senators to sponsor a companion Bill in the Senate to match that of HR 101.

3. Take a leadership role in working with other organizations to assure that economic conversion include education, health, and human service jobs.

A SALUTE TO LILLIE COOPER MARTIN

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to salute a woman who has dedicated her life to improving the quality of life for the poor, Lillie Cooper Martin.

Ms. Martin's devoted career in community service began early in her life. While a teenager, she learned the art of public service under the watchful eye of New York City's first African-American city marshal, Reginald Thorpe.

After graduating from Central Commercial High School, Ms. Martin realized that she would be better able to achieve her goal of public service by continuing her education. She subsequently completed courses at New York University and the New School for Social Research.

After marriage and children, Ms. Martin realized that the public school system needed the contribution of concerned parents. In response to that need, she served as the PTA Secretary at Public School 182 and PTA President at Intermediate School 292 in Brooklyn. Additionally, she has served the public school system as a paraprofessional at Public School 306.

However, Lillie's concern for the improvement of the lives of others expanded beyond the schoolhouse. She has played an integral part in the organization and operation of many community based groups, including the Council for a Better East New York and the Task Force at the Community Development Agency [CDA]. After leaving CDA, Lillie's interest in housing and community development grew. She has served as coordinator of East New York Housing Services, director of East New York Housing Services, and executive director of Multi-Service Center No. 3. Currently, she serves as the executive director of East New York Stop Deterioration Corp.

Lillie serves on many boards and committees. Among these are Christians United for Social Action, Leslie Freeman Day Care Center, Council for a Better East New York, Executive Committee of Kings County Hospital, East New York Neighborhood Family Care Center, and Alternative Health and Hospital Corp. of East New York.

Lillie Cooper Martin and Jesse Martin have been wed for almost 40 years. They are the proud parents of 6 children and grandparents of 10 grandchildren.

Lillie Cooper Martin is dedicated to freedom and providing for the less fortunate.

COMMEMORATING IND'S 20TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. STEPHEN J. SOLARZ

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. SOLARZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise to commemorate a remarkable milestone in the history of Brooklyn. On October 26, the Independent Neighborhood Democrats will hold their 20th anniversary dinner dance.

As we deliberate on the budget, as this body contemplates critical questions of war and peace, it is important for us to remember that we are here as representatives of the people. Our system of government works best when the voters are informed, organized, active, and have the opportunity to choose their representatives in free and fair elections. For 20 years, the Independent Neighborhood Democracts have been at the forefront of the struggle to keep our political processes open, honest, and responsive to the needs of the average citizens.

IND was founded on Independence Day 1970. From this auspicious beginning, a ragtag band of youthful idealists, operating under the unlikely moniker of a subway line serving the neighborhood, soon grew into a well-organized army for political and social reform.

They were certainly "independent." They were independent from the country organization, independent from the local elected officials and from party leaders.

Although scorned as subversives, and dismissed as amateurs, IND's members fought for their ideals even when it seemed that victory was well beyond their grasp.

Often their causes only appeared impossible because they had the courage to take a stand before those in power did.

They fought against the war in Vietnam.

They fought against pollution in their community.

They fought to make processes of government honest, open, and accountable.

They fought to open the political process through voter registration drives.

Years before reformers across the State insisted that the legislature fund community offices in each assembly district, IND rented a storefront office for their local assemblyman.

They also supported candidates who shared their vision, sometimes against some of the most powerful figures on the local political scene.

They supported Al Lowenstein for Congress.

They supported Sal Ferraioli for district leader.

They supported Carol Bellamy and Marty Connor for State senate.

They supported Mike Pesce and Eileen Dugan for assembly.

They supported Mario Cuomo for mayor.

They supported Steve DiBrienza for city council.

They supported Al Tomei for judge.

They even supported my ill-fated race fo borough president of Brooklyn.

Some of the candidacies and causes the championed were successful while others ha to wait for another day to taste victory. I each case, however, IND was guided by prin ciple. Once committed they would neve waver. They were always skilled and energeti partisans.

Their work was often difficult. They fough powerful, entrenched interests that coul strike back—and hard. Oldtimers on Cou Street still recall that Memorial Day long ag when the club's headquarters was bombe Let history record, however, that IND st works out of that little storefront below stre level. It is an appropriate symbol of IND's pe sistence, vigor, and commitment.

Those who seek to reform our political pro esses often become the objects of scorn ar derision, especially from those in positions power. Tammany boss George Washingto Plunkitt dismissed them as "morning glories They are often referred to as "crackpots And who can forget the ultimate clubhous calumny that "a reformer is an out-of-wo politician."

The Independent Neighborhood Democra have given the lie to the conventional wisdo They have proven that you can fight city h and win. But they have proven somethi more important. IND has proven that you c win elections, and remain true to your refor roots.

Victory has never dampened IND's ind pendent spirit or its zeal for reform. It is tod what it was 20 years ago: a group of refor minded citizens who care most for their co munity and who recognize that vital, gras roots, democratic, community organizatio still offer the best hope for a just society.

Mr. Speaker, I have witnessed, firsthar the struggles of people around the world attain democratic institutions. In the Phil pines, the people braved the assaults of t Marcos gang. In Eastern Europe, common c zens tore down the Iron Curtain with their ba hands and threw off the Communist system a genuine expression of collective action. A who will ever forget the image of a solita student standing up to a tank in Tiananm Square?

As inspiring as these struggles for freedo have been, it often seems as though, here America, we take our democracy for grante

I am proud to report that, at least in c corner of Brooklyn, active and vital public p ticipation in the democratic system is v much alive. In the county of Kings, there is room for monarchs or those who seek to tablish political dynasties.

The Independent Neighborhood Democr have remained true to their roots: indepe ent, tough-minded reformers. It is a privile to represent them. I congratulate them on t important milestone, and I honor them their service to our borough.

GEORGE HARDY: UNION BUILDER, CHAMPION OF THE LOW-WAGE WORKER

HON. MERVYN M. DYMALLY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. DYMALLY. Mr. Speaker, this past September labor and friends witnessed the passing of a great union leader, George Hardy, president of the Service Employees International Union, AFL–CIO (1971–80).

Mr. Speaker, I first met George Hardy when I was a union organizer of the American Federation of Teachers, AFL–CIO. Then later I met him as a member of his union, local 41, when I worked for the California Disaster Office.

When I ran for the California assembly in 1962, he was one of my biggest supporters.

George was a union leader who never lost touch with his members. It was not at all unusual to see President Hardy licking stamps in the headquarters of candidates he supported.

I join with his many friends and colleagues in expressing our deep sympathy to his family.

[From Union, Fall 1990]

To George, With Gratitude

(By John J. Sweeney)

This past September, our union said goodbye with great sadness to one of its dearest family members. George Hardy, who revolutionized SEIU in the western United States, and who led the International union into a new and dominant role in the labor movement, passed away at the age of 78.

It is difficult to try to memorialize George. He had no stomach for ceremony and no patience for personal salutes. He had only one concern; to organize the unorganized.

The stories of George Hardy's diligence, his tirelessness, and, yes, his rough-and-tumble vocabulary have become legendary. But I wonder whether those who did not have the pleasure of knowing him really understand that the stories are true—for George it was always the union and his family. There was nothing else.

When George was young, he pushed a broom by day, like his father before him, and at night he worked to organize co-workers, many of whom were women, into SEIU Local 9 (theatre janitors) and Local 87 (office building janitors) in San Francisco. He often went without sleep, and as soon as his employer of the moment learned of his organizing activities, George would be fired and blacklisted. Yet without a break in his stride, he'd be on to a new job and on to new organizing. George was an optimist.

He was also a trendsetter, as one of my favorite George Hardy stories illustrates. In 1943, 30 years before most people had ever heard of pay equity, a group of women janitors from Local 87 approached George with a problem. They had discovered, to their horror, that their employer paid male workers a higher wage than he paid women—to perform identical tasks!

While this practice was common in the building service industry up through the 1960s, it offended George back during World War II. With the help of economist Ralph Eliaser, George took the women's case straight to the War Labor Board in Washington, D.C. and won the workers what was probably the first "equal pay for equal work" ruling in the history of the labor movement.

George's confrontation with President Gerald Ford stands out as another vivid memory. In 1975, several labor leaders had been invited to the White House as part of an economic summit. When George arrived, he quickly unleashed a flurry of his infamous "Hayes Valley language." He told Ford it was a "—— disgrace" that janitors were making two dollars an hour just a block away from the White House.

In an article on the summit meeting, the Wall Street Journal attributed George's outburst to "rank-and-file members not characteristic of Washington labor leaders." George responded, "I think they meant me," and he was right.

It's important to know that George wasn't grandstanding when he spoke out so fiercely. He was a man with one concern and one set of principles, and he had only one manner and one voice for expressing those principles—to presidents and workers alike.

I think AFL–CIO President Lane Kirkland captured the essence of George Hardy when he addressed SEIU's convention in 1980.

"George Hardy does not wear his social philosophy on his sleeve. He carries it in his heart," Kirkland observed. "Because he is so uncompromising in his beliefs, it would be impossible not to have been on the opposite side of an issue at least once. But win or lose, George knows that when the fight for idealism is over, the practical battle for the survival of the labor movement begins. This commitment is what turns a collection of unions into a movement."

And building a movement out of a collection of unions is what George Hardy did best. You need only look at the dynamic growth of SEIU during his career to know that.

I only hope that we, his successors, can always do his legacy justice.

God bless you, George.

George Hardy

(By Matt Simon)

For 50 years, he commanded attention throughout the labor movement as a unique blend of visionary and street fighter. He foresaw San Francisco as a town of union janitors and the U.S. public sector as an organized jurisdiction when both goals were considered farfetched dreams. And he tenaciously took on all adversaries, from California's ruthless employers' associations of the 1930s to U.S. President Gerald Ford, whom he surprised with an outburst of salty language at a 1975 economic summit.

He was George Hardy, founder of the Service Employees Western Conference, former SEIU International president (1971–1980), architect of SEIU's health-care organizing, pioneer of public sector organizing. A man who set out, in the Depression, to organize San Francisco's exploited, largely immigrant workforce of janitors; who understood the vital role of women in the labor movement as members, organizers, and officers; and who built a network of robust western locals that today provides union representation to more than 350,000 men and women.

On Sept. 13, 1990, George Hardy passed away at Childrens' Hospital in San Francisco after a lengthy illness. He was 78.

"He was one of the finest men I have ever met—and one of the truly great labor leaders," says former California Gov. Edmund G. "Pat" Brown, Hardy's long-time friend and political ally. "The world is a better place for his passing through it."

"Those of us who knew George have lost a very dear friend, and hundreds of thousands of workers—workers who might be blocked from organizing to this day were it not for George—have lost a true champion," says SEIU President John Sweeney.

Born in Vancouver, British Columbia, George Hardy grew up in the working-class Hayes Valley District of San Francisco at a time when the trade unionist was often dismissed as first cousin to the anarchist.

The son of Charles "Pop" Hardy, a janitor and early Service Employees organizer, young George received a crash course in unionism during the San Francisco General Strike of 1934, when he helped workers hatch a dramatic four-day shutdown of the entire city in support of embattled longshoremen.

The successful strike taught George that even the most powerful employers could be beaten. Hardy would spend his life putting them to the test.

In the next few years, he and the "Hayes Valley Gang," as Hardy's neighborhood friends were known, braved blacklisting and dangerous confrontations to successfully organize the majority of San Francisco's commerical building cleaners. With only the clothes on their backs, the Gang then traveled to Los Angeles, an anti-labor bastion, to organize a handful of fledgling locals.

By the time he left for combat duty in World War II, Hardy had established new Service Employee local unions from the Bay Area to San Diego, and had united them in the California State Council, the first statewide coordinated body in SEIU history.

When Hardy was elected SEIU International vice president in 1948, both the range and variety of his organizing efforts were already expanding. He had charted victories in several states, which he brought together in 1950 as the SEIU Western Conference, the first cooperative multi-state body formed by an American labor union. He had also widened his focus to include two groups nearly untouched by the labor movement: health-care workers and public employees.

By the time Hardy was elected SEIU International president in 1971, health-care and public workers had become SEIU's fastest-growing areas of membership groups because of his determined efforts.

When Hardy retired in 1980, SEIU was the second largest union of non-teaching public employees in North America. But before he left office, George laid the groundwork for the 1989 merger of SEIU and District 1199, the National Union of Hospital and Health Care Employees, which made SEIU the largest union of health-care workers on the continent.

On the occasion of his retirement, Service Employees newspaper asked Hardy to reflect on his career. In his editorial, Hardy did not boast. Instead, he wrote, "There is so much to be done."

Union Builder; Champion of the Low-Wage Worker; Organizer

"He was one of the finest men I ever met—and one of the truly great union leaders. The world is a better place for his passing through it."

The words belong to Edmund G. "Pat" Brown, former governor of California. He is speaking of George Hardy, his long-time friend and political ally.

The night before Governor Brown made these remarks, George Hardy left the world he made a better place. The man who always reminded us there was "so much to be done" had finally done enough for one lifetime.

George Hardy always wanted us to be prepared to carry on without him. In his earliest years as an organizer, cruising penniless down Interstate 5 with the Hayes Valley Gang he knew that his toughest challenge would be to keep his scattered unions running when the organizing was over, when "Pop" Hardy's car was returned to San Francisco and its rightful owner.

He succeeded by bringing his locals together in unified councils and conferences powerful enough collectively to ward off the enemy.

When he retired from SEIU, George similarly left the International union well-prepared to go on thriving and growing under a new generation of leaders.

Nothing George could do, however, would have prepared his friends and colleagues for his passing.

All we can do is pull together in the same spirit of solidarity George inspired among his western unions, and celebrate the man who did not, like others, dismiss downtrodden janitors as a class too poor to organize, who did not flinch at the notion of organizing the forbidden public sector and health-care industry, and who did not rest with the realization that there was "so much to be done." The truth is, George Hardy left us with much less to be done.

May eternity be his reward.

A SALUTE TO NORMAN D. LETOW

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to Norman Letow, a man who has spent his life educating the children of Brooklyn.

Mr. Letow's dedication to public education was firmly implanted by his parents. As poor immigrants, his parents were forced to rely upon the public schools for the education and training of their children. Norman Letow was born and raised in Brooklyn. He attended P.S. 247, P.S. 207, James Madison High School and Brooklyn College.

In October 1965, Mr. Letow began his work with the public schools of Brooklyn. He became a laboratory assistant in Halsey Junior High School. Planned initially as a temporary assignment, this contact with young people moved Mr. Letow to remain an educator. During his tenure as a classroom teacher, Mr. Letow taught classes in science and language arts.

In 1984, the community expressed their overwhelming confidence in his leadership ability by appointing him assistant principal of Halsey Junior High. While serving in the capacity of assistant principal, Mr. Letow played an integral role in strengthening the staff development program, revising curriculum models and initiating a school improvement planning committee.

After 3 years of invaluable service, Mr. Letow was appointed principal of Halsey Junior High School. Since Norman assumed the mantle at Halsey, there has been significant improvement in reading, math and writing scores of the students. Because of this demonstrable improvement in the performance of the students, the school has been removed from the list of schools under review. Norman is dedicated to further academic growth of the Halsey students.

CONDOLENCES TO THE FAMILY AND FRIENDS OF RICHARD SCHWARZ

HON. TED WEISS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to inform my colleagues of the death of Richard Schwarz, a noted film archivist from my congressional district and the former owner of the Thalia, an Upper West Side theater venerated by generations of classic movie lovers.

The Thalia Threater, on Broadway between 94th and 95th Streets, had long been a showplace for European classics. But by 1976, when Mr. Schwarz came to New York City, the Thalia had fallen on hard times. He bought and restored the theater in 1977, and it soon became a meeting place for some of the country's foremost film archivists and "buffs."

Mr. Schwarz discovered and gave the U.S. premiers to such celebrated foreign films as "Uncle Vanya" and "Stevie." He is also widely respected for his own "Hollywood Outtakes and Rare Footage." In recent years, he took his phenomenal understanding of classic and foreign films downtown, where he operated the Cinema Village and Thalia Soho Theaters.

Richard Schwarz had a keen sense of our Nation's great heritage in movies, and he gave his talents and artistry back to the American film community in so many ways. I know my colleagues in the House of Representatives join with me in expressing condolences to Richard's family and friends. Their loss will be shared by our entire community.

A SALUTE TO MICHAEL S. LIMB

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to a man who has sought to be a peacemaker, Mr. Michael S. Limb.

Mr. Limb has always been interested in fostering goodwill toward all men. He first displayed his deep commitment to understanding the global village by majoring in international law and politics at St. Paul's University, School of Law in Rikkyo, Tokyo. He continued his interest through his graduate and post-graduate studies where he attended Keio University Graduate School of Law (Tokyo), Duquesne University and Columbia University.

Mr. Limb is the founder of the Black-Asian Society of New York, and the Korean American Citizens Federation. He acquired the inspiration to develop these organizations from his deep belief that in order have success in life one must be comfortable with one's culture and environment while simultaneously respecting and accepting the diversity of other peoples. Mr. Limb has received numerous awards including the outstanding service award from the Korean American Chamber of Commerce, and the distinguished service award from the Commissioner of the New York City Police Department.

PRINCIPAL OF THE YEAR

HON. DON SUNDQUIST

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. SUNDQUIST. Mr. Speaker, there are always people to honor and appreciate, and this particular man should be acknowledged and thanked also. He is being honored for one of the most important jobs in our country: educating our children. Mr. Charles E. Peavyhouse of Hixson, TN, has been chosen as Principal of the Year by the Tennessee Association of Elementary School Principals.

Mr. Peavyhouse is an excellent example of a man who truly cares about the future of our country. He is a leader in the effort to achieve excellence in the education of our children, and he is a well respected man in his community. He has shaped the character and the minds of our future generations, and I would like this honor he has been given to be recognized.

I ask this House to join me in offering this tribute to this great educator, Charles E. Peavyhouse, and I request that the article from Chattanooga News-Free Press, Sunday, September 23, 1990, be entered following my remarks in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

[From the Chattanooga News-Free Press, Sept. 23, 1990]

Former Educator Heading To Washington—Peavyhouse "Principal Of The Year"

Longtime Falling Water School Principal Charles Peavyhouse, who stepped down after the last school term, has been named "Principal of the Year" by the Tennessee Association of Elementary School Principals and will be among honorees from the 50 states recognized in Washington, D.C., next month.

Shirley Lincoln, president of the National Association of Elementary School Principals, said in a letter to Mr. Peavyhouse, "It is a distinct honor to be recognized by your colleagues as one who provides outstanding leadership at the elementary and middle school level and I applaud your accomplishments.

"The program's goal is to give recognition to those principals who set the character and quality of education in the early school years that shape children's future in the classroom and in life."

The Oct. 16–17 activities in Washington at which the principals will be honored include a welcoming reception at the U.S. Department of State, Diplomatic Suite, with Department of State and Department of Education officials, and a tour of the White House, as well as a black-tie dinner.

"I really appreciate the support I have received from Superintendent (Don) Loftis, the support of educators, supervisors and fellow principals in nominating me for this award," Mr. Peavyhouse said. "Of course

I've had an excellent staff and good support from the parents at Falling Water. Without them, I couldn't have accomplished the things that I did.

"Through the years, I've had excellent kids, outstanding students and superior support from the community, from parents and from the staff," he said.

Mr. Peavyhouse was nominated for the honor locally by Sandra Black, director of elementary education in the country schools, and longtime announced his retirement last spring.

Mr. Peavyhouse was selected as the nominee for the state award by the Hamilton County Principals Association.

A native of Rhea County, Mr. Peavyhouse was a teacher and principal at Midway Elementary School in Johnson City, Tenn., before joining the Hamilton County system in 1957 as a teacher and later as principal at Pineville Elementary School.

He was supervisor of attendance and special education in the system's central office from 1961 to 1972, then was at Bachman Elementary School for five years.

Educated at Tennessee Wesleyan and East Tennessee State University, he has a master's degree from George Peabody College at Vanderbilt.

A former Hamilton County Republican Party chairman and activist in party politics here, Mr. Peavyhouse serves as a member of the Tennessee Wildlife Resources Agency and has been in the Army and reserves for a total of 37 years.

He and his wife, Eula Mae, have two daughters, Mrs. Jane Jolley and Mrs. Carol Bieter, and four grandchildren.

CONGRESSIONAL SALUTE TO JERRY O. LANE, OF WAYNE, N.J. BOYS CLUB MAN OF THE YEAR

HON. ROBERT A. ROE

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, it is with the greatest pride and admiration that I rise today to salute a truly outstanding individual from my Eighth Congressional District of New Jersey whose many professional and civic contributions have truly made his community and his State a better place to live.

I am speaking of Jerry O. Lane, of Wayne, NJ, whose deep involvement in his community for several years has earned him the honor of "Man of the Year" by the Boys Club of Paterson. For all he has done, Mr. Lane will be honored at a dinner-dance at the Wayne Manor in Wayne, NJ, on Wednesday, October 25, 1990.

Mr. Speaker, I know that this event will be a source of great pride, not only to Jerry Lane, but to his devoted wife, Johanna; to their two sons Lance and Scott; to his many friends and colleagues who will be on hand Wednesday to honor him; Eugene Babock, president of the Paterson Boys Club; and to Claire Salviano, chairwoman of the Paterson Boys Club Annual Man of the Year Dinner.

Mr. Speaker, Jerry O. Lane, began his career with State Farm Insurance back in 1961 as a claim adjuster. Working his way through the ranks as an employee of State Farm, he became an agent in 1973, and a year later was promoted to agency manager. In 1977, he was made the agency director for the State of Florida. No more than 5 years later, He was promoted again, this time as deputy regional vice president of southern California. Finally in 1986, he assumed his present post as vice president, in the northeast region of the United States.

Mr. Speaker, Mr. Lane has been vigorously active in a wide range of community groups besides the United Way and the Boys Club; including the advisory board of William Paterson College, and the board of the Chilton Hospital Parent Co.

Along with his many activities, Mr. Lane has been a vitally important in leading the United Way of Passaic Valley through a major reorganization which greatly enhanced the image of the agency and dramatically increased the moneys raised. During Mr. Lane's tenure the increased funds translated into new agencies being funded and thousands of additional residents receiving assistance through the United Way.

Mr. Speaker, Jerry Lane's dedication has not been restricted to large regional groups like the United Way. Mr. Lane has always been a major supporter of the Boys Club of Paterson, particularly through the Annual Golf and Tennis Tournament. While visiting the club on one occasion, Mr. Lane found himself deeply impressed by the Boy's Club nutrition program and the fact that they served over 25,000 hot meals annually to some of the needest boys and girls in Paterson. The computer program also attracted his attention because of the compensatory educational assistance provided to boys and girls. Through Mr. Lane's efforts State Farm Insurance donated 4 IBM computers and printers complementing the Apple computers which were already being used in the center.

Mr. Speaker. I appreciate this opportunity to present a brief profile of a man whose many vigorous and unselfish efforts have truly made his community, his State of New Jersey, and our Nation a better place to live. I invite you and our colleagues to join me in saluting an outstanding individual, Mr. Jerry O. Lane, of Wayne, NJ, the 1990 Boys Club of Paterson "Man of the Year."

A SALUTE TO BENNY MENDEZ

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to a man who has spent his career in an effort to prevention of drug abuse, Benny Mendez.

Benny Mendez was born in Moca, Puerto Rico. Married in 1965 to Isabel Navarro, Benny is the father of two children, Nancy (20) and Benjamin (19).

Following service in the United States military during the Vietnam era, Benny attended Fordham University. At Fordham, Benny earned a bachelor's degree and a master's degree. Soon after earning a B.S. degree, Benny began working for the Drug Service Agency Prison Project Program. In 1983, Mendez obtained a position in Community School District 23's Drug Prevention Program. He is currently a teacher of social studies and marketing at Thomas Jefferson High School.

The majority of his life, Benny Mendez has lived and worked in Brownsville. Active in local politics, he was an officer of the Brownsville Community Corporation and a member of the Democratic Political Club. Additionally, Benny serves on many boards, including the Federation of Puerto Rican Organizations of Brownsville, the East New York Community Corporation, PROUD, Inc. of East New York, the Lions Club of East New York and a member of the 54 the A.D. Regular Democratic Organization.

A DOOR OF HOPE IN BROOKLYN

HON. STEPHEN J. SOLARZ

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. SOLARZ. Mr. Speaker, on October 25, a new comprehensive services center for the developmentally and mentally disabled will be opened in Brooklyn. That occasion will mark yet another milestone for an extraordinary service organization: Pesach Tikvah.

Located in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn, Pesach Tikvah, under the leadership of Rabbi Chaim M. Stauber, has dedicated itself to serving the mental health needs of New York's Hasidic community.

This has not been an easy task. Traditional attitudes toward mental illness greatly complicate the delivery of basic services. No community is immune from the strains of contemporary life. For example, a lack of affordable housing has struck New York's Jewish community just as it has afflicted other segments of the population. There are now an estimated 3,000 homeless Jews in New York alone.

The challenge facing Pesach Tikvah has been to offer care for the consequences of the modern world in a manner consistent with traditional attitudes. By melding a sensitivity and understanding of Hasidic values with an impressive degree of professionalism, Pesach Tikvah has managed to serve a previously underserved community with dedication and distinction.

In Hebrew Pesach Tikvah means "a door of hope." For countless individuals over the past 6 years Pesach Tikvah has offered real hope in the form of counseling, access to affordable housing, and assistance in obtaining Government services. Pesach Tikvah's services include a free-standing licensed mental health clinic and day hospital, a sheltered workshop, community residence, a respite-recreation program, and a summer day camp.

Rabbi Stauber, and the entire staff at Pesach Tikvah, are tireless workers and dedicated advocates for those who are most in need. Thanks in large measure to their efforts, a previously unmentionable problem is now a topic of great interest and concern in the community. More than that, real progress toward a solution is being made.

Throughout the many dark and difficult chapters in Jewish history, the tradition of caring for one's neighbor has been both a practical and moral dictum. Nowhere has this noble tradition found a more full and genuine expression than in the work of Pesach Tikvah. Their example should serve as an inspiration to all Americans and should guide the deliberations of this body.

Mr. Speaker, in my 20 years of public service I have been privileged to work with many fine individuals and organizations who gave freely of their talents and energies. Pesach Tikvah ranks among the finest of this remarkable and select group. It is truly a privilege to be able to represent the Williamsburg community in Washington. I am indeed honored to be able to commemorate the dedication of the new Pesach Tikvah Center for the developmentally and mentally disabled.

NIGERIA MOVES TOWARD DEMOCRACY

HON. MERVYN M. DYMALLY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. DYMALLY. Mr. Speaker, I submit, for the record, the complete text of President Babangida's speech, delivered before the organization of African Unity [OAU], during the election of their new chairman in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Included in his message to the African Heads of State were calls for the security of human rights, economic stability, and the substitution of violence with dialog while solving Africa's problems.

President Babangida has embarked on a program to prepare Nigeria for democracy and free elections, by the recent appointment of professional civilian governors to work side by side with the military governors in the 21 States of Nigeria, in order to ensure a smooth transition to a complete civilian administration by 1992.

Additionally, the Office of the Vice President has also been established in place of the Office of Chief of General Staff. The Honorable Augustus A. Aikhomu has been appointed by the President to be his Vice President.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, President Babangida's entire 26 member cabinet consists of professional civilians. I submit the names of the civilian governors as well as the President's cabinet into the RECORD. They are as follows:

Mr. Speaker, as Nigeria celebrates the Anniversary of its 30th Year of Independence, I urge the members of this body to take note of the steps being taken by President Ibrahim Babangida toward the Democratization of Nigeria.

The President's speech follows:

SPEECH BY PRESIDENT BABANGIDA

Mr. Chairman, My Brother Heads of State and Government, Distinguished Secretary-General of the OAU, Your Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen, Let me congratulate you on your election as current Chairman of our Organization. By this decision, this Assembly has entrusted to you the responsibility of providing leadership in our determination to promote freedom, security and development in Africa. We are all persuaded by Your Excellency's efforts to bring about social stability and economic progress in Uganda. With Africa now at the cross-roads, your task will not be easy, I pledge the cooperation of Nigeria.

But your immediate predecessor, our Brother President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt has already begun the process of tackling the major issues which conspire to give Africa an unacceptable image. I salute him.

I also wish to thank the President of the People's Democratic Republic of Ethiopia, Comrade Mengistu Haile-Mariam for his inspiring statement, the wonderful reception he accorded us; and the fraternal hospitality he has put at our disposal since our arrival in Addis Ababa. Mr. Chairman, at last, after a long but heroic struggle, the people of Namibia have finally achieved their freedom. We acknowledge the presence in our midst, today, of our Brother Sam Nujoma, President of the Republic of Namibia, We salute the leaders and the people of Namibia and we wish them success in their efforts to consolidate their independence.

At the same time, I wish to recognise the contributions of Dr. Salim Ahmed Salim, our distinguished Secretary-General, who has brought freshness of ideas and efficiency of style to the conduct of the affairs of the OAU.

Also with us today is that veteran nationalist and symbol of Africa's struggle against racism in South Africa, Dr. Nelson Mandela, Deputy President of the African National Congress (ANC).

GLOBAL SITUATION

Mr. Chairman, today, the world is witnessing rapid and dramatic changes in fixed dogmas, Eastern Europe is breaking loose, from the fetters of ideology, from over-concentration of decision-making in a centralised monolith and from the chains thrown around all freedoms. The movement towards the democratisation of East European societies has begun. Already, there are indications that portend improvements in the quality of life in Eastern Europe and in the patterns of its relations with the rest of the world. In Western Europe, the march to economic and political integration, which began with the Treaty of Rome, will be crowned with a union in 1992. The dream of a united Europe, that is economically strong, politically stable and devoid of all divisive barriers is not now far away.

Countries of Asia and Latin America are forging new patterns of relations among themselves. These have been made possible by the emergence of stable policies to release the creative energies of their peoples. Like Europe, the objective force is to promote peace and security in order to assure national prosperity. The impressive economic achievements of South Korea, Taiwan, Singapore, and Malaysia have confounded all sceptics. Today, Japan is accepted as a dominant voice in all major decision-making in the field of development and international economic co-operation. True, there is no magic to success but hard work. It is well-known that the road to freedom and democracy has not been easy for these countries. But they persevered believing that, in peace and security, they cannot fail. This, then, is the picture of our world in 1990.

Thus, Mr. Chairman, I make bold to say that this should be an object lesson for us in Africa. I say this because, ever since the majority of our countries became independent in the 1960s, we have conducted our lives as though the world owes us a living. We have done very little to change the orientation of the economies designed for us by the colonial administrations to serve their own interests. Naturally, therefore, we are relentlessly exposed to all impulses from metropolitan Europe. As a result, we have become heavily dependent on Europe for our survival. In this unhappy situation, our liberty of action as free peoples, is compromised. With this, we force into the open all kinds of diversions, factionalism—even separatist agitations.

LEADERSHIP IN AFRICA

Mr. Chairman, of all the regions in the world, Africa is the most vulnerable to adversity; because of its relatively weak technological base, low level industrial capacity and the often self-inflicted fragility of its socio-political institutions.

In many parts of the continent, conflicts are raging, causing enormous destruction to lives and property, untold human misery-and generating large-scale refugee problems. It is a matter of profound concern that, while we should be building, we are busy destroying. Instead of collaborating, we are engaged in meaningless and futile antagonisms. And, most unfortunately, we substitute violence for dialogue; discord for concord.

Although the Charter of our Organization provides for a Commission on Mediation, Conciliation and Arbitration, there appears to be lack of political will on the part of member-states to utilize this vital instrument for peace.

We have even tried ad hoc arrangements and regional solutions without success. Nigeria urges a more effective utilization of these mechanisms. And we are willing to support any new initiatives the OAU may evolve in this regard.

In the face of these problems, it may be asked: how are we, as leaders, gearing our peoples, harnessing our resources and strengthening our institutions for life in the next century that is fast approaching? For instance, will our children receive better education, our citizens be better fed and housed and our peoples more free? Will our nations be more stable and at peace? Will human rights be secured and freely enjoyed?

Mr. Chairman, we as leaders of this continent have the obligation to liberate our people from the scourges of hunger, fear and want. If we can achieve that goal, it becomes possible to change the image of Africa as a continent, famous for being perpetually dependent on external charity, with all its implications for our self-respect.

The challenge before us now is to resolve, as leaders, to take the bull by the horns, and assume the true role that destiny and history has imposed upon us. We should collectively gear our ideas and actions as dedicated Africans, prepare to give service to this continent on the basis of principles, without partnership. By perseverance, and genuine commitment, we can re-shape the destiny of our peoples and continent.

SITUATION IN SOUTH AFRICA

Mr. Chairman, just as we pursue, with determination, our efforts to build stable societies in Africa for development and security, we should also continue the struggle to bring to an end apartheid in South Africa. In spite of appearances of change, the racist regime is yet to knock down all the pillars of that obnoxious system. The fight against apartheid is, therefore, far from over. We cannot afford to be complacent. The struggle, therefore, demands our unflinching support.

Our Organization must continue to act with commitment on this issue. We must continue to insist that international pressure, in the form of sanctions against the racist regime, should not be relaxed in the absence of profound evidence of irreversible change. We must continue to insist that a conducive climate for negotiations be created and assured, as enjoined in both the Harare and UN Declarations. We must insist, through unremitting support and vigilance, that the dream of a united, nonracial and democratic South Africa is realised.

SITUATION IN MIDDLE EAST

Like Southern Africa, the Middle East needs peace which has eluded the region for a long time. Lebanon remains a theatre of fratricidal wars sustained by the meddlesome support given to the various factions to the conflict. The frustrations of the people of Palestine is understandable because of lack of progress towards the establishment of their homeland, in spite of the sacrifices made by the Palestine Liberation Organization. There should be no imposed solution. The PLO should be accepted as a principal actor in the United Nations sponsored international conference on the Middle East Question.

AFRICA'S CRITICAL ECONOMIC SITUATION

Mr. Chairman, the general unstable situations in member-states and other political problems of this continent indicate that our Organization has a responsibility to act, and act urgently and decisively. Indeed, it is expected that, with the possibility of the resolution, or at least reduction in the intensity, of some of these political issues, the focus of the OAU should, more and more, be shifted to the critical economic situation of the continent.

In this assembly, and other gatherings, like ECOWAS, we have discussed Africa's economic problems, such as poverty in Africa, unfair terms of trade; continuously declining commodity prices; harsh financial terms and so many more. At every turn, our best efforts have been marginalized by the negative effects of the workings of the world's trading and financial systems. All these external factors have been compounded by our own failures, mistakes and deficiencies. The truth, is that the gap between Africa and the rest of the world, even with other developing regions, is, increasing with every passing day, and every passing year.

None of our countries can survive on its own without effective regional co-operation. If the developed countries can see the need and wisdom for greater co-operation, should there not be infinitely greater reasons for the developing countries of our continent to come together in collaborative ventures? We must show the necessary political will which will facilitate the effective working of the enabling mechanisms and use them to build blocs for attaining the larger objective of an African Economic Community (AEC) as envisaged in the Lagos Plan of Action and the Final Act of Lagos.

Some progress has been made in preparing the treaty for the establishment of the AEC. Still, it is regrettable that ten years after the adoption of the Lagos Plan of Action, the record of its implementation has been unimpressive. There is now an urgent need to resolve all outstanding issues to make the treaty ready for signature and ratification as soon as possible. The treaty should be a key instrument for fostering unity among African states and for relating effectively with the other regions that have organized themselves into blocs. It is an illusion for African countries to hope that they can survive individually in an international environment, dominated by regional economic blocs.

AFRICA'S EXTERNAL DEBT

Mr. Chairman, let me now turn to Africa's debt problem which is a central element of the continent's critical economic situation. The servicing of Africa's external indebtedness, currently estimated at over U.S. dollars 250 billion, has become an intolerable burden, reducing virtually all possibilities of growth and development. This year alone, Africa will lose over U.S. dollars 5.5 billion from a combination of debt service payments, capital flight and unfavorable terms of trade. This massive transfer of resources to the developed countries and financial institutions far outweigh any private investments and concessional loans to the countries of Africa.

To date, in spite of our best efforts and enormous sacrifices to deal with the debt crisis, there has been little or no respite for our economies. Industries in our countries continue to produce well below installed capacities. Social expenditures have had to be curtailed, further intensifying social hardship. The response of the international community to our debt problem has clearly been less than adequate. If African countries are to overcome the debt crisis, any time soon, there will have to be far more vigorous measures to write-off or reduce their debt stock than is currently envisaged under any of the existing plans. In particular, the key provisions of Africa's common position on debt should be taken into account. This was why the Nigerian delegation, during the 25th Session of our Assembly, presented a three-part strategy for dealing with the continent's debt problems. That strategy, in our view, is still very valid, and we commend it, once again, to Africa's creditors and donors.

Furthermore, in view of the nature of the problem and urgency to find durable solution, we are ready to host the OAU international conference which should be adequately prepared with the support of a group of high-level technical experts in the field of money and finance.

CONCLUSION

Mr. Chairman, where do we go from here? Which is the way forward for Africa? When I was here in 1988, I spoke of my vision of Africa, full of vitality to better serve and defend the interests of our peoples. My hope is that human rights and democratic freedoms should triumph in Africa that is confident and full of promise.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Mr. Chairman, I commend the following recommendations for the consideration of this Assembly: Africa must pull together and work in concert; the conflicts which now plague our continent must end; the creative energies of our peoples must be released to promote social and economic progress; undignified notion of Africa as an unstable and corrupt region should not be carried into the next century; the protection of human rights and the liberalization of the political process should underpin our development efforts; Africa needs inspired leadership; the OAU must reform its structures and working methods; the OAU should contribute to development, stability and peace in Africa.

Mr. Chairman, My Brother Heads of State Government, Distinguished Secretary-General of the OAU, Your Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen, if all these can be achieved, there is a ray of hope for Africa in the 1990s and beyond. I thank you.

A SALUTE TO FREDERICK JORDAN

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to salute a man who has rendered exemplary service to the people of New York, Mr. Frederick Jordan.

Mr. Jordan was one of the pioneers in the New York Police Department's Civilianization program. In an era of fiscal restraints, civilian employees render invaluable assistance to the uniformed officers by performing clerical and administrative duties. This assistance permits uniformed officers to devote additional hours to law enforcement duties. In addition to serving as one of the trailblazers of this program, Mr. Jordan was the first African-American civilian to serve as an executive officer of the civilianization program. Today, Mr. Jordan continues his recordbreaking achievements by serving as the only civilian platoon commander/desk supervisor.

Fred Jordan's devotion to duty has led him to be the recipient of many awards including, a certificate by DC 37's Local 1549 for his dedication and the New York City Police Department's 20 Year Achievement Award. During his 20 years of service, Mr. Jordan has received two letters of commendation from detective squads for his outstanding service.

Additionally, as a sign of the respect and trust of his peers, Mr. Jordan serves as the labor representative to the Local 1180 C.W.A.

Mr. Jordan is the father of two daughters and a son, and grandfather to four lovely grandchildren.

CONTINUED FUNDING FOR HISTORIC PRESERVATION FUND IS VITAL TO LOUISVILLE AND JEFFERSON COUNTY AND THE NATION

HON. ROMANO L. MAZZOLI

OF KENTUCKY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend our colleague from Illinois, Chairman SID YATES, who chairs the House Appropriations Subcommittee on the Interior for his work on the fiscal year 1991 appropriations bill which we will be voting on later today.

In particular, I am pleased that he and the other members of the subcommittee have included $34.6 million for the historic preservation fund in the appropriations bill.

The historic preservation fund has provided an important stimulus to the protection and preservation of historic properties in my home district of Louisville and Jefferson County, KY.

Indeed, the historic preservation fund has helped Kentucky accomplish an impressive record of achievement in identifying and developing our historic resources, and I am proud to say that Kentucky has become a leader in the national preservation program. Many individuals back home are responsible for these achievements—Ann Hassett, Leslee Keys, and Richard Jett just to name a few.

Many of these accomplishments would not have occurred were it not for the planning, technical assistance, and financial support made possible through the historic preservation fund. In fact, during the past 9 years, Kentucky has ranked in the top 10 State allocations from this fund.

The historic preservation fund has, in a variety of ways, helped to build partnerships between individuals and organizations, both private and public, and all levels of government, to encourage creative and successful historic preservation projects.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that my colleagues will join me in supporting the historic preservation fund later today.

SESAME STREET'S CHILD CARE PROJECT IN DALLAS

HON. JOHN BRYANT

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. BRYANT. Mr. Speaker, an exciting new development in child care is the Sesame Street Preschool Educational Program—PEP—project now underway in Dallas, TX. Child care providers are being taught to replay program segments from Sesame Street telecasts and use them along with books and other materials to develop the learning abilities of preschoolers.

So far 375 preschoolers in 8 child-care centers and 7 day-care homes are participating in the pilot project, with training for new providers underway at 5 more centers and 8 more family homes. An estimated 40,000 children are now in day care in Dallas County. The project hopes that a majority of those children can be enrolled in the program within the next 2 years.

The project is the result of a 4-way partnership between the Childrens' Television Workshop of New York, producers of Sesame Street, now in its 21st year, Dallas public television station KERA, the Dallas Foundation for Health, Education and Research, led by Mr. Ralph Rogers, and the Child Care Partnership of Dallas.

The project provides each center with a set of Sesame Street Puppet Characters, including Big Bird, Oscar the Grouch, Elmo, Grover, and the Count, for the children to use when they're watching the program. The project's training is aimed at teaching care providers to reinforce the program's curriculum: premath, prereading, writing, child and his world, human diversity, and cognitive organization, plus social interaction and the environment. Especially important is training the care providers to be aware of the great power of storybook reading, and how it can be influential in the children's early development and ability to learn to read.

I hope that future child care legislation considered by Congress will provide Federal support to introduce this very exciting early childhood development Sesame Street PEP project to many other areas. I applaud the partners responsible for starting the PEP program in Dallas. I strongly recommend to those who will be responsible for administering our child care legislation that they encourage this kind of development throughout the Nation. Nothing could be more important than starting our youngest children on the right road to reading and the education they'll need for a better life.

TRIBUTE TO LEONARD BERNSTEIN

HON. BILL GREEN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. GREEN of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commemorate the memory of Leonard Bernstein, the talented conductor and musical director of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, who passed away yesterday at the age of 72. Mr. Bernstein captivated audiences worldwide for more than four decades with his many shows such as "West Side Story," "On the Town," and "Candide," which have become American classics.

Leonard Bernstein was born in Lawrence, MA, on August 25, 1918. He had no formal music training until the age of 10, when he began piano lessons under the instruction of Helen Coates, who immediately recognized his musical talent. By the age of 16, Bernstein was a piano soloist with the Boston Public Schools Orchestra. Soon after, he began studying piano and composition at Harvard University, where he was encouraged to study the art of conducting at the insistence of Dimitri Mitropoulos, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony.

While studying at Tanglewood Music Center, located in the Berkshire Mountains of Massachusetts, Mr. Bernstein became acquainted with Arthur Rodzinski of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, who eventually hired him as an assistant conductor of the 1943–44 season. At the age of 25, Leonard Bernstein was catapulted to success on November 14, 1943, when he substituted for Bruno Walter as the conductor of the New York Philharmonic in a concert broadcast on national radio. During his tenure with the New York Philharmonic, Bernstein toured Asia, South America, and Europe. Mr. Bernstein also performed for audiences in the Soviet Union where he was greeted with a great deal of enthusiasm.

Not only was Leonard Bernstein a talented conductor and pianist, he was also a gifted author, educator, and composer. In 1959, his book, "The Joy of Music," was published and later became a best seller. Between the years 1951 and 1956, he taught music at Brandeis University in Massachusetts, and also gave lectures on the television program "Omnibus," sponsored by the Ford Foundation. It is common belief that the most popular and best of Bernstein's compositions was "West Side Story" which, in 1961, was converted into movie form, and won 10 Academy Awards including Best Picture, though I must confess, that "Candide" is my personal favorite.

As a Representative from New York City, I am proud to be a part of the city which nurtured all of Bernstein's most creative talents. His music truly emulated the city. As Tom Shales so aptly wrote in today's Washington Post, "What we hear in these scores is Bernstein's voice and his inventive brilliance, but also the voice of New York as it used to be, the electric symbol of American vitality, the bustling capital of world culture, Leonard Bernstein's city."

At this time, I should like to join my colleagues in wishing all the best to the family and friends whom Leonard Bernstein left behind. Bernstein's intense love of music was overt to all those he captured by his musical genius. He was quoted as saying, "I can't live one day without hearing music, playing it, studying it or thinking about it." Thank you, Mr. Bernstein, for contributing so much to the world of music.

WE THE PEOPLE . . . BICENTENNIAL COMPETITION OFFERS STUDENTS VALUABLE LESSONS IN CIVICS

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to bring to the attention of my colleagues an excellent educational program which is teaching students how to reap the benefits of citizenship in our constitutional democracy by educating them about the principles of American Government.

Funded by an act of Congress and cosponsored by the Commission on the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution, the We the People . . . programs are administered nationwide through the 435 congressional districts, the 4 trust territories, and the District of Columbia. These educational programs are developed and administered by the Center for Civic Education.

The We the People . . . programs include:

The National Bicentennial Competition on the Constitution and Bill of Rights, a 6-week instructional program on constitutional democracy at the high school level. Following the course of instruction, a nationwide competition is conducted, in which entire classes compete as teams to determine congressional district, State, and national winners.

Congress and the Constitution, a noncompetitive companion program of the National Bicentennial Competition for upper elementary, middle school, and high school classes.

National Historical Pictorial Map Contest, an educational program designed to encourage the study of geography, especially within the context of early American history.

The We the People . . . programs have drawn widespread support from the educational, political, and business communities. In the first 3 years of the 5-year program, over 64,000 teachers and 4,500,000 students have been involved in this indepth study of the Constitution and Bill of Rights. The overwhelming majority of House and Senate Members are actively involved in the support of their programs in their States and congressional districts.

Mr. Speaker, the We the People . . . programs serve as an excellent educational tool to help motivate young people to learn more about the historical development of the Nation, and to gain a deep understanding of the fundamental principles and values of our constitutional democracy. What is particularly impressive about the instructional materials is that they are designed to be useful for students with different ability levels.

As a former teacher and school administrator I realize the importance of programs which successfully stimulate and motivate young minds. The teaching methods incorporated into the texts combine expository and inquiry methods. These methods requires the active participation of the students themselves through the course of instruction and stresses the development of analytic and evaluative skills.

Mr. Speaker, the We the People . . . programs work best when Members of Congress become actively involved by presenting awards, teaching a bicentennial lesson to participating schools, attending competitions, and serving as judges. It is a wonderful opportunity for Members to link up with their respective educational communities, and observe academic achievement on the front-lines of education. I urge every Member of Congress to participate to the extent possible in the implementation of this fine educational program.

RECOGNITION FOR REV. ARTHUR SIMON

HON. DOUG BEREUTER

OF NEBRASKA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, tomorrow, October 16, is the 10th observance of World Food Day, an annual occasion for people worldwide to remind ourselves that millions of people are still hungry. The message of World Food Day is simple: Most hunger is unnecessary. Collectively we have the resources to end this scourge. The task before us is to strengthen our resolve to do so, then devote the necessary human and physical resources to carry out the resolve.

Tomorrow, World Food Day, President Bush will announce the annual Presidential End Hunger Awards. Arthur Simon will receive one of these awards for lifetime achievement. Rev. Arthur Simon, founder and president of Bread for the World, has devoted himself for nearly 20 years to helping Christians understand the opportunity and obligation to invest their citizenship in overcoming hunger, both in the United States and around the world. Nearly all of us in Congress can attest to the effective attention to hunger-related policy decisions by Bread for the World members in our districts. This Member and many of my colleagues join in congratulating Reverend Simon on this well-deserved honor.

Also, tomorrow, on World Food Day, Bread for the World Institute on Hunger and Development, will release its first annual survey of the state of world hunger. That survey "Hunger 1990: the State of the World's Hunger," details the reality of hunger in 45 countries, including the United States. In addition to highlighting the needless character of most hunger, Hunger 1990 addresses causes of hunger and suggests guidelines for public policies which will help overcome hunger.

Each Member's office will receive a copy of Hunger 1990 shortly. This Member comments this report to my colleagues and their staffs.

Mr. Speaker, a brief summary of the principal conclusions of Hunger 1990 is appended.

CONCLUSIONS OF HUNGER 1990

1. Militarization is a primary cause of hunger. Military spending should be reduced in developing and developed nations alike; most of the savings should be redirected to meet human and development needs. A reallocation of just one percent ($3 billion) from the U.S. military budget could more than double U.S. development assistance.

2. National and international development efforts have often overlooked women's needs and skills. Women are among hunger's greatest victims, even though they are the primary food producers in many developing nations. Women should be full participants in the design and execution of programs to reduce hunger and its structural causes.

3. Environmental destruction, rapid population growth, and hunger are closely related. Hungry people have few choices but to live from the resources of a fragile environment. They are often in a "catch-22" situation in having to do further damage to the environment in order to survive. Plans to protect fragile ecosystems must be integrated with plans to meet urgent social needs.

4. Economic growth is an important part of overcoming poverty, but is not enough. Economic growth often increases wealth for the rich without improving the lives of poor and hungry people. National programs for economic and human resource development must target poor people, and ensure their access to basic social services and other productivity-enhancing resources.

5. Progress against hunger and poverty depends mainly on the initiative of poor people and others in the developing countries. Many of the best development projects are initiatives that groups of poor people have undertaken with or without outside help. International assistance should support national programs which build on what people are doing for themselves.

6. Industrial country policies regarding trade, debt and development aid often contribute to poverty and hunger. The international economic policies of the United States and those of other industrialized countries should be reshaped to address the needs of developing nations. For example, U.S. private relief agencies provide almost $2 billion a year in aid to developing countries. Yet if U.S. economic policies cause world interest rates to go up by one percentage point, this adds about $13 billion a year to the debt burdens of developing countries.

The report concludes that the world has the capacity to meet all of its food needs. Those who are concerned about hunger can become involved in two ways: first, through supporting soup kitchens, food banks, and private agencies with well-established track records for relief and development; and second, by advocating changes in government policies that affect hunger in the United States and developing countries.

Hunger 1990 is the first in a series of annual reports on global hunger to monitor the progress of efforts against hunger. Christian Children's Fund and World Concern joined the Bread for the World Institute on Hunger & Development in co-sponsoring the report, with additional support from Catholic Relief Services, Church World Service, Heifer Project International, Lutheran World Relief, and World Vision.

THE RACIAL JUSTICE ACT

HON. RONALD V. DELLUMS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to bring the attention of my colleagues to the recent editorial in the New York Times on the Racial Justice Act which was passed by the House as part of the crime bill.

I oppose the death penalty on the grounds that it is absolutely immoral and that it constitutes cruel and unusual punishment.

Until we are able to abolish the death penalty, it is important to recognize that this ultimate sanction is used as an instrument of punishment disproportionately against people of color. As the New York Times editorial points out, the Racial Justice Act is an important initiative designed to correct this outrageous injustice.

The House must be resolute in its conference with the Senate on this crucial provision of the crime bill.

A LITTLE RACIAL JUSTICE IN THE HOUSE

The House has taken a modest step to combat racism in the administration of the death penalty. It has enlarged its rabid election-year crime bill to include the Racial Justice Act, to allow judges in capital cases to consider whether death sentencing in their jurisdictions displays an unacceptable racial pattern.

Contrary to Bush Administration claims, the measure won't abolish executions; but it may slow them down while courts guard against racial discrimination. If Senate and House conferees adopt the provision, President Bush will have to accept it—or be forced to veto the whole huge crime bill. That will pit the rhetoric of his Justice Department, which unfairly labels the racial section "pro-criminal," against the bill's severe "tough on crime" features the President likes.

The racial justice proposal starts from the principle, always professed but often disregarded, that even guilty murderers should not be executed for racial reasons. The bill would let defense counsel offer proof, for example, that a community executes blacks out of proportion to the murder rate or imposes death for the killing of whites far more often than for the killing of blacks.

Prosecutors could overcome that inference in several ways. For example, if a black defendant faces death for killing a policeman, the state could show that all cop-killers in that county get the chair, irrespective of the race of victim or accused.

Representative James Sensenbrenner of Wisconsin and other opponents of this proposal are the Administration's allies in the effort to broaden the death penalty and narrow access to the Federal courts for condemned prisoners. They argued that considerations of race should not suddenly be injected into the penal law. Why not, considering all the evidence that race is a hidden element in capital sentencing, and not just in the South, where most death sentences are meted out?

Adoption of the Racial Justice Act was a moment of humanity in long House debate. In other respects, members, mindful of the election a month hence, competed shamelessly to endorse the toughest-sounding death laws and civil liberties restrictions.

Like the Senate, the House has produced a prosecutor's shopping list. Yet Republican representatives said the President would nevertheless veto the bill if it included the racial provision. It's hard to believe he would give up so much political red meat to block a little racial justice.

A SALUTE TO BENITO NIEVES

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to a man who personifies the American dream. Benito Nieves has overcome a language barrier and illness to become a leading community activist.

Benito Nieves was born on August 29, 1941, in the beautiful island town of Arecibo, PR. During his early adolescent year, his family migrated to New York City. Although this dramatic change in language and environment could have proven to be an impossible transition, Benito Nieves successfully graduated from Seward Park High School prior to the advent of bilingual education.

Due to his ability to communicate fluently in English and Spanish, Benito won his first job as a bilingual clerk at Beth Israel Hospital. His ambition and interest in community action motivated him to enlist his services in the first antipoverty programs in Brownsville and East New York. He quickly moved up the employment ladder to supervisory and administrative positions. In addition to fostering the economic development of others, Benito developed his entrepreneurial skills into several thriving business concerns including a restaurant, a grocery, and a construction business.

However, despite his commercial success, Benito developed an asthmatic condition which necessitated his relocation to a warmer climate in 1976. For the next 5 years, he lived in Florida, Arizona, California, Nevada, and Mexico before returning to New York City in 1981. He worked for the New York City Department of Transportation for a short period before turning to employment in the political arena. Again, Benito quickly rose through the ranks. Beginning as a campaign worker, he quickly became a community aide. Currently, Nieves serves as a special assistant and liaison for Hispanic affairs on the staff of Congressman EDOLPHUS TOWNS.

Benito is married and is the father of four children. Benito is grateful for this recognition of his longtime work in the communty and his efforts to bring people together in action to make things better for everyone.

A TRIBUTE TO LEONARD WOODWORTH

HON. SAM GEJDENSON

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to Leonard "Woody" Woodworth, a constituent in my district, and a resident of my hometown of Bozreh, CT.

This past July, Woody had the unique opportunity to be reunited with a face from the past. Woody Woodworth served as a platoon sergeant in the 191st Tank Battalion during World War II. On April 29, 1945, the 191st Tank Battalion entered and liberated the Dachau Concentration Camp. For some, the memory of 191st Tank Battalion will never be forgotten. One such person is Stephen Ross who now resides in Boston, MA. At this year's 50th year anniversary celebration of the 191st Tank Battalion, Woody and Steve were reunited again after 45 yerars. A boy of 14 at the time, Steve vividly recalled the day Woody and his fellow battalion members entered the Dachau Camp. This emotional reunion can best be summarized by the remarks Steve Ross made on this occasion. I commend to your attention these remarks which I believe eloquently express the emotions of those whose lives were touched by the men of the 191st Tank Battalion:

JULY 30, 1990.

DEAR BROTHER, WOODY: I would like to express appreciation and gratitude to you the 191st Tank Battalion for your valiant effort during the Liberation of the Dachau Concentration Camp, April 29, 1945.

Sharing your 1990 Reunion and being with all of you was the most joyous time I have ever experienced. You deserve so much praise and credit for all your sacrifices and dedication during W.W.II. As our liberators, you will always be remembered by the camp survivors for your gallantry and for the hope and compassion you provided to us.

I hate to think of what would have happened to us if you had not come at the time you did. You the G.I. Joes spoke the first kind words to us in years. You held in your arms our living skeletons, too weak to walk, to eat, or to live. You gave us our first bites of decent food. You provided medical help as best you could. You reached out to us with no reservations. To the camp survivors G.I. Joe came from Heaven. You left your homes and families and at times you were also hungry, cold and disillusioned. We owe you all our gratitude, recognition and our acknowledgement. It was an honor and a privilege to have been in the company of such faithful and true Americans.

When I first saw you in Louisville, I immediately envisioned in my mind the way you were 45 years ago. I could see your faces, your helmets, your uniforms, your boots and your weapons hanging on your body. You looked rough and tough and yet you showed so much empathy. You left an indelible mark on a fourteen year old boy that can never be erased. You were the pride of your nation, you preserved the Republic, your civilization, your religious freedom and you set free a suffering humanity. You fought bravely and defeated the most vicious and evil empire the world has ever known.

You and I, who saw it all, must forever be willing to bare witness to the authenticity of the Holocaust, which was perpetrated by a so called civilized nation. I will be forever grateful to each and everyone of you for saving my life, the life of my brother, and the lives of fellow camp victims.

You gave me an opportunity to become a productive human being in this great country of ours.

Faithfully yours,

BROTHER STEVE.

A SALUTE TO THE DELAWARE COUNTY WOMEN'S COMMISSION

HON. CURT WELDON

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. WELDON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the Delaware County Women's Commission. This organization has played a vital role in the lives of thousands of Delaware County women in the past 5 years.

The Delaware County Women's Commission was established by resolution of the Delaware County Council on October 15, 1985. It had been preceded by a 15-month study conducted by the Delaware County Task Force on Women and Girls. This 35-member task force, which had met with relevant groups and individuals in the community to gather information, evaluated how the needs of women and girls were being met within the county, identified unmet needs, and drafted recommendations to the county council as to how those needs could be better met.

The task force selected six broad areas for its study: family issues; health, housing and social services; jobs, employment and education; crimes against women and girls; legal and legislative; and networking. Acknowledging that this study could not be all inclusive, the task force identified a prioritized subset of issues within each grouping for investigation. The findings were summarized in a report which included more than 100 recommendations. Most, if not all, of the recommendations could be implemented within current budgetary limits, were within the authority of county council to implement, and would significantly improve the lives of many women and girls through their implementations.

Recognizing that these recommendations were but a starting point, it was the unanimous recommendation of the task force members that a permanent women's commission be created to continue the work of the task force. The study report was presented formally to the Delaware County Council on September 30, 1985. The Delaware County Women's Commission was established 15 days later.

The commission is mandated by the county council to assess the needs of women and girls in Delaware County. Its charter states that the commission "will advise and counsel the county council on the issues of public policy and their impact on women; on ways to protect and promote the equal rights of women in Delaware County; on the elimination of gender based discrimination which may exist in the county government; on methods to ensure equal consideration for employment and policymaking opportunities within the government of Delaware County; and the need for policies and programs in Delaware County agencies and departments to improve the status of women."

The commission believes that its special strength lies in bringing together community members with diverse and often conflicting interests on issues of concern to women and girls in Delaware County. Where no one organization or individual can successfully tackle a problem, the commission stands in a unique position to invite all interested parties to share solutions.

The Delaware County Women's Commission selects a project to focus attention on each year. The first major area to which focus was directed was child support enforcement. Custodial parents were at best less than satisfied with the effectiveness of the support enforcement system; at worst there were thousands of cases with no activity, and many women and children dependent on the welfare system for survival. The public perception of the county and its committment to this constituency could not have been bleaker. County council, the county courts and the Domestic Relations Office received much negative attention in the media.

The county looked to the commission as a vehicle to tackle what appeared to be an insurmountable problem. The commission established a child support enforcement task force. After laying a strong foundation through discussions with key advisors and holding public and private hearings with consumers, the commission worked closely with the courts, the district attorney's office, the office of domestic relations, the family law committee of the county bar association, representatives of various women's organizations and members of the community to review and make recommendations for improvements to the local child support laws.

Seventy-two recommendations grew out of the task force findings and were the heart of its report which was presented to the county council in September 1987. Since that time, the commission has worked intensively with a team appointed by the President Judge to implement recommendations.

The commission has recently submitted its final report closing out this project. It cited the cooperative effort which led to the full implementation of nearly all of the report recommendations and the major improvements which have been achieved in the local system. A separate office of child support enforcement was established to provide legal representation of welfare and low income parents in the preparation of petitions to increase or modify child support orders and in enforcement of awards and collection of back payments. During its first year, OSE represented over 3,000 custodial parents in hearing before masters and judges. The greater portion of costs involved in this operation are IV–D reimbursable—State moneys, requiring very little infusion of county dollars. The domestic relation office if functioning at a higher level of productivity, providing a better quality of service, and generating much more money for the support of children in Delaware County. The increased level of compliance achieved has been both dramatic and certain. The Women's commission believes that the overall current quality of child support enforcement is exceeded nowhere else in the commonwealth. Clearly, child support enforcement in Delaware County is now a priority, and is seen by the public as such.

This local effort has been recognized across the country by the National Association of Commission of Women, Governing Magazine—a national publication of the Congressional Quarterly—and the nationally syndicated TV program, Inside Edition. Delaware County has been cited as a model for efforts in other States.

The commission is currently in the midst of an adolescent pregnancy prevention project, again bringing together groups holding diverse views but offering a platform from which they can work towards a common goal. This project has the support of people in the public and private sectors; health, education, social service, and community leaders; and those on each end of the pro-life/pro-choice spectrum.

A new project being developed at this time is child care. As one who has participated in child care debates in Congress, I am aware that this is an important topic across the country and the State, it is no less so in Delaware County.

In addition to its special projects, the commission facilitates activities such as the Women's Leadership Exchange, a quarterly social forum for women in various leadership positions to come together for support, to share common concerns, and to provide input into the commission processes; and the talent bank which is used to identify qualified female candidates for appointment to policy making bodies in the public and private sectors. The commission also plans special events, for example, Women's History Month, which includes an annual creative writing competition in the public and non-public schools, and which culminates in an annual Women of Achievement reception.

The commission holds seats on a number of other bodies, such as the Delaware County Human Services Partnership, the Private Industry Council, the Girls Coalition of Southeastern Pennsylvania, the Delaware County Community College's New Beginnings program, and many others.

The Delaware County Women's Commission is made up of a hard working and dedicated group of 11 volunteers. It makes good use of the wealth of interest and expertise in the community by working with the many people who serve on various committees and task groups of the commission. The commission is still in its early years, but already it has made its mark all across Delaware County.

In the 5 years since its founding, The Delaware County Women's Commission has been a positive force in the lives of many women in our area. I am pleased to recognize this fine organization on its fifth anniversary. Everyone in Delaware County should be proud to salute this outstanding group.

A SALUTE TO ASSEMBLYMAN CLARENCE NORMAN

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to a man who has devoted his life in service to the people of Brooklyn, Assemblyman Clarence Norman.

A native of Brooklyn, NY, Clarence Norman, Jr., was born August 25, 1951. He received his high school diploma from Erasmus Hall High School in Brooklyn and graduated cum laude from Howard University in 1972 receiving a B.A. degree in political science. Norman later went on to attend St. John's University Law School where he was a recipient of a Martin Luther King, Jr., Scholarship for Academic Excellence and a 3-year grant from the Council of Legal Educational Opportunities. He graduated in 1975 with a juris doctor degree.

Mr. Norman began his professional career in 1976, as legal counsel to the New York State Assembly Subcommittee on Probation and Parole. Later going on to work with the Kings County district attorney's office, he served for a period of 5 years as a trial attorney in the felony bureau. Norman left the district attorney's in 1982 to run for the New York State Assembly. He was elected to the New York State Assembly in 1982.

An active member of the community, Assemblyman Norman is involved in numerous community activities and has served on the board of many community organizations including, the board of directors of the Bedford-Stuyvesant Lawyers Association; first vice president of the 77th Precinct Community Council in Brooklyn; chairman of the Housing Committee for Community Planning Board No. 8 and is founder and president of the Independent Democrats of Crown Heights.

Within his district, Norman has vigorously sought to secure funding for vitally needed economic development, housing rehabilitation, and commercial revitalization programs. A fervent advocate of community empowerment, Norman annually sponsors comprehensive senior citizen and youth festivals.

Clarence Norman serves on the assembly committees of codes, energy, election law, children and families, higher education, governmental operations and the chairman of the assembly subcommittee on the homeless.

THE NUCLEAR ENERGY WEAPON

HON. AUSTIN J. MURPHY

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. Speaker, there is no question that recent events in the Middle East have exposed our energy security vulnerabilities and the lack of clear direction on the energy policy front.

The fact is that we have drifted dangerously away from achieving any kind of energy independence, both because of apathy and the inability to achieve a consensus behind a workable national energy strategy.

In the absence of strong national leadership in the energy area, in many quarters we have lost sight of the big picture. In light of these concerns, I was pleased that President Bush in his recent address to a joint session of Congress underscored the need to get America's energy house in order.

While there are a variety of solutions which many of us in the Congress are assessing, it is obvious that we must move away from dependence on foreign energy fuels and increase our reliance on secure domestic energy resources. As the President said, we "must take advantage of our energy sources across the board: coal, natural gas, hydro, and nuclear. Our failure to do these things has made us more dependent on foreign oil than ever before."

In assessing this mix of domestic energy resources, it is important that we not overlook the tremendous potential of nuclear energy to contribute more. This potential for nuclear energy as a strategic energy option is made very strongly in a recent opinion piece by John Sillin, an economist with the Management Analysis Co. I would like to commend this article to my colleagues as we survey the energy roadmap ahead.

Mr. Sillin's opinion piece from the Wall Street Journal follows:

[From the Wall Street Journal, Aug. 23, 1990]

THE NUCLEAR ENERGY WEAPON

(By John O. Sillin)

Iraq's invasion of Kuwait has brought into sharp focus the need by the U.S. to limit its dependence on Midwest oil. If the U.S. is to continue electrifying the nontransportation energy sector and insulating itself from the vagaries of politics in the Persian Gulf and other hot spots, rapid growth in applying nuclear energy, an economically and environmentally sound alternative threatened by domestic politics, must continue. This is particularly true if the Clean Air Act is signed into law.

Over the past 20 years, the increased use of nuclear energy and coal in the production of electricity has gradually weaned Americans from over-dependence on oil in the nontransportation sector. (Unfortunately, the transportation sector is liquid-fuel-dependent and has increased its petroleum consumption by more than 20% since the first oil embargo in 1973.) While total energy requirements have increased 13.6% since 1973, oil consumption has decreased 40% in homes and small businesses and 10% in factories—despite an increase in economic output of more than 50%.

While petroleum use was declining in these sectors, electricity usage increased by 67% and 33%, respectively. This improved life style, spurred economic growth, increased energy efficiency, and decreased exposure to the Saddam Husseins of the world.

And where was this electricity coming from? Between 1973 and 1989, electricity production from nuclear power increased 525% and from coal 84%. Though petroleum usage by utilities has recently turned up, it is still less than half its 1973 level.

THE CLEAN AIR ACT

With economic growth in the 1990s generally forecast to average between 2.5% and 3% a year, the Department of Energy, Edison Electric Institute and other recognized authorities are forecasting electricity demand to increase at similar rates. At 3% growth, approximately 180,000 megawatts of new generating capacity are required in addition to that which is under construction and for which firm planning commitments exist; if growth averages 2.5%, 140,000 megawatts are required. This is equivalent to 140 to 180 large power plants. These needs exclude the possibility that some 60,000 megawatts of aging fossil-fired plants may need to be retired. If we are not to increase the use of oil, this leaves coal, natural gas, and solar and nuclear power as alternatives.

The Clean Air bill (now in conference committee, versions having passed the Senate and the House) would sharply cut coal's ability to meet these increased power needs. According to the act, sulfur dioxide emissions must be reduced by more than half, to 8.9 million tons a year by the year 2001. Nitrogen oxides are also to be halved, to 2.5 million tons a year.

The Edison Electric Institute estimates the annual cost of compliance to be $5 billion to $7 billion. This will increase electricity rates by about 6%; but in regions that burn high sulfur coal, the increase could be as high as 20%. Some 250 existing power plants will be affected. Operating costs at some plants could increase by as much as 50%, leading to closure of the plants. Other plants will see degraded operations and lower efficiency. Also, new clean coal power production technologies may not be available until around the year 2000. Thus, maintaining electricity output from coal power plants will be a daunting task, much less increasing production to meet growth in electricity use.

Natural gas is the cleanest-burning fossil fuel, and except for modest imports from Canada, it is produced domestically. But, until now, natural gas has been used by electric utilities in power plants that operate only during periods of peak power demand. Only where natural gas could be reliably accessed in large quantities, such as on the Gulf Coast, is it used to meet day in, day out electricity needs. In the rest of the country, obtaining a natural gas contract that guarantees firm delivery at a stable price for periods of 10 years or more is difficult to nearly impossible. Thus, using natural gas to meet the bulk of the electricity needs identified earlier entails significant business risks.

These risks will probably increase, in part due to the Clean Air Act. First, the demand for natural gas among industrial customers will increase as they reduce their use of dirtier-burning oil and coal. Second, natural gas and oil prices are aligned because of their direct substitutability. If oil prices continue their recent rise, gas prices will follow. Third, there is a delivery problem because pipeline capacity needs to be expanded, to move gas farther and to deliver it to power plants.

Solar, biomass and other renewable forms of energy are not yet practical on the scale needed to satisfy the increased electricity needs the U.S. will experience in the 1990s. In 1989 these forms of energy satisfied less than 0.5% of total U.S. electricity requirements, and, according to Energy Department figures, no growth in output has occurred since 1985.

Therefore, by the process of elimination, the U.S. should be headed down the path of increased use of nuclear power. Last year, nuclear power plants generated 19.1% of U.S. electricity requirements. If these plants had not been operating, an additional 275 million tons of coal or 800 million barrels of oil would have been burned. Sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxides emissions would have been five million tons and two million tons higher, respectively, and our oil import bill would have been some $5 billion higher.

The U.S. has realized significant benefits from its investment in nuclear energy. Cumulative cost savings from operating nuclear vs. fossil power plants exceed $40 billion since about 1970. Also, using cost assumptions contained in the proposed Clean Air Act, the cumulative value of reduced emissions resulting from nuclear plant operations is estimated to be more than $80 billion. In addition, according to the U.S. Council for Energy Awareness, since 1973 nuclear energy has displaced four billion barrels of oil, saving $115 billion on our import bill.

Other unquantified benefits include the fact that nuclear power plants emit no particulates. They do not produce noise. They do not require large numbers of wells or mines to produce fuel or barges, pipelines or trains to transport it. Also, nuclear fuel wastes can be stored at compact locations. Given concerns over oil spills, refinery explosions and despoiled lands, these are benefits worth acknowledging.

But perhaps the largest benefit is that a vibrant nuclear power program helps provide us with the will to deal with thugs like Saddam Hussein. The U.S. has taken the lead in organizing the world to thwart additional acts of aggression and butchery by him. The leadership might have been less forthcoming if our non-transportation sectors were dependent on Persian Gulf oil.

Unfortunately, just as a new wave of nuclear power plant construction should be starting, it is stagnant. As a result, oil consumption by the utilities, which had been declining for years, recently turned up—increasing by 32% since 1987.

THE SHOREHAM EXAMPLE

Much of the blame for this resides with short-sighted federal and state regulatory policies. Of greatest immediacy, state rate regulators must encourage, not thwart, utility investment in nuclear energy (the Shoreham plant's experience in New York state is perhaps the most egregious example); federal regulators must stop dawdling with regard to licensing new nuclear plant designs; and the Energy Department must effectively manage the nuclear fuel waste storage program, for which it is responsible (a program funded by the nuclear utility industry).

The Commercial nuclear industry must also take aggressive action, including improving the industry's spotty operating record. While all U.S. nuclear plants are safe and operations improved dramatically in the 1980s, there are still plants that under-perform, and they always make the headlines. The nuclear industry must also be more aggressive in stating the need for new plants and planning for their installation. In a word, leadership is required.

In the late 1970s, Carter administration policy called for nuclear power to be "the energy option of last resort." This unfortunate and inept policy still manifests itself in how the nuclear industry is regulated and perceived. It must be immediately reversed. Failure to do so risks undermining our most fundamental political values.

THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF WSTV-AM RADIO IN STEUBENVILLE, OH

HON. DOUGLAS APPLEGATE

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. APPLEGATE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to ask my distinguished colleagues to join me in recognition of the 50th anniversary of WSTV–AM, Radio in Steubenville, OH.

Unlike many other radio stations, WSTV has been under the same ownership since its debut on the air in November of 1940. Furthermore, it has had only four general managers in its 50 year history. Current vice president and general manager, William B. Chesson, joined the station in late 1959 and has twice served as general manager. Mr. Chesson also served as group manager for WSTV's parent, Associated Communications Corp. for 1979 through 1984.

Because WSTV has always been dedicated to the community, it is marking its golden anniversary through significant investment in the Steubenville area. This effort includes a challenge posed to others in the business and industrial sectors to join in the quest to provide funding to worthwhile organizations.

WSTV has supplied resources for the painting of a mural on the Wall of the chamber of commerce building, as part of Steubenville's "City of Murals" project. WSTV met the need of the local urban mission in acquiring matching funds to upgrade a homeless facility. WSTV also provided moneys to both the local Retired Seniors Volunteer Program and Adult Literacy Council, so they could purchase new office equipment. The station is planning a playground facility in one of Steubenville's local parks, as well as the front wall of the reconstructed Fort Steuben on the banks of the Ohio River.

WSTV has contributed generously to the community of Steubenville as their way of saying thank you to the area residents for allowing the station to be a part of their lives for half a century.

Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to honor WSTV–AM Radio on the celebration of 50 years of dedication to the Steubenville community.

A SALUTE TO SALLY B. HERNANDEZ-PINERO

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to a woman who is a model of achievement and commitment, Sally B. Hernandez-Pinero.

On December 8, 1989, Mayor David Dinkins appointed Sally B. Hernandez-Pinero to the post of deputy mayor for finance and economic development. Although this appointment is her most recent achievement, it is one in a series of outstanding accomplishments. Ms. Hernandez-Pinero had served as commissioner of the city of New York's Office of Financial Services and chairman of the Financial Services Corp. [FSC] since January 1988. The Financial Services Corp. of New York City is a not-for-profit organization which serves as the financing arm for all of the city's economic development efforts. Ms. Hernandez-Pinero also serves as chairman of the city's Industrial Development Agency, which is administered by FSC.

Ms. Hernandez-Pinero was appointed Manhattan deputy borough president in January 1986 and served in that position for 2 years. As deputy borough president, Ms. Hernandez-Pinero had primary responsibility for representing Manhattan at the board of estimates. Prior to that appointment, Ms. Hernandez-Pinero served as general counsel to the State of New York Mortgage Agency where she was responsible for bond issues. Before joining the staff of the New York State Mortgage Agency, she was associate counsel for the South Bronx Development Organization and a staff attorney for the Bedford Stuyvesant Community Legal Services Corp.

In addition to a distinguished career, Ms. Hernandez-Pinero has found time to become involved in community activities including service on the board of directors of the Council of Industrial Development Bond Issuers, the New York State Economic Development Council, and Marymount College's board of trustees. Ms. Hernandez-Pinero has also served on two New York State regents task force educational panels.

Ms. Hernandez-Pinero was born on February 12, 1953. She is a 1977 graduate of the New York University School of Law and a cum laude graduate of Wesleyan University. She resides in the Bronx with her husband, Hector, and two sons, Justin and Eric.

TRIBUTE TO THE "IN TOUCH" PROGRAM

HON. CHARLES B. RANGEL

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, almost 4 million American service men and women served in Vietnam. More than 58,000 were killed, and more than 250,000 were seriously wounded. Many more are still missing today. Consequently, there are over 43 million Americans—families, friends, and coworkers—whose lives were directly and irrevocably touched by the Vietnam war.

The true cost of this war is staggering, but not just in terms of dollars and cents, or in terms of the lives lost. There are millions of Americans who continue to pay the tremendous price of this war, and must struggle daily to reconcile and to heal.

To assist in the healing process, the Friends of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, a nonprofit educational group, have started a program called "In Touch." Utilizing a computerized data manaagement system, this group of volunteers assists people in their search for others who knew someone who served in Vietnam. This program was started in direct response to the many calls and letters the Friends received that said: "If I could only find * * *," "I need to find his family so I can keep my promise * * *," "I just want to talk to someone who was with him * * *." "Whatever happened to * * *?" As a result of the "In Touch" program, brothers and sisters, parents, and wives of the deceased or missing have had the opportunity to fully express their grief and share their experiences. Sons and daughters searching for information about the father they never knew well, if at all, have begun to share their special needs and put the puzzling pieces of their lives in place. The "In Touch" program was introduced to the public this year on Memorial Day at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, DC.

I commend the Friends of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial and others for extending the healing legacy of "In Touch" free of charge to the more than 7,000 participants of the 20th Annual Congressional Black Caucus Legislative Weekend held September 26–30, 1990, in Washington, DC. Thousands of African-Americans from around this Nation interacted with this program while it was on exhibit in Exhibit Hall at the Washington Hilton Hotel, and in the armed services hearing room in the Rayburn House Office Building. Hundreds of new names were entered into the "In Touch" data base, and scores of new contacts were initiated.

"In Touch" is an important part of the healing process for the millions of Americans affected by the Vietnam war. Mr. Speaker, I urge all of my colleagues to see "In Touch" at another national event planned for Veterans Day at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. Thank you.

TRIBUTE TO WILLIAM "BILL" LUCIUS

HON. DOUGLAS H. BOSCO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. BOSCO. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize Col. William R. "Bill" Lucius and to relate the numerous contributions made by him to the citizens of the first congressional district and the United States of America. As a tribute to his many years of community service, the California State Senate and Assembly have resolved that a portion of State Highway Route 101 in Northern Sonoma County be named in his honor.

William "Bill" Lucius served over 24 years in the U.S. Marine Corps. He attained the rank of colonel and holds numerous citations and medals. After his retirement from military life, he was elected councilman for the city of Healdsburg, CA, served numerous terms as a council-member and eventually became mayor. In fact, Bill was honored as Healdsburg's Mayor Emeritus in 1988, a telling reflection of the respect and love he commands throughout the community.

Bill has dedicated himself to improving mass transit ever since retiring from an already illustrious career. In 1971, he was appointed to represent Sonoma County on the then newly formed Metropolitan Transportation Commission, which oversees transportation planning and financing for the 9-county San Francisco Bay Area. He is its longest serving member, past chair of the commission and current chair of its legislation and public affairs committee.

Bill's cunning and his Marine's straightjawed approach to problem solving has become part of local legend. "I never lost a vote," he once remarked. That doesn't mean he's always had his way; it means he's never been surprised at the tally once he prepared to pound his gavel.

From 1969 to 1978, Bill served as a director of the Golden Gate Bridge, highway and transportation district, where he helped design a multi-model transportation system for the San Francisco-to-Marin County corridor that includes bus and ferry service. Former President and then-Gov. Ronald Reagan appointed Bill to the State transportation board in 1973, where he served as its chairman until 1977. In addition, Bill has held numerous other transportation-related positions over the years and in 1984 he was the recipient of an outstanding public service award from the Federal Urban Mass Transportation Administration.

Over the years, Bill developed an interest in fine wines. His reputation as a connoisseur means that dinner guests are assured of being served a selection of rare and pallet-pleasing vintages. Bill's collection is a result of his many world travels; coupled with persistence. Additionally, residing in Healdsburg means that the world-renowned Napa and Sonoma Valleys are within an hour's drive. This means that Bill and his lovely wife May, often have the opportunity to visit some of the world's finest wineries.

Mr. Speaker, the impact Bill Lucius has made in the area of mass transportation is far-reaching and well-deserving of public attention. The legislature of California has already expressed its gratitude toward Mr. Lucius for his unselfish devotion to the North Coast. It gives me great pleasure to add my voice to those who salute William Lucius for his outstanding achievements.

UNITED STATES BIG LOSER IF URUGUAY ROUND FAILS

HON. BILL FRENZEL

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, the Journal of Commerce referenced today a study by the Stern Group, which estimates that the U.S. economy will lose $400 billion throughout the 1990's if the Uruguay round ends in failure. This enormous figure includes lost export opportunities in larger markets created by a successful trade agreement, and increased protectionist measures erected against the U.S., should our international trade disciplines not be expanded during the trade talks.

All of us have heard plenty from groups which would seek to oppose a Uruguay round agreement if it does not achieve certain results. It is rare when we hear someone reminding us of the consequences should an agreement not be achieved, or if the Congress chooses not to approve implementing legislation due to a less than desirable outcome in one particular area.

While all of us would like GATT rules that protect our own laws and interests, it is important to remember that this is a multilateral exercise. There will be winners and losers. We must look at the good of the overall agreement rather than committing ourselves to oppose the agreement, if one or two areas do not meet our expectations.

HUNGER STRIKE IN THE CITY OF KIEV

HON. C. CHRISTOPHER COX

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, on October 2, in the Ukrainian city of Kiev, a group of some 100 students protesting continued Communist rule began a hunger strike in, of all places, the city's Plaza of the October Revolution. The students set up a tent city within a cordoned area on the plaza and promised to continue the hunger strike "to the end" unless the Ukrainian people's demands for genuine democratic reforms and political self-determination are met.

Mr. Speaker, let this hunger strike serve notice that the days of monolithic Communist rule are numbered.

These brave students are not about to back down. Their courage, inner strength, and determination are characteristic of a long-suffering people who—having endured decades of inhuman oppression at the hands of Lenin, Stalin, and those who followed them—have finally had enough.

The Ukrainian people's quiescence to Communist tyranny ended in 1988, when crowds of as many as 200,000 began to gather in unsanctioned and often brutally repressed rallies for freedom. Today, their perseverance sends yet another forceful message to those few remaining Communists rulers that the yearning for freedom and independence cannot be suppressed by armed force.

Throughout the darkest years of Communist oppression, we in the West have endeavored to help those behind the Iron Curtain keep alive the flame of freedom. The collapse of the Berlin Wall and the changes that have taken place over the last year have shown us that today this flame burns strongly and brightly. As President Reagan put it, "you cannot kill an idea." Through their peaceful, patient, yet determined and unyielding opposition to Marxist-Leninist tyranny, the Ukrainian people will soon attain their long-denied and long-deserved liberty. Mr. Speaker, looking forward to that day, the people of the United States of America will continue to stand shoulder to shoulder with them.

TRINITY EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH OF SHAMOKIN, PA, CELEBRATES 150TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. PAUL E. KANJORSKI

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, on October 20, the congregation of the Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church in Shamokin, PA, will be celebrating its 150th anniversary.

Started in 1840 as a preaching point in the local schoolhouse, the Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church was formally organized in 1845 by Rev. Monroe J. Alleman.

In 1854, the Trinity sponsored a college, the Shamokin Collegiate Institute. The college functioned for 4 years, but closed when it failed to receive the support of the Susquehanna Synod of the Lutheran Church.

Not deterred, a Sunday school was established in 1858 which enrolled 100 students. Soon after a ladies' aid society was formed and, I am pleased to add, still functions today making quilts for the support of the church.

Following the Civil War in the summer of 1865, ground was broken for the church building. The first service was held in the unfinished building on January 20, 1867, and the formal dedication was on August 11, 1867. Trinity Church is the oldest surviving church in Shamokin.

Rev. William E. Fischer was called to Trinity in 1893 and served for 42 years. During his tenure, he composed a hymn first published under the name "Shamokin," but is now known worldwide as "Laus Regis." During Reverend Fischer's pastorate many of the finishing touches were added to the church. A brass pulpit and lectern were secured, a brass cross was added, and a 550-pipe Moller organ was installed.

Currently under the direction of Rev. Alfred J. Bashore, the Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church continues to serve the Shamokin community and provide spiritual leadership. Over its 150-year history more than 1,000 weddings and 1,800 baptisms have been performed there and I am sure there will be thousands more for many years to come.

HONORING JUDGE ROBERT J. MALANG

HON. ELIOT L. ENGEL

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, on October 18, 1990, the Enrico Fermi Cultural Center will be honoring one of the Bronx's most outstanding civic leaders. On this date, Judge Robert J. Malang will be presented with the First Annual Fermi Award. This award is being given to him to acknowledge and thank him for his service to the community, both through his professional life and his personal endeavors.

Since the time of his graduation from Fordham Law School, Robert Malang has dedicated his life to the promotion of justice through various appointments. Among these include his service as the Confidential Assistant to the Board of Justices of the Bronx Supreme Court, Deputy Superintendent of Insurance of the State of New York, and Housing Court Judge of the Bronx Civil Court.

In receiving this award, Judge Malang is most notedly being recognized for his community service to the Belmont section of the Bronx. Judge Malang was dedicated to the enhancement of the Belmont area by providing better services and heightening the spirit and cultural vitality of the neighborhood. It was due to his efforts that the Belmont Community Center was founded in 1943 where he also served as president. Also, his expression of concern for the welfare of the family is seen through his effort to provide better services to the community as vice chairman of the Belmont Community Day Care Center.

Judge Malang strove to enhance the cultural pride and highlight the contributions Italian-Americans have given us through his Chairmanship of the Enrico Fermi Cultural Center in the Belmont Public Library. His dedication to the community was even noted by the Italian Government in September 1982 when he was decorated for his fine work in the Italian-American community activities and conferred the title of Cavalier. Judge Malang sought to instill a family identity in the Belmont community and we thank him for his tireless efforts to make the Bronx a better place to live.

THE 70TH ANNIVERSARY OF HARTNELL COLLEGE

HON. LEON E. PANETTA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Hartnell College on the occasion of the 70th anniversary of its 1920 founding.

I am a firm believer in the principle of equal educational opportunity for all Americans and feel that education is one of the best investments we can make in the future of our country. I am pleased to know that Hartnell College continues this tradition of excellence in collegiate educational services in Salinas, and has done so for 70 years.

Established in 1920, the Board of Trustees of Salinas Union High School District founded Salinas Junior College, which was renamed Hartnell College in 1948. Hartnell does indeed trace its name back to the first school in California in 1834, and is one of the oldest junior colleges in the State of California. The opening of such junior colleges was part of a movement begun in Chicago in the 1890's, and then led by California in the first three decades of this century. Junior colleges played a vital role in education. By 1930, California had 35 junior colleges enrolling 13,392 students, which was about half the total public higher education enrollment in California.

Hartnell College experienced many changes over the course of their exciting history which covers the post World War I depression, the first year of prohibition, and ratification of Woman's Suffrage. The survival of the college during these tumultuous times illustrates the strength and character of such a school designed and destined to provide equal opportunity for education to all. With the addition of sports programs, social clubs, student government, a separate building for the college, and an expanded student enrollment that included students from the Monterey Peninsula as well as King City and Watsonville, the educational organization was complete. Many of the accomplishments and developments of the school came under the exceptional leadership of John B. Lemos, who was president, registrar and teacher from 1943 until his death in 1954.

I would like to take this opportunity to commend all the teachers, administrators and staff that have helped make Hartnell College such a tremendous success over the years. Such success is represented by the many regional, State and national awards the college has garnered. Without the dedication of our teachers and our colleges, we cannot provide the sound education necessary to secure the leadership of tomorrow. Our youth are our future and we have an obligation and a responsibility to ensure that they are educated and skilled in order to face the great challenges ahead for this country.

As chairman of the House Budget Committee, you can be sure that I will continue to work for education funding in order to meet our schools' and students' needs. I know that I can depend on Hartnell College, as a leader of community colleges in the State of California, to continue to provide the critical and excellent education resources that has served this Salinas Valley community for 70 years.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me now in congratulating Hartnell College for its seven decades of commitment to outstanding education achievement. It is with great pride and respect that I pay tribute to the truly outstanding Hartnell College on its 70th anniversary.

THE GLORIES OF JAZZ

HON. MIKE ESPY

OF MISSISSIPPI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. ESPY. Mr. Speaker, Americans should be very proud of the music created by Duke Ellington, Count Basie, Louis Armstrong, Jimmie Lunceford, Dizzy Gillespie, Miles Davis and other brilliant artists.

I am particularly proud of the contributions of several of Mississippi's jazz artists such as Milt Hinton of Vicksburg, Al Fielder of Meridian, Malachi Savors of Lexington, Mose Allison of Tippo, Oliver Sain of Dundee, Mulgrew Miller of Greenwood, Teddy Edwards and Richard Brown of Jackson, and the Sweethearts of Rhythm of Piney Woods School.

This music, growing out of the African-American experience, is known around the world as one of America's greatest cultural exports.

I would like to see the Federal Government support the preservation and presentation of this great music more adequately than it has. Of the Federal agencies working in jazz, one that is working especially hard in this area is the Smithsonian Institution. They are working to preserve and catalog the enormous Duke Ellington Collection and make it available through exhibitions, public programs and other means.

Now is the time, I believe, for Congress to enable the Smithsonian to move beyond the Duke Ellington Collection. There are two specific moves we should, I believe, support.

The first involves publishing the great classics of jazz. How many Americans know that currently you cannot buy this music? Because of this lack, the music cannot be performed or studied. The Smithsonian's National Museum of American History is working on a project to get definitive editions of this music into the hands of high schools, colleges, and professional musicians. The sum of $86,000 in fiscal year 1991 would make an enormous difference for this important undertaking.

The second involves presenting masterful performances of this music for the American people. If Congress appropriates $242,000 in fiscal year 1991, a Smithsonian Jazz Masterworks Orchestra could be established. It would, I understand, present concerts of the great masters—those published in the Jazz Masterworks Editions series, and others.

I understand that the Government of France supports a French National Jazz Orchestra with about $1 million per year. The sum requested by the Smithsonian is, by comparison, a very modest figure. It is, further, a figure that pales by comparison with what a single piece of military equipment can cost.

Both of these projects will address not only the genius of men like Ellington and Gillespie, and the glories of jazz, but also the richness of African-American culture, and the cultural diversity of America. That's why I think it is important that we support these very positive steps toward recognizing this music in all its importance and value.

FAMILY SUPPORT NETWORK OF THE AMERICAN LEGION

HON. G.V. (SONNY) MONTGOMERY

OF MISSISSIPPI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to inform my colleagues of a new national program initiated by the American Legion, the Nation's largest veterans' service organization, to augment Department of Defense support services for the families of our military personnel deployed to the Persian Gulf region as well as those called up to fill positions here in the United States.

The family support network of the American Legion provides a toll-free telephone number—1-800-786-0901—which serves as an emergency action line for military families to turn to for assistance. Using state-of-the-art technology, the confidential requests are categorized, prioritized and referred to local American Legion posts and units for appropriate follow-up by volunteers.

American Legion departments maintain close contact with National Guard family program coordinators in every State and work hand-in-hand with them to avoid duplication of services. Each American Legion State headquarters coordinates and customizes its efforts to meet the needs of the affected communities within its jurisdiction.

Mr. Speaker, I know my colleagues will join with me to once again applaud the American Legion for its continuing commitment to making certain that our defenders, both past and present, receive prompt and compassionate assistance.

DR. E. DONNALL THOMAS—PIONEER OF MARROW TRANSPLANTS—HONORED WITH NOBEL PRIZE FOR MEDICINE

HON. C.W. BILL YOUNG

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, the Nobel Prize Committee has bestowed its highest honor in medicine this year to Dr. E. Donnall Thomas, the doctor who was a pioneer in discovering and perfecting the technique of marrow transplantation.

Over the past 5 years, I have risen many times to urge support for the National Marrow Donor Program, a modern medical miracle that gives the living gift of life to seriously ill children and adults who otherwise would have no hope.

Without the work of Dr. Thomas, his colleagues, and students he has worked with and inspired, there would be no National Marrow Donor Program and there would be no hope for thousands upon thousands of people who are alive today because a marrow transplant cured them of leukemia, cancer, immune deficiencies, or one of more than 60 other diseases treated today through marrow transplantation.

In making its award, the Nobel Prize Committee honored Dr. Thomas for "paving the way for transplantation in man" through his work of the past 40 years. Dr. Thomas began his research into marrow transplantation in the 1950's while at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In 1956, he was the first to show that marrow could be safely transplanted into a human patient. Soon after, he was the first to treat acute leukemia patients with marrow transplantation.

Much of his work in the field was done at the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center at the University of Seattle in Washington. As the first director of the oncology program there, he established what is today the foremost marrow transplantation program anywhere in the world.

With the seed planted by Dr. Thomas 40 years ago, marrow transplantation is now on the threshold of becoming a treatment and cure for many illnesses that were thought incurable just a short time ago. Breast cancer, bone cancer, a variety of solid tumors, sickle cell anemia, and AIDs are just a few of other many diseases on the verge of being treated with a marrow infusion.

Dr. Thomas also was a founding board member of the National Marrow Donor Program. This program now is the key which will move the marrow transplant procedure forward to offer hope for so many seriously ill people throughout the world.

Mr. Speaker, the Nobel Prize is one of the highest honors awarded in the field of medicine and in the case of Dr. Thomas appropriately recognizes the magnitude and impact of his lifetime of research to help all of mankind. This recognition of his work will spur even greater interest, knowledge, and support throughout the world in marrow transplantation. Through the work begun by Dr. Thomas, researchers are now able to combat some of the most terrible diseases known to man. The Nobel Prize is a great honor for a dedicated man of medicine and science—one equalled only by the knowledge that hope abounds and lives are saved as the result of his work and research.

Congratulations and God bless Dr. Thomas and the many other dedicated doctors, researchers, and scientists like him who have contributed and are contributing so much for all of us.

TRIBUTE TO THE HONORABLE CHIEF JUDGE ROBINSON O. EVERETT

HON. J. ALEX McMILLAN

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. Speaker, it is my honor to bring to your attention the retirement of the Honorable Robinson O. Everett, who has served as the chief judge of the U.S. Court of Military Appeals for more than a decade. His innovative ideas, enthusiasm, and exceptional leadership–have proven to be a tremendous asset to our Nation. He deserves both recognition and praise from the Congress and the American people.

Judge Everett attended both the University of North Carolina and Harvard University, graduating from Harvard magna cum laude. He continued his education at Harvard Law School where he received a law degree and again graduated with high honors. He has served continuously on the Duke University law faculty for over 35 years and was tenured in 1967.

From 1961 to 1964, Judge Everett acted as special counsel to the Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary. His active participation in extensive studies and hearings assisted in the enactment of the Military Justice Act of 1968.

He has written numerous essays and articles, some of which have broken new ground in some of the most difficult issues regarding military and constitutional law. Other literary contributions include his published text book entitled "Military Justice in the Armed Forces of the United States," and "Law and Contemporary Problems" for which he was associate editor.

Judge Everett's tremendous contribution during his 10-year term as chief judge has made the U.S. Military Court of Appeals one of the most respected and innovative courts in our Nation today. It is not surprising that his exemplary leadership and dedication has led it to become one of the most widely used courts in America as well.

Within 1 year of his arrival, he had revolutionized the court's docketing system by switching to an electronic computerized system. This not only reduced costs, but vastly improved accessibility and efficiency. Ultimately, the court's ability to serve the people was vastly improved.

Judge Everett played an active role in education throughout his career. Especially notable is his devotion to improving the professional skills of both military and civilian lawyers. He has reshaped, created, and participated in various educational activities intent on teaching the skills necessary for appellate court practice. He was responsible for the first videotaped training programs, documentaries, and conferences which proved to be a tremendous innovative accomplishment in education for law students as well as practitioners around the country.

Judge Everett extended his efforts beyond the law profession in order to educate the public in the fairness and progressiveness of military law. He frequently lent his time to speak to various groups, anxious to emphasize the importance and improve the public's understanding of military justice.

Perhaps his most extraordinary achievements, in education are those involving the youth of our Nation. Through various activities, Judge Everett was successful in promoting awareness and understanding among students all over the country. Under his direction, the national student law day project won a first-place award in the American Bar Association's 1987 Law Day USA Competition. Due to his further influence and enthusiasm, school students nationwide began to visit courthouses throughout the United States. Meeting with judges and court officials provided a valuable experience for young students, sparking interest and knowledge of a very important part of our Nation's government.

Judge Everett was married in 1966 to Linda McGregor; and they have three sons, Robinson, Jr., Greg, and Luke. They must be very proud of his tremendous achievements and contributions which have not gone unrewarded. He has been recognized and honored by numerous organizations around the country.

So I rise today to salute an outstanding citizen and model educator, the Honorable Chief Judge Robinson O. Everett.

HELMSLEY THEORY OF TAXATION EMBRACED BY ADMINISTRATION

HON. ANDREW JACOBS, JR.

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, the following sentence was published in an Associated Press story by the Indianapolis Star on October 15, 1990. It fairly well delineates the Leona Helmsley theory of taxation embraced by the current national administration:

> WASHINGTON, D.C., October 14—* * * the Bush Administration is violently opposed to a Democratic plan for a large increase in the top tax rates paid by the wealthiest Americans.

Of course, the administration has had no trouble at all supporting a 10- or 12-cent increase in the gasoline tax, which ordinary workers have to pay. Nor does the national administration have any objections to diverting the new gasoline tax away from the place it belongs, the highway trust fund, to help pay for general government spending.

INTRODUCTION OF THE MISSOURI RIVER BASIN GOVERNING COUNCIL ESTABLISHMENT ACT OF 1990

HON. BYRON L. DORGAN

OF NORTH DAKOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased today to introduce legislation that would improve the management of the waters of the Missouri River basin and the main stem dams on the Missouri River. The bill would establish a council to govern the operation of the Missouri River basin dams. It would affect only the Missouri River basin. The council would be composed of representatives from the basin States and would work with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to write operating plans for the dams on the Missouri River. This legislation establishes a procedure to resolve conflicts that have arisen over water use in the basin.

The Pick-Sloan Missouri River project was authorized over 40 years ago. At the time, Congress envisioned a single project-ultimate development system providing flood control, irrigation, navigation, and hydroelectric power for the basin. The Pick-Sloan plan promised economic development to the region, with plans for nearly 5,000,000 acres of irrigation development, cheap power, and a bustling navigation industry. Everyone would benefit. Montana, North Dakota, and South Dakota gladly donated over 1½ million acres of fertile cropland.

People changed, priorities changed, plans changed. The anticipated development never occurred. But other industries, also authorized under the project, did develop with the investment of thousands and thousands of dollars in State and private funds. In the upper basin, economic benefits from the growth of recreation and fishery industries replaced undelivered irrigation development.

But the Corps of Engineers has failed to review these changes and to recognize the economic importance of these industries in their management of the Missouri River. Drought during the last few years has brought to a head differences between the basin States needs and the corps' free-wheeling management of the dams.

Lack of runoff from the mountains in Montana and insufficient rain have caused water shortages in the main stem reservoirs and limited water flow in the region. Despite pleas from Governors, the corps has continued full service water flows to support a $14 million navigation industry at the expense of a $60 to $70 million recreation industry. At North Dakota's Lake Sakakawea, water levels have dropped 30 feet and water storage is down forty percent. Boat ramps extend into mud. Limits have been placed on fish catches.

This spring the Governors of Montana, North Dakota, and South Dakota were forced to sue the corps in Federal court to temporarily reduce water flows and protect their spawning fish. The corps argued that their activities were not subject to judicial review, not that their management decisions could be justified. The court did not address the central issue in this suit; it only declared the case moot months later. The fact is, the Federal courts are not equipped to resolve the conflicts that have arisen between the interests in the Missouri River basin. The courts are not the place to settle these disputes. A process that involves the States must be established.

It is time to draw rein on the corps. I propose to make the corps subject to review through a process which gives the States directly affected by its management of this resource a greater say.

We have already devised ways of doing this for other regions which have experienced similar problems. In the Pacific Northwest where competing interests vie for shares of the Columbia River water, Congress created the Northwest Power Planning Council [NPPC] to resolve these conflicts. State representatives comprise the Council. The NPPC develops management plans for the Columbia River dams in a public process. I have adapted this concept for use in the Missouri River basin.

This bill would establish a governing council, composed of representatives of the 40 basin States, the Native American tribes, and the Secretary of the Army, to oversee the operating plans for the dams on the Missouri River. The council will share responsibility for running the project with the corps and will be required to obtain public comments. Authorized purposes remain unchanged.

No longer will all the authority rest with the corps. The governing council will make the planning process public, with opportunities for participation by all interests. The corps will be forced to listen to the council, not merely pay lip service to those interests as they do today. The States will again have jurisdiction over their water.

The council I am proposing is not advisory—it will have real authority. An advisory council is clearly ineffective and would not add anything to the present situation. Advisory bodies have already been established by the Missouri River basin States. These existing advisory bodies have proven that the States can work together and develop a consensus, but current law provides no obligation to the corps to heed their advice.

Without action by Congress to create an avenue for airing and resolving conflicts over water use, the controversy will continue to end up in the courts—an arena not equipped to address the matter of water allocation. The establishment of a governing council provides an equitable process for deciding how to manage the river. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

A SALUTE TO PETER R. NORWOOD

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to Peter Norwood, a man who has expended his time and talent in an unceasing effort to help the young people of Brooklyn, NY.

Currently, Peter Norwood is the director of security at the Brooklyn Navy Yard Development Corp. After graduating from Boys High School he served in the U.S. Army, 82d Airborne Division. After his stint with the Armed Forces, he joined the New York City Police Department. While serving as a police officer, he continued his education, earning a bachelor's degree in human behavior and criminal justice from the New York Institute of Technology.

Norwood quickly rose to the rank of detective. While working in this capacity, he gained expertise in all facets of police work. After being promoted to the rank of sergeant, Norwood was assigned to the community affairs division, where he worked with and trained young adults under the auspices of the Model Cities Program.

Following his service with the CAD, Norwood was appointed to serve in the office of the mayor, where he managed the mayor's emergency unit. As the director of this prestigious unit, Norwood was instrumental in resolving community conflicts by bringing together diverse groups and serving as a liaison between the city's varied communities and the government.

After 24 years of dedicated service to the people of the city of New York, Norwood was appointed deputy commissioner. During his tenure he worked with senior citizens, young people, youths at risk, the homeless and many other groups.

In addition to his demanding and successful career, Peter has devoted time to many civic organizations including the Boy Scouts of America. He has held leadership positions in the community including president of the Mid Manhattan NAACP. Moreover, he has served on many boards including the New York State Division for Youth and the Navy Yard Boys and Girls Club.

Peter has been happily married to Marie for 33 years, is the father of two daughters, Sharon and Lori, and the proud grandfather of two.

HAPPY 65TH BIRTHDAY, GRAND OLE OPRY

HON. BOB CLEMENT

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. CLEMENT. Mr. Speaker, this weekend, country music fans everywhere joined in celebrating the 65th birthday of the Grand Ole Opry.

From Philadelphia to Fiji, people know that the Grand Ole Opry is synonymous with country music. How it earned that reputation—indeed, how it became the longest running radio show in the world is quite a tale.

It began on the night of November 28, 1925, when a young announcer on Nashville Radio Station WSM—650 on the AM dial—introduced an 80-year-old fiddle player, Uncle Jimmy Thompson, as the first performer on a new show called "The WSM Barn Dance."

The announcer was George D. Hay, a former newspaperman who labeled himself "the solemn old judge" but in actuality he was neither old nor a judge. Somehow, Hay knew he had started a good thing, but just how good it was he had no way of knowing.

Now, 65 years later, the show Hay started is still going strong. Along the way, it became the foundation for a huge entertainment complex, Opryland U.S.A., and led the way for Nashville to become "Music City."

WSM was owned then by the National Life and Accident Insurance Co. and the studio where Hay and Uncle Jimmy Thompson started everything was on the fifth floor of the insurance company's building in downtown Nashville. Soon, the show's home and name were changed.

As Hay recalled it, the WSM Barn Dance followed an NBC network program on Saturday nights called "The Music Appreciation Hour." One night in 1927, Hay announced, "For the past hour, we have been listening to music taken from Grand opera, but now we will present 'The Grand Ole Opry.'" The name stuck.

Crowds of people came to the studio and stood in the corridors, just be where the show originated. WSM decided to move the Opry to its own home, studio C, so audience reaction could be added to the program. Studio C held 500 enthusiastic country music fans.

The crowds kept growing. The Opry moved again, this time to the Hillsboro Theatre in Southwest Nashville and then again to the Dixie Tabernacle in east Nashville.

In July 1939, it moved to the newly constructed War Memorial Auditorium in downtown Nashville. In an effort to curb the crowds, an admission fee of 25 cents was charged, but it failed to deter anyone. So, in 1943, the Opry moved again, this time to the Ryman Auditorium.

The Ryman Auditorium was built by a riverboat captain, Tom Ryman, in 1892 in gratitude to a preacher who had shown Ryman the light. Ryman first encountered the preacher when he attended a tent revival intent on disrupting it. As it turned out, it was the preacher who prevailed.

The auditorium left much to be desired in the way of comfort and convenience, but Opry fans didn't seem to mind. The Ryman seated 3,000 people and for three decades it was the Opry's home.

When the crowds grew too large for a single performance, a second Saturday night show was added. Still, long lines of fans braved all types of weather to see string bands like the Gully Jumpers, the Fruit Jar Drinkers, and the Crook Brothers.

Until 1938, the music was mostly instrumental. Then, a young man from east Tennessee named Roy Acuff stepped on stage with his Smoky Mountain Boys with songs such as "The Wabash Cannonball" and "The Great Speckled Bird." Singing found its place with the picking. Soon, singers like Ernest Tubbs, Cowboy Copas, and Hank Williams were regulars.

In 1939, NBC radio began carrying a portion of the Opry as a network show. During the 1940's and 1950's, performers like Lester Flatt and Earl Scruggs, Hank Snow, Ray Price, Marty Robbins, Kitty Wells, Johnny Cash, George Morgan, Grandpa Jones, Bill Anderson, and Porter Waggoner became Saturday night favorities across the country.

In the 1960's, such stars as Loretta Lynn, Dottie West, Connie Smith, Jack Greene, and Jim Ed Brown joined the Grand Ole Opry family.

While the Opry's popularity grew, the Ryman deteriorated. Once again, the solution was to move. This time the destination was the newly constructed Grand Ole Opry House, a 4,400-seat auditorium that was to become the centerpiece for an entertainment complex known as "Opryland U.S.A." Joining the Opry at Opryland are the Opryland Showpark, the Opryland Hotel, the General Jackson Showboat, the facilities of WSM–AM and WSM–FM, and the facilities of the Nashville Network, a cable television network reaching millions of viewers throughout the United States and Canada.

The Opry said goodbye to the Ryman Auditorium on Friday, March 15, 1974. The next night, President Richard Nixon joined Roy Acuff on stage at the Grand Ole Opry House. To keep touch with the traditions of the Ryman Auditorium, an 8-foot circle of hardwood was taken from the Ryman stage and placed center stage at the Opry House.

Today, there are as many as eight performances of the Opry during the peak summer tourist months—two shows each on Friday and Saturday nights, plus matinees on Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday, and Sunday.

Mr. Speaker, the magic continues. Approximately 60 performers are members of the Opry. Among them are Dolly Parton, Barbara Mandrell, Tom T. Hall, Ricky Skaggs, and Reba McEntire. Just last week, Garth Brooks was inducted as the newest member.

Each year, more than a million people make pilgrimages to Nashville to hear these and other artists perform in the "Mother Church" of country music. As the Representative of the Opry here in the Congress, when I have out-of-town guests visiting Nashville I try to assure that they see a performance at the Opry. It is a show like none other.

"I've thought many times that if you sat down to design a successful show, you probably would do everything just the opposite of the way we do," says Hal Durham, the Opry's general manager. "I can't conceive of anyone setting out to design a show that has no rehearsals. We don't even know more than 48 hours in advance who is going to appear. We have no advance promotion of the artists our audiences are going to see, and we continually interrupt the whole show for commercials."

Mr. Speaker, there is an excitement to live radio found nowhere else. The solemn old judge himself, George D. Hay, summed it up when he said. "The Grand Ole Opry is as simple as sunshine. It has a universal appeal because it is built upon good will, and with folk music it expresses the heartbeat of a large percentage of Americans who labor for a living."

Happy 65th birthday, Grand Ole Opry. I am proud to add my voice to the millions of Americans singing to your continued success.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to include the Grand Ole Opry program for this past weekend's 65th anniversary shows.

FORTUNE MAGAZINE NAMES SALT LAKE CITY AMERICA'S BEST CITY FOR BUSINESS

HON. WAYNE OWENS

OF UTAH

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. OWENS of Utah. Mr. Speaker, around the Nation, many Americans believe Salt Lake City is still a desert cowtown lost between the 19th and 20th centuries.

Mr. Speaker, today folks will be interested to learn that Salt Lake City has arrived as the model American city to do business in. In its current edition, Fortune magazine, one of the premier barometers for the business community, has named Salt Lake City as the Nation's best city to move a business to. And it cites a wealth of reasons.

Salt Lake City affords new businesses with an outstanding pool of potential workers. The State symbol of Utah is the beehive because Utahns are endowed with strong work ethic. Utah spends heavily on education. The result is a well-prepared work force and one with the highest literacy rate in America. Salt Lake County is growing with a population of 1.1 million. Growth over the next 5 years is estimated at 6 percent. That translates into a ready supply of employees for any corporation contemplating expansion in Salt Lake.

Fortune magazine says Salt Lake City rates an A+ in all these critical areas. Corporate America has also recognized the benefits of Salt Lake. McDonnell Douglas, which is reducing its worldwide work force by 17,000, is increasing personnel by 900 in Salt Lake. Sear's Discover Card has located its largest operations facility there. American Express' Travelers Cheque Operations Center terms its Salt Lake facility as a model of high productivity.

Local government has played a part in this emergency by actively courting corporations to explore opportunities in Salt Lake. A $500 million redevelopment plan is scheduled to the city's downtown business district. And aside from a large pool of educated workers, the quality of Salt Lake City's lifestyle, with world class ski resorts and the Great Salt Lake short distances away, rivals that of any region nationwide. In fact, tourism is Utah's fastest growing industry.

Mr. Speaker, for America's corporate community the message from its most respected opinion leaders is clear. If you want to grow, improve or expand your business, come to Salt Lake.

IRAQ AND THE PLO

HON. MEL LEVINE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, October 15, 1990

Mr. LEVINE of California. Mr. Speaker, at a time when international attention is focused on the unprovoked Iraqi aggression against Kuwait, it is important that the unholy alliance between Iraq and the PLO not be overlooked. Everyone who is concerned about moving the Middle East peace process forward should note this most unfavorable development. PLO officials have refused to condemn Saddam Hussein's aggression against Kuwait and have publicly expressed solidarity with the Iraqi dictator. This support raises questions as to the PLO's sincerity in seeking peace with Israel as it associates itself with the forces of violence and radicalism in the region. The Iraq-PLO alliance is an impediment to peace and underscores the need for a political solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict which includes reliable brokers for peace.

The PLO Watch, published by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, chronicles this unholy alliance in its most recent issue.

I enter it into the RECORD and I urge my colleagues to take a few moments to study this informative and insightful document:

[From the PLO Watch, October 1990]

IRAQ AND THE PLO: AN UNHOLY ALLIANCE

(As the international community unites in an unprecedented chorus of outrage against the naked aggression of Saddam Hussein, the PLO and many Palestinian residents of the territories have unabashedly supported the Iraqi tyrant, hailing him as a modern hero. Although some PLO officials have stated that they do not support Iraq's occupation and annexation of Kuwait, they have refused to condemn the Iraqi leader and the prevailing sentiment is one of fraternity with Saddam Hussein. Arafat, senior PLO officials and Palestinians in the territories have used the current crisis to unleash virulent hostility and threats of physical violence against the United States and Israel. The depth of this solidarity with Iraq underscores once again the PLO's unwillingness to disassociate itself from the forces of violence and radicalism in the Middle East and undergo substantive change.)

I. FATAH'S GENERAL SUPPORT FOR IRAQI RADICALISM

For some time now, PLO chairman Yasir Arafat has been leading the PLO closer and closer to Iraq and the forces of radicalism in the Arab world. In the months prior to the Iraqi invasion, Arafat greatly increased the PLO's political and military presence in Baghdad, expanded cooperation with the Iraqi leader and frequently appeared alongside him at major Arab meetings and demonstrations. Following Saddam's infamous threat to annihilate Israel with chemical weapons, Arafat stated:

"Saddam's speech brings forth the desire of the Arab nation not to be influenced by threats or provocations as well as its determination to stand by the challenges and to document history in letters of lights and fire. We say to the brother and leader Saddam Hussein—go forward with God's blessing. The heart of the Arab nations are with you and around you until Arab victory soars with the flags of the Arab victory march." (Iraqi News Agency, 4/3/90 in FBIS, 4/4/90)

II. FATAH'S RESPONSE TO IRAQ'S INVASION AND SEIZURE OF KUWAIT

According to sources in London, the PLO supplied Iraq with intelligence information about Kuwait to help in the logistical planning of the invasion. (Jerusalem Post, 8/8/90). Since the invasion and seizure of Kuwait, Arafat and senior PLO officials have met with Saddam and sent him messages of solidarity. On August 6, Iraqi television showed Yasir Arafat in an embrace with Saddam Hussein.

At the Arab League Foreign Ministers meeting immediately after the Iraqi invasion, senior PLO official Farouk Khaddoumi was reported to have sought to prevent a condemnation of Iraqi actions and disassociated the PLO from the condemnation issued. (Washington Post, 9/25/90). According to media reports on August 5, the PLO voted against the League's resolution. Later, however, the PLO denied having voted in the negative and claimed that it abstained.

At the August 10 meeting of the Arab League heads of state, Arafat was reported to have "moved from delegation to delegation, hand in hand with Tariq Aziz, the Iraqi foreign minister, who was openly threatening some gulf and other Arab delegates that Iraq would turn them upside down." (al-Ahram editor Ibrahim Nafei as reported in Near East Report, 8/20/90). The Arab League voted 12-3 to send troops to the Gulf to protect Saudi Arabia with the PLO, Iraq and Libya in opposition. The PLO representative in Amman, Al-Tayyib Abd-al Rahim, dispelled any confusion about how the PLO voted. The Jordanian News Agency reported that he said, "that statements attributed to an official Palestinian source, to the effect that the PLO abstained and did not vote against the resolutions of the recent summit in Cairo, are unfounded. The PLO's position is clear to everyone." (Amman, al-Ra'y, 8/13/90 in FBIS, 8/16/90)

The PLO has utilized Iraqi aggression as another vehicle with which to express its opposition to Israel and the United States. On the occasion of the 1000th day of the Palestinian uprising, Arafat clearly stated his position:

"We now ask this question to those who inquire about the Palestinian position. We ask: Where does Israel stand in this confrontation . . . We can only be in the trench hostile to Zionism and its imperialist allies who are today mobilizing their tanks, flares, and their advanced and sophisticated war machine against our Arab nation . . ." (Amman, Sawt al-Sha'b, 9/4/90 in FBIS, 9/5/90)

PLO Foreign Minister Farouk Khaddoumi took the opportunity to reaffirm the PLO's unswerving commitment to armed struggle:

PLO Foreign Minister Farouk Kaddoumi took the opportunity to reaffirm the PLO's unswerving commitment to armed struggle:

"The state of Palestine has stated most clearly that it firmly stands alongside Iraq against all possibilities of aggression against the Arab nation . . . Palestine and the Palestinian people, through their daily acts, affirm unwavering determination to continue armed struggle to liberate their land and holy places from Zionism, Israel, and U.S. imperialism." (Baghdad Domestic Service, 8/24/90 in FBIS, 8/27/90)

Muhammad Milhem, senior aide to Arafat, head of the PLO's Occupied Lands Department and member of the PLO Executive Committee stated:

". . . Saddam Hussein is our national hero . . . We will fight until the American ships sink in the waters of the Gulf, just as our Arab forefathers fought 1,000 years ago against the crusaders . . . This is a warning! . . . There is no space for Israel . . . Kuwait is an integral part of Iraq . . ." (Associated Press, 8/23/90 as reported by the Embassy of Israel, Washington, D.C., 9/10/90)

In a broadcast over PLO radio, the PLO expressed its readiness to fight the United States and Israel:

"The Palestinians, the Iraqis, the Jordanians, the Yemenis, and all the Arabs, have a history that qualifies them to say no in the face of this ugly American, this U.S. bestiality . . . it uses all its terrorism to bring down the price of oil . . . It has no deterrent whatsoever regarding the annihilation of the people of Iraq . . . We declare that we are against the U.S. bestiality . . . We and the people of Iraq and our Arab nation are ready to fight this fierce hyena and kill it, and kill its wanton Zionist ally." (Baghdad Voice of the PLO, 9/14/90 in FBIS, 9/17/90)

The PLO has also threatened fellow Arabs who waver from their commitment to the PLO. Following Quatar's expulsion of a number of PLO diplomats and an official statement which reaffirmed Qatar's commitment to the Palestinian cause without mention of the PLO, PLO radio broadcast the following report with the title "Rulers of Qatar, Stop at Your Limits":

"It seems that some people do not learn from all the lessons . . . It seems that those people in certain Gulf states, and specifically, in the superpower called the State of Qatar, do not know themselves . . . we know that only a few years ago there was nothing on the geographic map called the State of Qatar, Qataris know, even more than we do, that it was the Palestinians who built them an entity out of nothingness and from the dead desert and the salty sea. The Palestinians are not only something. They are the legend of the age; and, they are vultures when they choose to be vultures. They also know how to return a stronger blow for any blow dealt to them. They also know how to respond to their expulsion . . . we tell Qatar's rulers . . . the PLO cannot be punished and no one can infringe on the PLO . . . Beware. Do not harm the people of Palestine . . . Stop at your limits." (Baghdad Voice of the PLO, 9/13/90 in FBIS, 9/14/90)

III. OTHER VOICES IN THE PLO

Other constituent PLO factions have openly sided with Iraq and have called on their supporters to strike at the United States and Israel. George Habash, head of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) defended Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on the grounds that "the Gulf countries were trying to smother it." (Paris, Agence France Presse, 9/3/90 in FBIS, 9/6/90). Habash, who urged Palestinians to fight on the side of Iraq, said:

"It is not enough to give verbal support . . . they must fight and struggle with all means at their disposal alongside Iraq." (Jerusalem Post, 9/15/90) And: "As the PFLP, we can only say to the Iraqi people and army that we stand in the same trench as their leaders to defend that country's freedom and the Arab nation's pride . . . The military operations against the enemy must continue, particularly now . . . [I call on] all Arab liberation movements to strike U.S. and western interests." (Paris, Le Monde, 9/5/90 in FBIS, 9/6/90)

At a meeting of Arab radicals convened in Amman to express solidarity with Saddam Hussein, Habash proclaimed:

"We are meeting here to tell the American Administration: Leave us alone, or the Arab world will be a graveyard for your soldiers. We are living in a world run by power. Anyone who wants to win his legitimate rights, he has to take them with power." (New York Times, 9/16/90)

Habash also took the opportunity at the meeting to restate his longstanding opposition to the existence of the state of Israel:

"Arab revolutionary legitimacy means that all Palestine is Arab and that the Israelis have no right to one inch of our land; Arab legitimacy means that the Arabs are one nation; Arab legitimacy means that the Arab oil is for the Arab people . . ." (Christian Science Monitor 9/17/90)

Palestine Liberation Front (PLF) head Abu Abbas, mastermind of the Achille Lauro hijacking in 1985 and the foiled seaborne massacre on Israeli beaches in May 1990, unequivocally stated his loyalties as well:

"We strongly support him in his pan-Arab battle and consequently, we will do our duty to support him in this battle. We believe that Saddam Hussein represents the pan-Arab national conscience in the confrontation against the enemy . . . we will stand on the side of Iraq and we'll support the front that is working for the liberation of the Arab individual . . . we are fighting for the liberation of Palestine from Zionist colonialism . . . On our part, we should escalate the struggle against Israel. And Arab forces in various places should intensify their struggle against their immediate enemies in order to achieve their direct objectives. Mubarak and the Arab governments which have cooperated with the United States should be overthrown." (CNN "Prime News" interview, 9/9/90) And: "I think Saddam will win, and we will win as Arabs. When we support Iraq, we support our case as Palestinians." (Wall Street Journal, 9/10/90)

Abbas has commanded his supporters to engage in violence in the current crisis:

"We have issued instructions and combat orders to PLF combatants, members, and supporters asking them to immediately embark on attacking and hitting U.S. and Western interests, as well as the interests of those allied with the United States and Western Powers inside and outside the Arab homeland . . . The accomplishments scored by militant leader Saddam Hussein and the Iraqi citizen who was instrumental in effecting this pan-Arab resurgence is a cause for real pride . . . The real battle against Zionism and its ally, the United States, as well as the traitors of this nation, has begun here in Baghdad. Thanks to the revolutionary action and pan-Arab atmosphere brought about by Iraq, the road to Palestine has been shortened . . . the Palestinian . . . must attack all forms of Zionist and U.S. occupation. He must attack all agents and brokers in our region." (Baghdad, al-Jumhuriya, 8/13/90 in FBIS, 8/16/90) And: "We, in performance of our national and pan-Arab role, declare to our Palestinian people and nation that we will strike at U.S. and colonial interests once a foreign soldier sets foot in Arab lands . . . O honest comrades and strugglers everywhere . . . Strike with your strong arms at all U.S. interests. Open fire at the enemies of our nation everywhere. Make the earth shake under the feet of the invaders and their henchmen." (Baghdad, Iraqi News Agency, 8/8/90. and 8/11/90 in FBIS, 8/9/90 and 8/13/90)

In Jerusalem, the Popular Struggle Front (PSF) issued a leaflet addressed to Saddam Hussein:

"Greeting from Palestine, the intifada and the stories of the children . . . We are very much concerned by the situation fabricated by the imperialists preparing aggression against our brother country Iraq to end its national policy and effective Arab solidarity against imperialism, Zionism and Zionist interests. Brother revolutionary, we in the Popular Struggle Front in the State of Palestine support you and back your unification policy based on Arab nationalism to protect the right of the Arab peoples. We condemn those who are serving as trumpets for the U.S." (Jerusalem Post, 8/10/90)

IV. PALESTINIAN SUPPORT IN THE TERRITORIES.

In the Israeli-administered territories, Palestinians of all walks of life have fervently rallied around the Iraqi despot. According to public opinion polls, more then 80 percent of Palestinians favor Saddam's actions. (Washington Times, 8/21/90). West Bank journalist Daoud Kuttab recently explained:

"On every level, on every side among the Palestinians, there is unprecedented support for Iraq and opposition to the Americans. Everyone is joining together—Islamic fundamentalist, leftists, nationalists, country people from the villages, Christians, regular Moslems. Every Palestinian is united." (Newsday, 8/27/90)

The intifada leadership sent a congratulatory telegram to Saddam after his troops occupied Kuwait. According to a report in the Egyptian daily al-Ahram, the telegram referred to the Iraqi invasion as "the first step toward the liberation of Palestine." (Washington Times, 8/20/90). An August leaflet of the uprising leadership expressed unequivocal support for Iraq and justified its invasion of Kuwait. It also attacked Egypt, Saudi Arabia, and the Gulf Emirates. (Yediot Aharonot, 8/17/90 in FBIS, 8/17/90). In a September leaflet, the uprising leadership called for a September 26 strike to express solidarity with Iraq. (Jerusalem Post, 9/15/90)

Palestinian residents of the territories have outspokenly expressed their support for Saddam Hussein through demonstrations. In the West Bank town of Jenin, 1000 Palestinians marched on August 12 shouting:

"Saddam, you hero, attack Israel with chemical weapons." (Associated Press as reported in Near East Report, 8/20/90)

At one particularly virulent pro-Saddam demonstration in the West Bank, demonstrators carried placards urging Hussein to "Gas the Zionists." (Time, 8/27/90)

V. EVALUATION OF THE STATUS OF THE PLO

In the wake of the Palestinian uprising in the territories and Arafat's December 1988 Geneva declarations, the PLO scored diplomatic gains in the international community. Despite an erosion of support following the foiled PLO terrorist attack on Israel's beaches this past May, Arafat continued to receive backing from many in the Arab world, the Israeli peace camp, and the European community. The PLO's alignment with Iraq in the current crisis appears to have delivered a near-fatal blow to this support.

Arafat and the PLO have been widely villified by Egyptian President Mubarak and the Egyptian press. Mr. Mubarak publicly stated that Arafat had lost his credibility and the semi-official government press in Cairo has characterized Arafat as a "traitor" with one columnist openly calling for his ouster. (Jerusalem Post, 9/3/90). One typical cartoon in the Egyptian daily al-Ahram depicted Arafat as a pair of Siamese twins with one head directed toward Kuwait carrying a sign saying "Vive taking territory by force" and the other head directed towards Jerusalem saying "Down with taking territory by force." (Newday, 9/9/90)

In the Gulf states, Arafat and the PLO have suffered great financial and diplomatic setbacks. Saudi Arabia is reported to have stopped the $72 million grants it was to have given to the PLO this year. (Washington Times, 8/30/90). Qatar is reported to have expelled 20 PLO officials since the Gulf crisis erupted. (Washington Times, 8/30/90)

Anti-PLO sentiment is particularly high in the United Arab Emirates, a major financial supporter of the PLO. As of the first week in September, the United Arab Emirates halted coverage of the Palestinian uprising in the media. (Christian Science Monitor, 9/10/90). One editorial in the UAE accused the PLO leadership of terrorizing "any one who tries to object to its policy . . . to criticize (its) practices . . . or serve the Palestinian cause by donating money independently of the PLO." (Pair, Agence France Presse in English, 9/15/90 in FBIS, 9/17/90). A group of Palestinian youths in the UAE issued a statement in a newspaper condemning Arafat because he has "led us from one setabck to another." (Christian Science Monitor, 9/10/90). Another editorial accused Arafat of sedition:

"Your problem is that you cannot distinguish between major historical junctures and minor tactics. Therefore, you have thought about the occupation of Kuwait in terms of customary tactics. Thus, we and the Palestinian people were forced to pay the price of this position . . . There is [sic] 400,000 Palestinians among us in Kuwait, whom, through your stand on the occupation of Kuwait, you have tried to incite and spur. You have also tried to incite and goad the Kuwaitis. You have tried to spread sedition, which is asleep. God damn him who stirs up seditions." (al-Shariqah, al-Khalij, 8/18/90 in FBIS, 8/24/90)

Disenchantment and disgust have taken root among longtime Israeli champions of the PLO in the Israeli academic, political and intellectual communities. Typical of the reaction of the Israeli peace camp is the following excerpt from an article written by Knesset member and outspoken PLO supporter Yossi Sarid:

"The PLO had dedicated the past two years to convincing Israelis and others that it has changed, that it has reconciled itself to the existence of the State of Israel and has abandoned terrorism. The PLO has kicked that bucket over . . . Pan-Arab slogans that glorify revolutionary regimes that treat human rights with contempt are immensely hypocritical. When such slogans are used by local Palestinian leaders one wonders to what extent they have internalized and assimilated the democratic values of Israel. . . . Until now I have sought out the Palestinian leadership, because I believed this was the only way to progress in the peace process. As far as I am concerned, they can now look for me." (Haaretz, 8/17/90 as reported in Wall Street Journal, 9/10/90)

Reassessment is taking place in Europe as well. Only a few days before the Iraqi invasion, Italian Foreign Minister Gianni de Michelis was in Israel reportedly pressuring Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir on the issue of Palestinian representation. After the invasion Mr. de Michelis said that if Arafat does not renounce his support for Saddam, Italy will "revise its attitude toward the PLO." (Wall Street Journal, 8/17/90). The British have suspended ministerial contacts with the PLO because of its support for Iraq and Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd has said that he would not authorize any further meetings with the PLO unless it dropped its support for Baghdad. (Jewish Telegraphic Agency, 9/7/90)

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules Committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Meetings scheduled for Tuesday, October 16, 1990, may be found in the Daily Digest of today's RECORD.
